FFA State Star Agribusiness Award Goes To Mark Korman

LINESVILLE (Crawford Co.) — When Mark Kornman was 13 years old, he started a hobby that skyrocked him into state FFA fame. Now 18 years old, Mark's hobby has evolved into a maple syrup business that caught the eye of judges for the Star Agribusiness award, the only one given in the state.

Mark said tapping maple sugar was a hobby that his uncle enjoyed. When he showed Mark how to tap maple sugar from trees that are 8-inches in diameter, Mark thought it was pretty neat.

Soon, Mark started tapping syrup for his own family. At first he used 25 taps, but he enjoyed it so much that he now has 950 taps. According to Mark, the average tree gets 25 taps. Mark rents trees for 25 cents a tap or gives the owner free maple syrup for the use of the tree.

When the taps began to produce more syrup than his family could use, he gave some to neighbors. As he started tapping more and more trees, Mark sold the maple syrup in 32-gallon bulk drums to businesses. Eventually he started canning it in gallon tins, one-half gallon,

New York State Dairy Princess Crowned

SYRACUSE, NY — Lorelei Crane from Bliss, New York in Wyoming County was crowned the 1992-93 New York State Dairy Princess on Tuesday. The 29th annual coronation was held at the Sheraton Inn in Syracuse, New York, sponsored by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC). As state princess, Crane received a $1,200 scholarship and becomes a leading spokesperson for New York's dairy industry in the upcoming year.

Tara Williamson of Greenwood, New York was named first Alternate State Princess. She received a $700 scholarship. Kerri Benson of New Lebanon, New York was selected as second Alternate State Princess. She

Ag Teachers Fight Agricultural Illiteracy

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Robert Lauffer did not grow up on a farm, however, he did work on a farm — for eight years.

Does he know farming?

Recently, Lauffer said that it seemed strange how many people, especially farmers, automatically equate knowledge of farming and agriculture with the choice of occupation by one's parents.

Lauffer knows better. As agriscience teacher at Garden Spot High School in New Holland, Lauffer's job is to teach agriculture.

And while that is his job, his goal is to instill "agricultural literacy" into all students across Pennsylvania, most of whom did not grow up on farms.

Through his and some others' efforts, more people are agreeing with and adopting that goal. There are fellow teachers and legislators who are like-minded, but the battle needs support from many others, he said.

For decades in the United States, agriculture has not been regarded by academia (outside of the agricultural colleges) as a subject by which literacy would even be questioned.

School curriculums seem to reflect a perspective of agriculture that it is not a highly important subject for study by anyone, except those who grew up on a farm.

Other than the "vo-ag" classes for the "farmer kids," no other courses offered in curriculums, even science, include any discussion of agriculture in anything but a cursory manner.

Lauffer and others are attempting to have that changed.

Small-Scale Pork Producers Need Professional Attitude

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
And
ANDY ANDREWS

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pork producers should be able to get through the year at least breaking even, but as an industry, recruiting employees and improving labor relations need to be addressed quickly.

Those assessments were given by several of the speakers who talked to hundreds of pork producers on Wednesday during the 1992 Keystone Pork Congress, held at the Penn Harris Inn in Camp Hill.

H. Louis Moore, Penn State agricultural economist, predicted hog prices in the 41-cent range, and probably a little lower would prevail, he said.

Moore is a well-known speaker and has addressed other livestock producer meetings this late winter and predicted a slow growth of the economy, and either a no-change or slight change for the agriculture prices.

Beef production and poultry production are high, he said, and the extra meat will keep down the demand for pork, even though pork isn't as high in abundance.

Pennsylvania production is projected to be about the same as last year, while the national production is estimated to increase several points over last year, indicating that production increases are happening outside of the state.

Delmarva Broiler Fryer

Feb. 19, 1992

Movement of ready-to-cook broiler fryers ranged light to fair, and about as expected for mid - week trading. Supplies of lighter sizes were barely adequate to close, heavier sizes were fully adequate. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 47 - 58 cents. Live supplies were adequate, with average live weights ranging desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were heavy. Trade sentiment was generally steady. In the parts complex, supplies of wings, and boneless skinless breast were adequate, whole breast were fully adequate and being pushed to clear, leg items were fully adequate.

N.E. Chicken Parts

Feb. 19, 1992

Trucklot buying interest was light and unaggressive. Boneless skinless breasts were fully adequate for the spotty buying interest. Whole breasts were in heavy supply and slow in clearing. Leg items were fully adedquate to burdensome with yellow leg quarters noted in the longest position. Wings were adequate at current price levels. Gizzards were in excess at several points.

New York & Philadelphia Frozen Eggs

Friday, February 14, 1992

Prices trended lower. Trading activity was spotty but improved as prices became increasingly competitive. Raw materials were usually available but breakers were cautious and continued to work with their regular commitments. Floor stocks were in good balance to easily handle current trade requirements.

National Egg Market

Feb. 19, 1992

Prices were lower in all areas except New England where brown egg prices were unchanged to lower. The market tone was generally steady on white eggs with some cautiousness in the Midwest and West Coast, and, in New England, the undertone was barely steady to weak. Demand in all areas was light to moderate, best where features were in progress or planned. Supplies were adequate to ample, offerings were limited, and asking prices were steady. Breakers provided a light demand for the generally adequate shell egg offerings. Live hen offerings were light to adequate for the unaggressive to moderate demand, and the trade sentiment was unsettled,a nd steady to weak.

Eastern PA & NJ Poultry

Feb. 18, 1992

Sales too few to report prices with values yet to be established for this week's trading. Offerings are currently limited to about adequate for desired running time. Demand moderate and unaggressive as sales into further processed channels are slow to develop even at lower price levels. Trade sentiment about steady.

CENTS PER LB., GENERALLY FOR SLAUGHTER THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

FEB. 24-MAR. 1, 1992

French Fry Friday, Feb. 28.

Feb 24, 1582, Pope Gregory XIII issues a papal bull correcting the Julian calendar which was 10 days in error at that time. (The Gregorian calendar is still in use today.) Feb 27, 1807, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow is born at Portland, Maine.. Feb. 29, 1704, The Deerfield Massacre. the village of Deerfield, Massachusetts, is attacked and burned by French and Indian warriors Mar. 1, 1780, Philadelphia becomes the first state to abolish slavery . It is easy to see, hard to foresee. — Benjamin Franklin

Ask the Old Farmer: Where did the name "Buzzards Bay" come from? M. B , Mass

Early explorers found the bay shore full of the nests of the osprey or fish-eagle Not knowing what the birds were, they called them buzzards

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Initially cold, then turning mild and rainy as the week begins. Mid-week brings a change to snow and seasonable temperatures through the weekend

Greater New York-New Jersey: Rainy and mild weather changes to freezing rain for the second half of the week. February's precipitation is 3.5", 0.5" above average.

Middle Atlantic Coastal: The week begins with intermittent rain and temperatures ranging from mild to seasonable Then more clouds and cooler with steady showers

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Rain begins the week, followed by sunshine and warmer temperatures, with some showers remaining in the north.

OPINION

FFA Leadership for a growing planet

This week FFA members from all over the country promoted FFA, agricultural education and the food and fiber industry.

This year's theme is FFA — Leadership for a Growing Planet. During FFA week and throughout the year, FFA chapters pursue activities which show that they are leading the effort for a better environment. Planting trees, starting community recycling efforts and restoring mining areas are just a few of the initiatives planned by various chapters across the country.

The week also provides FFA members in thousands of chapters across the U.S., Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands the chance to create awareness of and support for agricultural education and the FFA. Public service announcements at the local, state and national levels will help spread the message.

Agricultural education classes stress hands-on experience in diverse areas of agriculture. FFA activities provide leadership development, career training and award incentives for young people.

Lee Thurber, national FFA president from Roca, Neb., said FFA Week is an opportunity for members and communities to recognize achievements and activities available through FFA and agricultural education. This year's theme challenges FFA members to make a difference in their communities by thinking globally, but acting locally.

We agree!

"No one cares more about the environment than those of us who work in agriculture," said Thurber. "Through agricultural education and the FFA, our members put their values into practice as they learn about the causes — and solutions — to the challenges being posed to our environment."

Each year FFA Week is held during the week of George Washington's birthday to recognize his leadership and commitment to American agriculture. The National FFA Center is located on part of Washington's original Mt. Vernon estate near Alexandria, Va.

FFA is a national organization of 382,748 members in 7,744 local chapters throughout the United States, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands preparing for leadership and careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture. Local, state and national activities and award programs provide opportunities for students to apply knowledge and skills acquired through agricultural education. FFA members strive to develop agricultural leadership, cooperation and citizenship.

Our young people represent the future of agriculture. And FFA is our youth. Therefore it can be said that FFA is the future of agriculture. Long live FFA!

To Install And Check Smoke Alarms

Most fires in the home happen between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. Most victims die from smoke and poisonous gas inhalation long before the flames reach them.

This winter, several rural families have died in their homes because no smoke alarms had been installed.

Everyone should install UL or FM labeled smoke detectors that sense smoke and sound an alarm that will awake you in time to escape. Detectors should be placed on the ceiling or high on the walls outside bedroom areas.

In a multilevel home, each level should have a smoke detector. Smoke detectors should be tested weekly, especially when children are present. This allows children to learn what the smoke detector sounds like and what they should do when they hear it.

The batteries should be replaced annually. Non-working detectors are a growing problem and about one-fourth of all U.S. homes have non-operational detectors. Dead or missing batteries was the main cause for non-functional detectors.

By installing and checking smoke detectors on a regular basis, you could save your family's lives.

Lactations Begin With Dry Periods

Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, reminds us a cow's dry period is the foundation for her next lactation.

A cow's lactation will be no better than the care she received during her dry period.

Providing dry cows the care they need requires extra effort and an investment in proper facilities. Dry cows need a special feed ration that is formulated to meet their specific needs.

Your regular lactating ration simply will not accomplish this. Cows, also, need special attention 2 to 3 weeks before calving and 1 week after calving. This means you need to have two dry cow groups and a recently freshen group. You will need facilities that permit you to manage these groups separately.

Calves Need Energy In Cold Weather

When we get cold, we put on a coat, turn up the thermostat, or stroke the furnace or fireplace.

When animals get cold, they have to generate more body heat by burning up body fat or by consuming more energy.

Calves are born with very little body fat. Therefore, to replace lost body heat, they need to consume more energy.

We help them to do this by feeding more milk or milk replacer, feeding higher fat replacers, or by feeding more grain and forages. We also help calves reduce body heat loss by providing them with a clean, dry, well bedded, draft free pen or by moving them indoors to a warmer environment.

Remember, it is much more important to provide a calf with fresh, germ-free air than with warm housing when the barn is damp and stuffy.

Background Scripture: Revelation 15:2-4; 19:1-8.

Devotional Reading: Colossians 1:9-20.

There is a cartoon by Stan Hunt that I clipped from The New Yorker some years ago. The scene is inside a church. The congregation is standing and singing. Turning to her husband who appears to be singing lustily, a wife says: "Easy on the hallelujah, Harry."

I guess it is possible to get carried away with hallelujahs, but the problems with lots of us is just the opposite: too little, not too much of them. In our church we sing the Hallelujah Chorus by Handel twice a year, at Christmas and Easter, and these, of course, are appropriate occasions. Most of Handel's great work is based upon the Book of Revelation and its great panorama of God's ultimate victory, especially Revelation 19.

WHAT WE NEED

I've often noted that on these occasions, regardless fo what else may be happening in our personal lives — tragedy, sorrow, depression and so forth — the Hallelujah Chorus feels "right" because the great significance of Christmas or Easter over-shadow our own personal concerns. That is, blessed with the vision of God's ultimate triumph, we see our own personal situations in perspective and we realize that, no matter how painful they may be, the promise of God's victory is greater.

Of course, what we're talking about here is not the singing of the Hallelujah Chorus but the victorious faith upon which it is based. The word Hallelujah comes from the Hebrew meaning, "Praise Yahweh," or, as we'd say it today, "Praise God!" That is what we could have a lot more of in our lives.

The interesting thing about praise and thanksgiving is that, although we assume it is something that God wants from us, it is much more something that God wants from us, it is much more something we need than God does. What is missing from the lives of many people today — both inside and outside the churches — is the experience of praising and thanking God in a manner that goes somewhat beyond the perfunctory. Paderewski, the great Polish pianist, used to say that if he missed practicing one day, he knew it. If he missed several days, the critics knew it. And if he missed a week, everyone knew it. In a sense, that is what happens to our lives when we fall to give God our Hallelujahs.

SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE

Why are Hallelujahs in such short supply in our lives? In my own case, I waste too much time waiting for something to celebrate — Christmas, Easter, a birth in the family, a book of ours published, something good happens to a friend and so forth. In other words, we reserve our Hallelujahs for those times when we obviously have something to celebrate. But, as the writer of Revelation indicates, we always have something to celebrate. Hallelujahs are always appropriate in our lives because we live by the assurance that ultimately God's purpose will be fulfilled and the great scene in the Book of Revelation will become a reality.

So, no matter what happens to us in our daily lives, we focus, not upon our defeats and disappointments, but upon our promise, singing or saying: "Hallelujah! Salvation and glory and power belong to our God, for his judgements are true and just" (19:1b). And when we take the time and effort to praise God in the midst of our lives no matter what the circumstances may be — we gain the power to meet those challenges and go on to the ultimate victory.

"Hallelujah" gives us the power to live victoriously here and now. So when is the right time to sing Hallelujah? When all is going well, when all is not going well, and for every situation in between.

State FFA Officers Hold Western PA Media Tour

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) - In a pre-arranged meeting, four distinguished gentlemen joined the news correspondent in a cold, upstairs room of an old, Main Street, school building, now a community center. Under a big window in the seldom-used, former classroom, an old-fashioned, silver radiator hissed steam out its side, but bestowed no heat on the gathered quintet. They sat without complaint, on chilly, drab-metal chairs at an oblong table.

The group of three officers from the Pennsylvania State Future Farmers Of America (FFA) looked impressive; clean-cut and dignified in their FFA, blue-corduroy jackets, on which was the identity of each young man in prominent, yellow lettering.

The fourth man was Doyle Paul of Berlin, a member of the state FFA advisory committee.

They were Wayne Hassinger II, state FFA president, 18, from Millersburg in Snyder County; Christopher Reichman, 19, the state FFA treasurer, from Chambersburg in Franklin County, and Tim Lehman, 18, from Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County. He is the vice-president of the south-central region of the state FFA. Each of the three says he works on his family-owned farm. Two say they plan to attend college.

In conjunction with National FFA Week, the nine Pennsylvania state officers, separated into three groups, were participating in a Western Pa. Media Tour, visiting newspaper offices, radio and television stations in Somerset and two neighboring counties.

The officers say that although the itinerary was set up by the state executive secretary, Sheila Reiner, it was they who had to initiate media contacts to arrange possible visits.

Reichman says, "Originally, we tried to get into the Erie and Pittsburgh area." He adds that it was soon obvious that there existed a lack of familiarity between FFA chapters in those areas and the media. So the officers directed their efforts toward the Somerset-Cambria-Blair County region and got better results. But Reichman says the exercise of telephoning to the various media offices was, in itself, a very educational experience because they didn't know the name of the person with whom they should speak.

Later, Reichman found it frustrating, "When you ask for such a person, and you talk to everybody but that person."

Says Hassinger, "Basically, we're trying to reach out beyond the FFA. We want to help FFA because it has helped us," he says. "I feel I'm going to be more responsible (from this experience)," he says.

"Like he said," adds Lehman, "We want to give something back to FFA. We can help other members."

He says FFA chapters and individual members need to learn how to deal with the media. The knowledge the officers are now receiving, they will pass to local chapters by visiting area schools to speak with them.

The three officers agreed that it is necessary for the FFA and the media to each understand the function of the other.

"We need to understand the media from both the side of the organization and the side of the media," says Hassinger. "Later, that experience is going to help us out," he says.

"It's one of the things we can learn," says Lehman, "How to work with the media." Another recommendation the local chapters will hear from the officers is that they should send members to conferences and conventions, if possible. They praise a recent conference held in Bedford, titled, "Made For Excellence," which they say also helped them to understand themselves in a personal way. They (FFA chapters) will be encouraged by the officers to go to cities to reap cultural benefits through exposure to unfamiliar surroundings and people.

Protests and demonstrations were seen at the National FFA convention despite the rare appearance of a United States president at the affair. It was an occurrence the officers feel was not a positive FFA/media experience.

Hassinger says he has seen demonstrations and protests happening on his occasional visits to the state capital. He says he has learned to simply brush them off and he gets on with his business.

Paul adds, "Agriculture is something that doesn't lend itself to demonstrations." He says that in agriculture you sit down together, face to face, and talk out your differences until you work out a solution.

"Ag-Leadership, Citizenship and Cooperation," says Hassinger, "prepare you for life." He says these are the things FFA wants to promote.

Asked what they felt could be the worst FFA/media scenario, the fellows agreed it would probably involve being drawn into a political issue.

"Maybe if the media turns to the FFA with agricultural/media questions, for instance, the Animal Rights issue," says Hassinger. "The FFA won't take a political stand," he states.

Reichman says another unpleasant circumstance would be that of being misquoted by the media or having a comment taken out of context.

Lehman says they are definitely

In the Agri-Finance Department of Hamilton Bank, we finance projects for active 4-H and FFA members.

That's because we believe that helping preserve the family farm is one of the best ways to insure a better future for us all. And that involves working with our young people.

It's important to give them guidance, install the proper values, and help them acquire the skills they need to be successful farmers.

The 4-H and FFA are working toward these goals. And so, we support their efforts. If you or someone in your family needs money for a project, stop by and see us. It just might help us all.

Accurate and precise in no-till fields, too.

New Idea 9000 series planters have gained a well-deserved reputation for planting with incredibly accurate spacing at precisely the right depth in min-till, no-till or conventionally tilled fields. Our short 18" aerodynamically designed seed drop and independently acting walking beam gauge wheels see to it.

And our low-pressure, air metering system and edge drop seed disc singulates seeds—corn, soybeans, cotton, sorghum, milo, sweet corn, popcorn, sugar beets—to avoid doubles or skips.

Best of all, our double bar model provides plenty of weight and room for many combinations of our numerous no-till coulters and other attachments.

FEED BINS

Your Best Buy

We Will Assemble And Deliver Bins To Your Farm!

The feed bin is the very heart of any feeding system. If the bin lets you down, the system quits.

That's why we put so many quality features into our complete line of feed bins - which includes 6-foot diameter steel or polyethylene (great for H.M. corn), 6-foot, 7-foot, and 9-foot models. All are available in several capacities - so you have a wide selection of bins to fit your needs.

Here are just a few of the quality features that make our bins such an outstanding buy:

- Sturdy Ladder System
- All Bin Seams Are Double Caulked
- Choice of 16 or 25 Inch Hopper Opening
- All Galvanized Steel Parts

LAWRENCE W. SPECHT
PSU Dairy Specialist

The 1990-1991 DHIA test year was completed on September 30. New averages for those breeds with 20 herds or more are listed in the table below:

Breed	Herds	Milk	Fat	Protein
Ayrshire	31	13,946	541	467
Guernsey	50	12,855	581	453
Holstein	4028	18,130	657	574
Jersey	149	12,326	586	463
B. Swiss	24	15,125	600	526
Mixed	250	14,923	566	487
All Breeds	4541	17,656	647	563

The 4,541 herds contained 280,060 cows and are the herds that are on DHIA, DHIR and AP (test codes 00-31). Records from these forms of testing are eligible for inclusion in the USDA sire evaluation procedures.

Compared with last year, this year's average shows a gain of 810 pounds of milk, 26 pounds of fat and 25 pounds of protein. There was a loss of 90 full year herds and 4,800 cows. Herd size increased from 61.5 to 61.7 cows per head.

PaDHIA Develops Optional Reports

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — In order to provide our members with added valuable management information, DHIA has developed a collection of specialized paper reports.

These reports can be obtained along with the regular monthly reports at any frequency. There are 35 reports, ranging from a Sire Evaluation report to a pocket action sheet of low production cows. These reports are inexpensive, easy to use, and can be an important management tool for the DHIA dairyman.

The cost of these optional reports is .75 cents per page, billed by the service center on a quarterly basis. For members in non-reorganized counties, there is an additional base charge of $1 per set of reports sent out.

Reports can be obtained at any frequency, from monthly to yearly. The frequency for each report is specified on the Optional Report order form.

In the next few weeks we will featuring this option by printing samples of some of the optional reports that can be purchased. Don't forget to watch for these samples!

If you are interested in signing up for these reports, contact your supervisor for a sample packet and order form, or call 1- 800-DHI-TEST.

Farmland Trust President Is Keynote Speaker

DOVER, DE — Ralph E. Grossi, president of the American Farmland Trust, will be the keynote speaker at the 22nd annual Agricultural Industry Dinner on Saturday, March 21, in Clayton Hall, located on the University of Delaware's Newark campus.

The annual event gives farmers, agribusinessmen and policy makers a chance to review the successes and failures of the past year and discuss the challenges facing them in the year ahead.

The American Farmland Trust is a national non-profit organization whose mission is to stop the loss of productive farmland and to promote farming practices that lead to a healthy environment.

Grossi met with some of the state's agricultural leaders for the first time this summer when he attended the bill signing ceremony for HB 200, legislation which enacted a farmland preservation program in Delaware.

Grossi, a third generation farmer from Marin County, California, has been managing partner of Marindale Ranch, a family partnership of registered holstein dairy cattle and black angus specialty beef. He holds a number of national awards, among them the 1976 Outstanding Young Farmer and Rancher of the California Farm Bureau Federation and the 1985 Feinstone Environmental award.

He was founder and chairman of the Marin Agricultural Land Trust which protects Marin County aglands by acquisition of conservation easements. From 1977-79 he was a member of the California Agricultural Water Problems Advisory Committee; from 1979-81, president of the Marin County Farm Bureau; and from 1980 until he became president, a member of the Board of Directors of American Farmland Trust. He currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Wildlife Habitat Enhancement Council, the President's Council of the Institute for Alternative Agriculture, and the U.S. Implementation Board for the North American Waterfowl Management Plan.

Tickets for this year's Agricultural Industry Dinner are $75 per person. The price includes a cocktail hour from 6 to 7 p.m., dinner, which begins at 7 p.m., and an ice cream social.

Tickets are available at the Department of Agriculture by contacting Michael Owens at (302) 739-4811 or 1-800-282-8685 (Delaware only).

The Agricultural Industry Dinner is sponsored by the Delaware Council of Farm Organizations, a non-profit association of representatives from the state's major commodity groups and agricultural organizations.

Goat Shows Scheduled

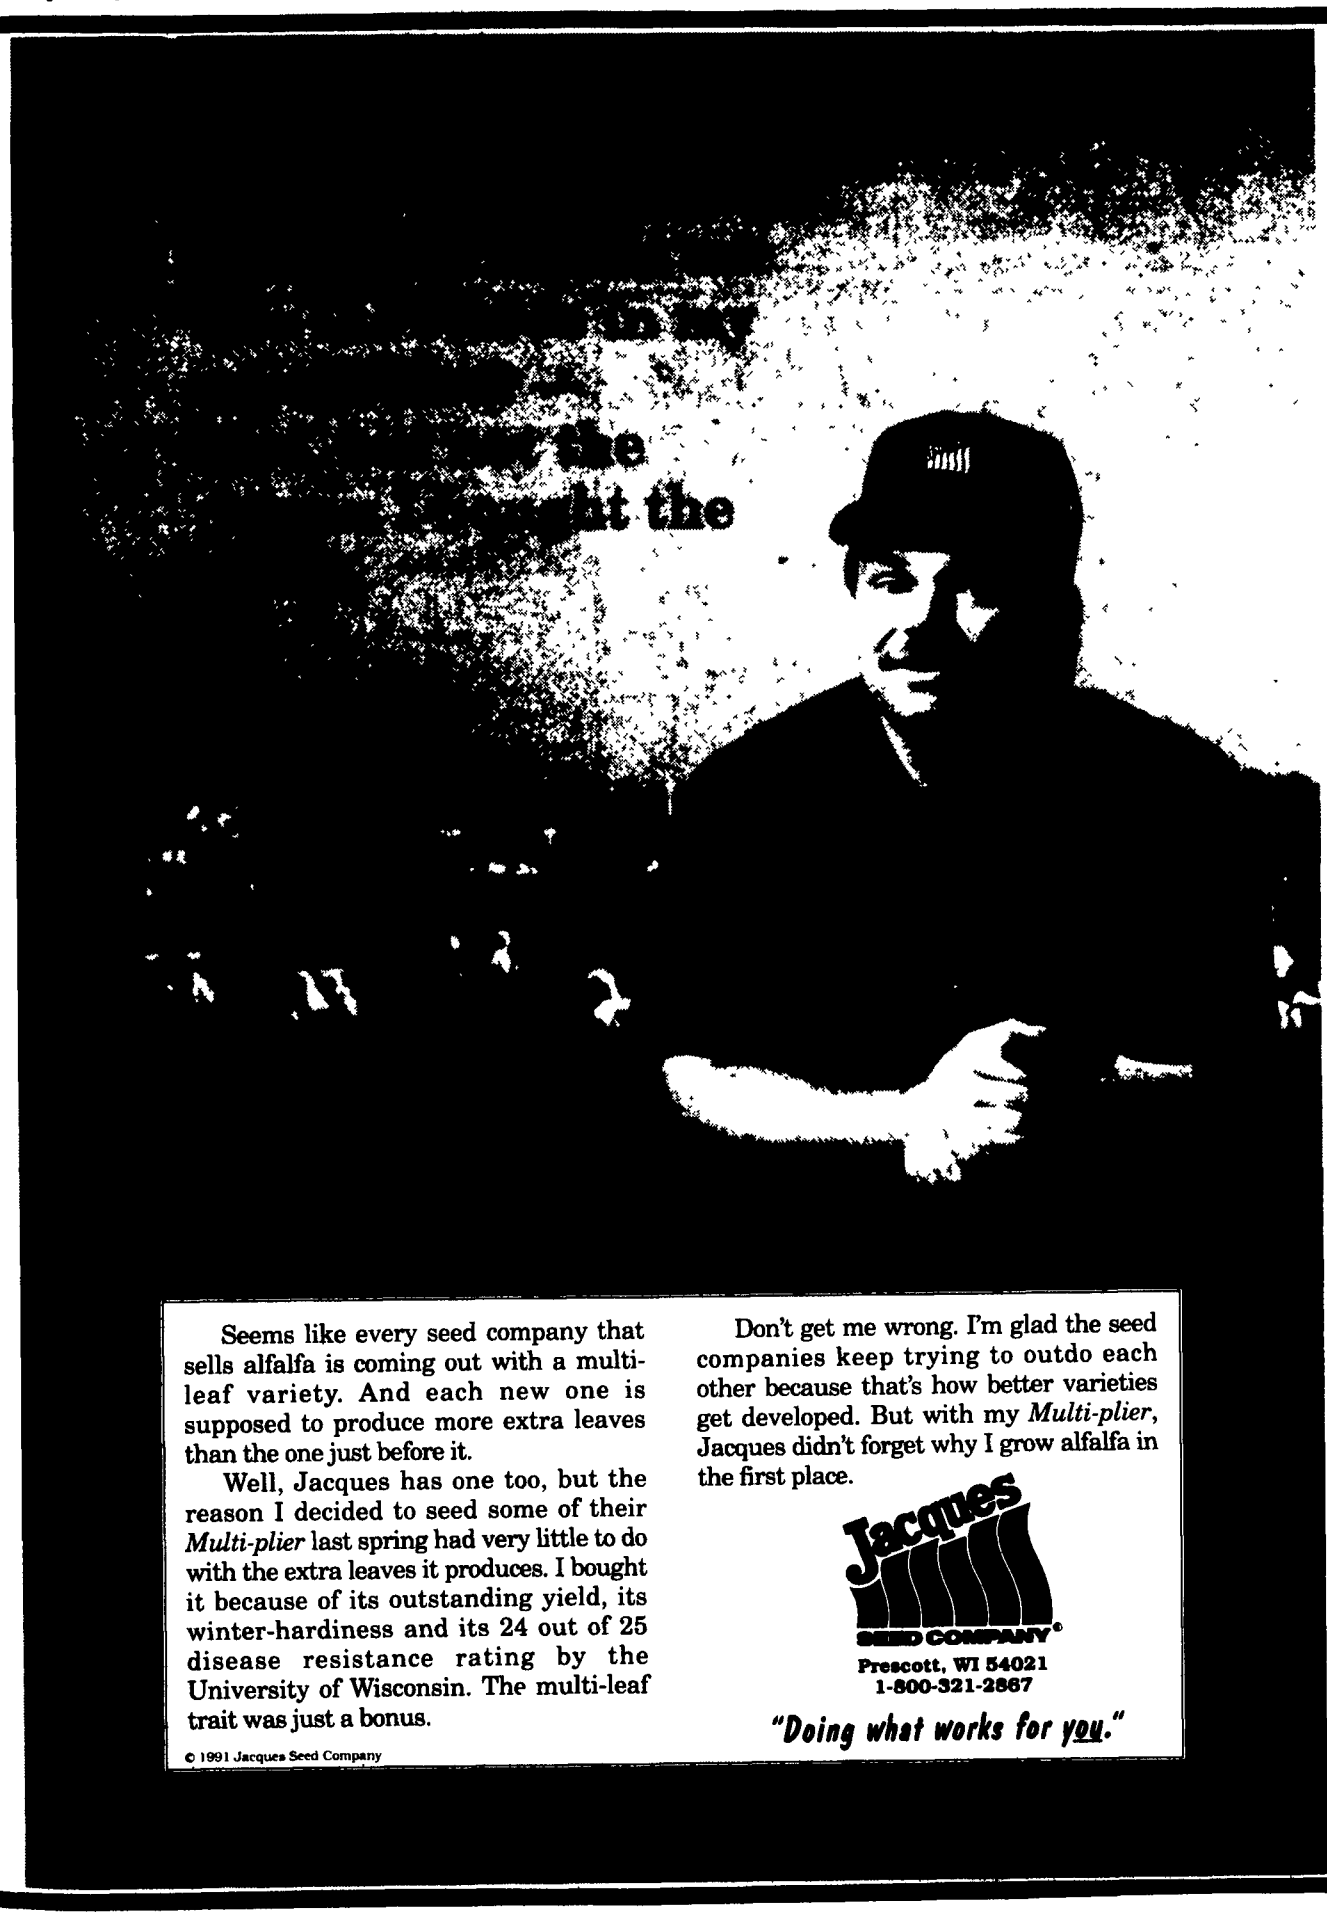
NEW CASTLE (Lawrence Co.) — Two high-level goat breed shows are scheduled for late spring at the Lawrence County fairgrounds in New Castle.

On May 16, the 1992 District II National Saanen Breeders Specialty Show is to take place with classifications for junior doe, senior doe. The judge is to be Pat Hendrickson.

On May 17, the 1992 District II International Nubian Breeders Specialty Show will select junior doe and senior doe. The judge is to be Freda Buck.

The bucks are not to be left out, as a combined breed specialty buck show is scheduled for Saturday evening.

For more information, call Glenda Erskine, of Butler, at (412) 282-6887.



Seems like every seed company that sells alfalfa is coming out with a multi-leaf variety. And each new one is supposed to produce more extra leaves than the one just before it.

Well, Jacques has one too, but the reason I decided to seed some of their Multi-plier last spring had very little to do with the extra leaves it produces. I bought it because of its outstanding yield, its winter-hardiness and its 24 out of 25 disease resistance rating by the University of Wisconsin. The multi-leaf trait was just a bonus.

Don't get me wrong. I'm glad the seed companies keep trying to outdo each other because that's how better varieties get developed. But with my Multi-plier, Jacques didn't forget why I grow alfalfa in the first place.

Pa. Jersey Cattle Club Sets Annual Meeting

MOHRSVILLE (Berks Co.) — The Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club (PJCC) recently announced its annual meeting and calf sale, to be held April 10-11, in Shartlesville, Berks County.

The convention and meetings are to be held at the Haags Hotel in Shartlesville, located west of Reading, just off of I78. The sale is to be held at Phillips' Irish Creek Jerseys farm in Mohrsville.

Reservations must be made early. The meeting is to be centered in Shartlesville, so organizers have reserved a block of rooms at the Fort Motel, directly off of I78. Those attending must make their own reservations directly with the motel at (215) 488-1578.

Other accomodation reccommendations include the Sheraton-Berkshire in Reading (215) 376-3811, and the Comfort Inn in Reading (215) 371-0500.

The sale committee is currently searching the area for the most stylish, top-pedigreed calves that the state will offer this year. Plan to attend with your child to select a project animal for the upcoming 4-H season, or come to select future herd replacements.

For catalogs, contact Robin Phillips, R.D. #1, Box 94, Mohrsville, 19541-9610.

Planners encourage Jersey enthusiasts and others to attend for a variety of reasons, from solializing with breeders of the Jersey breed and learn more about the efficient Jersey cow.

The area of the convention is also the heartland of some of the remaining Pennsylvania Dutch (not Amish) culture, including foods, shops and farm designs.

Shartlesville has antique shops, crafts and "Roadsid America," a large, indoor model community with tours and shows. Area farms also are preparing for visits.

The two-day schedule of events starts Friday with arrival and accomodation check-in; a 2 p.m. directors meeting at Haags Hotel; a 6 p.m. convention registration in the banquet hall fo the hotel; a 7 p.m. family-style Pennsylvania Dutch meal followed by the PJCC Junior Awards and the PJCC Jersey Queen Contest.

Entertainment starts at 9 p.m.

On Saturday, a family style breakfast is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. (doors open at 8 a.m.) in the Haags Hotel.

At 9:30 a.m., a PJCC awards presentation program and a speaker is scheduled.

Organizers suggest checking out of the motel from 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., then taking a 10-minute drive to the Irish Creek Jersey Farms for the 12:30 p.m. calf sale.

Lunch is to be "on your own," with catering provided by a local fire company and seating under a large tent.

At 3 p.m., a soup party and welcome mat are to be held at Dreisbach's Longmeadows Farm.

For more information, call Robin Phillips at (215) 926-1261, or Helene Dreisbach at (215) 562-3966.

Hoffnar Named State Conservation Professional

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

SIX MILE RUN (Bedford Co.) — Bernard Hoffnar says he has loved the Broad Top area since he was a child. His affection for this coal mining area of Bedford County has led him to winning the Pennsylvania Conservation Professional of the Year award.

"I used to spend anywhere from two to six weeks of every summer here, with my mother," he remembers. "I always knew I would someday return. When I got the chance, I did." That was 20 years ago. Since then, he has been actively involved in preserving and restoring the Broad Top area.

As a lover of the land, his philosophy is, "Anyone can use something up. It takes a real steward to make it better."

Bernard is involved in a long list of conservation projects.

He and his wife, Ingrid, and son, Forrest, live on a 32-acre farm where they raise Christmas trees and market them locally. They also raise all of their own vegetables.

Five years ago, county commissioners asked Hoffnar to serve as the first chairman of the reactivated solid waste authority. "I'm proud of the accomplishments we've had," Hoffnar says. "Getting municipality support, meeting DER requirements, dealing with all the parts of solid waste and getting it in operation in 2½ years was an amazing accomplishment. DER has told us they wish other counties could do as well."

Hoffnar serves as the president of the Coaldale/Six Mile Run Area Water Corporation. A non-profit group, Hoffnar calls himself, "the chief cook and bottle washer."

"It is a recognized system and one of the best in the state," Hoffnar explains. "Broad Top has worked very hard to achieve this. We almost always have 100% attendance at our meetings."

It was one of the early slow sand filtration systems in the state. It meets all state and federal requirements for potable water. "We've kept it simple," Hoffnar continues. "It's a low tech system that basically anyone can operate.

As secretary/treasurer of the Bedford County Conservation District, Hoffnar says, "Our board is one of, if not the strongest conservation boards in the entire state."

"We're involved with RAMP (rural abandoned mine program), cleaning the streams, newspaper recylcing, and a no till program. The people on the conservation board are extremely dedicated."

An outgrowth from this office has been involvement with the Pennsylvania Conservation District and the Land Use Planning Commission.

Hoffnar was appointed by Senator Robert Jubelirer as a member of the C.A.C. (Citizens Advisory Council to DER) where he serves as vice president. Three state government leaders choose six members for this council. It is strictly non-political.

An advisory/education group which does some lobbying, C.A.C. looks at such as issues as a plan for spreading manure, the Clean Air Act, the Environmental Education Bill, and, is concerned with state wide environmental issues.

They review state parks and state forests and have access to DER information.

Hoffnar also serves on the Environmental Quality Board which is composed of the game commission, fish commission, and four legislatures. They deal with residual and hazardous waste regulations.

Bernard Hoffnar, Conservation Professional of the Year, points to one of the water supplies in the Broadtop area where he has been actively involved in conservation for 20 years.

The goal of the Western Pennsylvania Coalition is to keep RAMP funded. Through this, Bernard became active in SMCRA (Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act).

Hoffnar is presently serving his third team as a Broadtop Township Supervisor. He is secretary/treasurer and handles the books and business for the supervisors.

Growing up on a 160-acre farm in Southern Illinois with a five-sow hog enterprise, and 400 to 1000 haying hens, Hoffnar still shudders as he remembers farmers who bragged about the farms they had "used".

"The main crops were caster beans and timothy which were rotated. When the soil stopped producing, they moved on to another farm. Even then, I didn't think that was right."

"Now, I know, agriculture should mean, leaving the land better than you found it."

For the future, Hoffnar hopes to be involved in a process using wetlands to mitigate as much of acid mine drainage as possible. There are four streams in the Broadtop area and, according to Hoffnar, the acidity of these streams is near vinegar.

He also plans to be involved in improving the water quality in Bedford, Fulton, and Somerset counties and, to work on a sewage project in the Broadtop.

"I will always work to protect water quality," he says. "I don't want to just preserve it. I want to improve it."

Hoffnar has a bachelor of science in agriculture from Southern Illinois and a master's in agriculture economics from Penn State. He also has a Ph.D. in agriculture economics.

Prior to moving to Broadtop, Hoffnar taught at VPI for three years. He spent five years in research service with the Depart-

'Vine Decline' Adverse To Watermelon Production

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — When growing watermelons, watch for vine decline.

"The biggest issue in my opinion is maintenance of the foliage, keeping the foliage healthy," said Ray Samulis, Burlington County, N.J. extension agent. Samulis spoke about high intensity watermelon production on Monday at the New Holland Vegetable Day.

More than 200 area vegetable farmers and industry representatives attended the day-long event, which featured a wide array of programs.

The key to making healthy fruit and maintaining high vine productivity with watermelons, according to Samulis, is to keep the foliage healthy and free of various mildews and fungus which contribute to "vine decline."

Watermelon sweet

"The foliage is what is making photosynthates, the foliage is making sugars, and that's what's going to keep the watermelon sweet," said Samulis.

The key is to keep close eye on the vines as they're growing and to look for the primary fungus agents, including anthracnose and downy mildew, and "getting them out of there. That's going to be the biggest determination of the quality of your fruit," he said.

But many procedures must be employed before the vine stage, including variety selection (Samulis urged growers to select the right variety, preferably an eastern variety), soil maintenance, and transplanting and fertility management.

"Watermelons are one of the warmest temperature requirement crops that we have," said Samulis. "In fact, they grow and thrive at temperatures which would kill a lot of other crops. I've seen very few cases where it was too hot to grow watermelons."

Hold nutrients

In Burlington County (the largest ag county in New Jersey, according to Samulis), the soils are primarily sandy and sandy loam, which are ideal for the deep-rooted watermelon plant. But the soil particles, which are extremely large, don't retain much fertility. However, the clay soils in southeastern Pennsylvania are more favorable to fertilizer retention — the smaller the particle of soil, the more ability to hold nutrients.

According to Samulis, watermelons require good drainange and are deep-rooting plants. They can tolerate low soil pH (some samples in the county tested out at a soil pH of only 2.8!) and cannot survive in a high water table (where the soil porosity is filled and offers the plant little aeration).

In the Burlington County region, irrigation "is 100 percent required," said Samulis. "You cannot grow watermelons without irrigation." Of 150 vegetable growers in the county, only two do not irrigate — and those make a living out of swampy regions.

Samulis said because of the hot, dry conditions, regular irrigation (from ½ to ¾ inches of rain early in the season and 1 to 1½ inches mid-season) is required. "We like to recommend drip irrigation," said the agent, "but to be quite honest with you, the majority of our acreage is not drip irrigation. It is traditionally irrigated with overhead sprinklers and risers."

Strict rotation

Watermelons require a strict rotation schedule in order to stop the proliferation of root fungus.

In Samulis' experience, soil compaction hurts watermelon production. Heavier-type soils are less likely to compact, according to Samulis; rather, lighter, sandy soils are the ones that have plowing layers.

He recommends taking an 18-inch subsoiler and working over the ground before planting, because of the importance of clearing the way for the deep roots of the watermelon plant.

Also, the ideal greenhouse temperature should be 80 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit for seed germination — high temperatures are required especially if using a floor culture, where the temperatures are much less. "You can have a greenhouse air temperature of 75 degrees and you'll have a root temperature on the ground of 65 or even 60 degrees," he said.

Younger transplant

If using a transplant, it is best to pick a younger aged one that an older one. The younger transplant

Rick Yates, D & L Growers, spoke about the importance of greenhouse biosecurity at New Holland Vegetable Day.

Dan Shantz, Shantz Farm Market, Allentown, spoke about the "Secrets of Successful Fall Crops" at the New Holland Vegetable Day.

Don Daum, Penn State engineer, reviews the importance of using eye goggles when applying pesticides to crops at New Holland Vegetable Day.

'Vine Decline'

roots quicker and produces at a timely rate.

"Studies out of Florida and many other areas show that with a younger-age transplant, they tend to put out a lot more roots a lot faster," said Samulis.

The older transplant goes into a "delayed dormancy," said the agent. "The growth cycle is held back and they don't really pop right out of the ground."

When planting from seed, it is best to plant in a warm soil (if planting early, use a clear or black plastic mulch) with the pointed end of the seed up.

Sidedress

Growers normally sidedress at least once with a nitrogen material. The use of drip irrigation makes it easy to apply a liquid-based fertilizer; if not, sidedressing can occur with the use of a "caddy" which injects fertilizer through a hole punched through the plastic.

If banding the fertilizer, it can be applied at the end of mulch, before or after fruit set.

At the height of the growing season, it is critical the plant receives water — about 1 inch per week and sometimes up to 2 inches a week, especially when the temperature is greater than 90 degrees and there is a heavy fruit set.

Also, growers must ensure the plant receives pollination, and bees are critical to the operation. Many New Jersey growers store hives near the watermelon plots for bee accessibility.

Ray Samulis, Burlington County, N.J. ag agent, said the key to good watermelon production is being aware of "vine decline."

Person part of system

When applying herbicides and pesticides, keep in mind that, if using a hand sprayer, the person "is part of the delivery system," said Don Daum, Penn State ag engineer, at the Vegetable Day.

Daum reviewed the importance of safety with sprayer use.

The important element in good spraying is "practice, practice, practice," said Daum. New applicator personnel should learn the correct application of a chemical (using water as a practice fluid) before applying the chemicals.

Also, critical elements include nozzle selection for the right application; selecting the time of day (morning or evening when winds die down to minimize drift); effective width of the bands; and ensuring enough water is available as required.

Dangerous vapors

Also, the operator should wear long sleaves, trousers, hat, gloves, eye goggles, and use a special charcoal-filtering masks to prevent the person from breathing in the dangerous vapors. (Do not use dust masks — they merely allow vapors to penetrate.)

Daum said to beware of advertising claims on some of the air blast products — some claim to cover 60 feet, while really only reaching to about 32 feet under the best of conditions.

Daum also emphasized the new technologies becoming available to the pesticide user, including an applicator that uses air blast and droplet techniques; a boom sprayer with fan; and a motorized backpack air delivery system.

Daum said that growers who need more information on handling and safety when using pesticides can choose various fact sheets available at county extension offices.

Also at the vegetable day were sessions on identifying and monitoring insects, greenhouse soil media management and insect control, asparagus and raspberry production, beekeeping culture, raising fall crops, strawberry renovation and weed control, tree fruit management, soil fumigation, and other topics.

Brown rot is only serious if you don't know how to stop it.

You won't stop rot with ordinary fungicides. But Funginex® isn't ordinary.

It has true curative control. Even if applied to stone fruit after you spot early signs of fungal disease, Funginex actually stops disease from spreading. Stops spores from causing infection. Minimizes crop damage.

And Funginex works when resistance to other fungicides becomes a problem. So what used to be serious, isn't.

Now brought to you by CIBA-GEIGY, Funginex is of low hazard to the environment low toxicity, rapid decomposition, low hazard to bees and mites, and can be used in IPM programs

New Program Aids In Well Water Access, Management

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

GUTHRIESVILLE (Chester Co.) — While much of Chester County escaped the severe drought last year which drove some farmers out of business in Pennsylvania, water concerns still rage — will we have enough this year? And will it be fit to drink?

"One thing I think you should all do is get your water tested," said Walter Wurster, Chester County agent, to about 92 farmers and industry representatives on Monday at the Chester County Crops Day.

Wurster spoke about the effects that well placement and management of nutrients and pesticides may have on water available to farmers.

He introduced a new computer program, soon to be released from Penn State, which will outline water quality measurements and help farmers in well location, construction, and maintenance.

Well water

Farmers should first have their well water tested. "I don't care who you are or how fresh you think your water is, get it tested," said Wurster. "Find out whether you have any problems."

Wurster also emphasized the importance of water conservation on the farm. According to the county agent, if all the water in the world would be available in a one-gallon container, the fresh water available to use would occupy less than ½ cup.

Through water conservation, a farm family of four could save up to 44 gallons of water a day. Proper water-saving techniques include a low-flow toilet, a low-flow shower head, turning off water when brushing teeth, a front-load dishwasher, and other methods.

Farmers should consider water use before problems occur. "The only times you think about these things is when something goes wrong with the pump, you know, and all of a sudden you don't have enough water to water the cows or you don't have enough water to shower or your wife's screaming at you and you're ready to cook dinner and there's no water in the house," he said. "You should think about this, because that water is not getting any more plentiful out there."

Wells polluted

Also, people don't realize how readily wells can be polluted, and sometimes avoid thinking about their own water management techniques. "Some people think, as long as I'm on the other side of the creek, I'm not going to have a problem with any pollution."

But through nitrogen runoff and leaching and pesticide contamination, wells can be readily affected.

Farmers can do a great deal to control runoff by conservation farming, by using terraces, and "by using a little common sense when we spray," he said.

Proper well location is important, and the new program will aid farmers in how to properly place the well, taking into consideration the location of the homestead, creeks, exercise yards, manure storage areas, septic system location, and other factors.

Also, if a well is located on a hill, where runoff could pose a problem, the use of diversion terraces can help avoid well contamination (surface water is a prime factor in contamination of existing wells).

"I think we all have to be conscious of water conservation,' said Wurster. "We also have to be conscious of how we treat the land around our watershed. Whatever happens, you're probably going to be the first one affected by anything you do wrong on our farm. It's going to be your groundwater or your well that's going to be affected."

Walter Wurster, Chester County agent, spoke about the availability of the world's fresh water and how farmers should learn to manage their well water effectively on Monday at the Chester County Crops Day.

Bill Beam, left, receives the 5-Acre Corn Club Award for three-year average from Walter Wurster, Chester County agent, at the Chester County Crops Day.

Winter Brings Teat Sores

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Sores or lesions on the udders and teats of dairy cattle may be more prevalent during cold weather, said an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Dairy producers may notice more sores in winter," said Carol Burns, research assistant in veterinary science. "If you see a sore, try to determine the cause. Some ailments that cause this symptom can be serious."

Chapped skin is probably the most common teat and udder irritation during winter. "This often is caused by teat dips and washing teats in cold weather combined with friction from the milking machine and rough bedding materials," Burns said.

"Cracked, chapped skin easily can lead to colonization of Staph aureus bacteria, increasing the incidence of Staph mastitis. The rough skin also can be invaded by viral organisms that cause other problems."

To help prevent chapped teats, Burns said to wait a few minutes for the teat dip to dry before sending cows outside.

Another cause of teat sores is pseudocowpox, a common pox virus in cattle. "Pseudocowpox causes localized swelling and creates a pustule that ruptures within two days," Burns said. "An elevated scab then develops. This scab falls off after 7 to 10 days, leaving a horseshoe-shaped ring of smaller scabs."

Pseudocowpox infections take five to six weeks to heal. "The rate of spread through herds is slow," Burns said. "Only a few cattle have sores at any one time. But because cattle develop little immunity to pseudocowpox, a cow can have teat sores several times during the winter."

Sanitation and disinfection are the best means to prevent the spread of pseudocowpox throughout your herd and possibly to yourself. Your veterinarian can recommend proper treatment, which may include removing scabs.

"This should be done to ensure that the scabs won't be lost in the beddings, which would contaminate the environment," Burns said. "Topical ointment also may be part of the treatment."

Care should be taken when milking or treating cattle with pseudocowpox. "This virus can be transmitted to the milker's hands, forming sores known as milkers' nodules," she said. "If your herd has pseudocowpox, it's wise to wear rubber gloves while milking."

Warts also can become more prevalent during winter. "Several different viruses cause warts, each with its own specific characteristic," Burns said.

"Warts are especially common in younger cattle, generally causing little harm and healing spontaneously. But when warts grow on the teats of lactating cows, they often interfere with milking."

Warts can be crushed, pinched off or surgically removed by your veterinarian. "Commercial vaccines may be helpful in stopping new warts, but these vaccines do little to help the existing warts to degenerate," Burns said.

Dairy farmers also should watch for signs of bovine herpes mammilitis (BHM), a viral disease that causes severe ulcers on the teats and udder.

"When BHM is first introduced into a herd, these areas often will swell and one or two large blisters will form," Burns said. "Sometimes the blisters disappear quickly and go unnoticed.

Sloughing of the teat skin may be the first sign that producers notice."

Milking machines are believed to aid the transmission of the BHM virus, which can remain in a herd for 6 to 15 weeks.

"The severity of the ulcers decreases as the disease progresses through the herd," Burns said. "But infected animals usually resist being milked and may have to be culled. BHM can cause high economic losses."

Your veterinarian can recommend an antiseptic, such as iodophors or chlorhexidine, to apply just prior to milking. Sores should be swabbed with an astringent after milking.

"Sanitation and disinfection are the best means to prevent the spread of viruses that cause teat sores," Burns said. "This applies to the teat ends, the milking machines and the milker's hands and clothes."

State Ayrshire Association Plans Spring Convention

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — The state Ayrshire Association convention, spring sale and show are scheduled for March 27 and March 28 at the Williamston Inn, in Towanda, Bradford County.

Reservations and animal registrations are due by March 10 and a number of calves have already been consigned for the sale. Auctioneer is to be Wayne Weaver.

The show is for non-milking animals, with classes ranging from intermediate calf (born from Dec. 1, 1991 to Feb. 29, 1992) to unfresh 2-year-olds (born before August 31, 1990). Lynn Miller is to judge.

There is a $5 animal entry fee for the show, unless the animal is also cosigned for the sale. Those animals are automatically entered for the show at no extra cost.

A showmanship competition is also scheduled with first-year, junior division and senior division classes.

Also scheduled is an "Anything Goes" auction for the association youth fund. There is no restriction on the number or type of items donated for the sale. Items already offered for sale inlcude semen, photos, and toys.

In addition to the sale, show and business meeting, there are to be award presentations, guest speakers and a selection for the 1992 Ayrshire Princess.

All women between age 14 and 19 are eligible for the competition. Those considering competing must be interested in promoting the Ayrshire breed through making appearances at meetings, shows and other functions.

Those interested in competing for the princess crown should send their name and a breif summary of backround experience and education to Bonnie Wentworth, 1026 River Rd., Quarryville, 17566, by March 10.

Accomodations at the hotel can be made throught Ben and Kathy Hillyard, of Ulster RD 2, 18850, (717)-596-4371.

State House Approves Ag Advisory Board

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state House of Representatives recently approved legislation that would give farmers a greater voice in drafting state environmental regulations, according to state Rep. Kenneth Cole, D-Adams.

Under the legislation (H.B. 1530), which has been sent to the Senate for consideration, an Agricultural Advisory Board would be formed to make recommendations on rules and regulations that the state Department of Environmental Resources considers.

As chair of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee and co-sponsor of the legislation, Cole said he was concerned about problems farmers were having with DER rules that were not intended for the agricultural community.

"Some of the rules DER issues have a big effect on our agricultural community," Cole said. "Usually, these rules are aimed at commercial businesses, but they end up adversely affecting farmers."

Cole said the board will be comprised of farmers and representatives of agricultural organizations.

"Our goal here was to provide a means for DER to know how its rules would affect agriculture," he said. "The board would provide information and input on regulations so that DER could draft the new rules for businesses in such a way that they do not affect agriculture."

and smaller plastic containers that he markets under the Kornman's Maple Syrup label. These are sold at local fairs and by word-of-mouth.

Mark produces about 250 gallons of maple syrup within a month to one and a half month period. Because the syrup keeps indefinitely, Mark is able to sell the syrup during the following months when he isn't busy in the woods.

When the maple syrup is running, Mark hires two to three guys to work four hours daily to collect the syrup from the 950 taps. The syrup most be taken to the sugar house immediately for processing or bacteria will begin to grow.

During the tapping season, Mark or his father need to spend about four to five hours in the sugar house processing the syrup.

Since Mark was first exposed to tapping maple syrup, his knowledge of the maple industry has grown.

He knows that hard maple trees work better than soft maple. He annually taps syrup about February 10 with a gas-powered drill.

A bucket is attached to the tree and the sap runs into the bucket.

"It depends on the weather," Mark said, "but I normally gather one-half to four gallons daily from a tree.

He carries the sap to a sugar house where it is placed in a storage tank that gravity feeds into an evaporator. It is boiled to the consistency of maple syrup and filtered twice to remove impurities before it is heated to 180 degrees in a stablilizer.

To help promote maple syrup and offer a different product, Mark purchased a cotton candy machine and a maple syrup machine. At Fairs, his maple cotton candy is a big hit.

"It's a little messy to make, but people really like it," Mark said.

The maple syrup machine enables him to make maple candy leaves and hard candy that he sells in ¼ to 1-ounce sizes. Maple cream is another unique item that Fairgoers enjoy.

"Nuts give the maple cream an entirely different flavor," Mark said.

Mark has learned to develop better syrup than he had when he first began his business. So much better that he said, "My syrup absolutely tastes better than store-bought. I couldn't eat any other kind."

He credits this upgrade in syrup from boiling the syrup faster and his purchase of a new evaporator.

"I like the producing end and working outside," Mark said. "In the beginning, I did not really plan on getting bigger, it just kind of happened."

But Mark does not want his business to increase much more because he plans to attend Butler Community College for two years before transferring to Penn State as a forestry major. While in college, he plans to continue the maple syrup business.

Mark also works on a dairy farm. "It's more demanding because it's seven days a week, but I really like it," Mark said.

Mark is the first member from his FFA chapter to receive a State Star award.

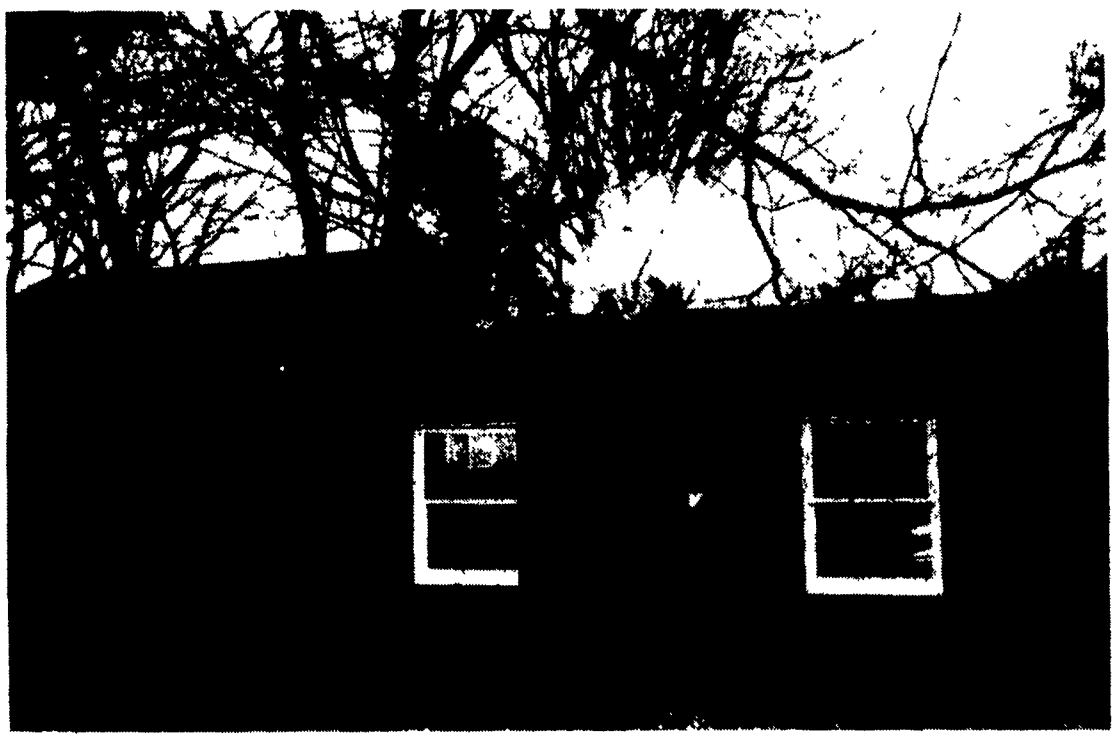
"I never figured I'd get this far. I was just hoping for a Keystone degree but this is great," Mark said.

Mark is a member of the Northwestern Maple producers. He is a member of Linesville First Baptist Church. He lives with his parents Tom and Joanne Korman and has an older brother and sister.

Mark said his whole family is proud of his accomplishments. His dad works with him on a daily basis and his mother brings in the sled and helps in other areas where she is needed.

"Mark's project is exceptional," said FFA advisor Ellen Aurand. "He's an outstanding individual. One you can always depend on — that's why he is president of his FFA chapter."

For the state star award, Mark received a plaque, $300, and the opportunity to compete for the Eastern State Award held at Massachuset in September.



Mark stands in front of his sugar house used to process maple syrup that is marketed and sold under the label Kornman's Maple Syrup.

Mark places a tap in one of the trees that he rents. An average tree has 25 taps to catch that maple syrup.

PSU Dairy Club Youth Judging Rules Listed

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Those who are interested in competing in the Penn State University Dairy Science Club's Dairy Cattle Judging Contest should be aware of the rules.

1. Participation will be limited to eight contestants total per county for 4-H, and eight contestants per school for FFA.

2. Each contestant must be a member in good standing of the 4-H Club or FFA Chapter he or she represents. Furthermore, each contestant must be eligible to participate in this year's state 4-H and/or FFA dairy cattle judging contest. Junior 4-H contestants are born on or after Jan. 1, 1978. Junior FFA contestants must not have reached the tenth grade.

3. There will be eight Holstein classes including one or more heifer classes.

4. Oral reasons: Senior 4-H and Senior FFA: Two sets of oral reasons will be given. The contest chairman will designate reasons classes prior to the start of the contest. To be eligible for awards, contestants must give reasons on the designated classes.

Junior 4-H and Junior FFA: Preregistered contestants can give one set of oral reasons. These scores will not count in individual or team results in this division. However, the top three reasons scores will receive appropriate recognition. A team can designate some juniors to give reasons and some not to give reasons when entering.

5. Contestants will be given 15 minutes for each reason class. A "3 minutes to go" notification will be given. Contestants will be told which classes are reason classes before time is started.

6. Each contestant must do his or her own work. There will be no talking allowed during the contest. Contestant management personnel can disqualify the contestant for violation of this rule.

7. Contestants are not permitted to handle any of the animals during the contest.

8. A team will consist of four members. The three highest members' scores will be added for the team score. If you wish to only enter three members, then all of their scores will be added for the team score. Individuals may also compete for awards without being a member of a team.

9. Whenever there are tie scores, the advantage will be given to the contestant or team with the highest reason scores.

10. Entry fees must be paid before the start of the contest.

11 . Any violation of any of the rules governing this contest will be grounds for disqualifying any contest and/or team.

Dairy Princess Crowned

received a $600 scholarship. Both alternate princesses will assist the state princess with various appearances throughout the state.

Dairy princesses from 31 counties competed in the event. Selection of the state princess was based on a three-part judging process. The young women went through personal interviews, presented a three to five minute speech for an adult audience, and gave a five minute presentation appropriate for an elementary school audience. The young women were judged on their knowledge of the dairy industry, communication skills, creativity, poise, and appearance.

In addition, they created dairy promotion scrapbooks for competition. Rebecca Silvanic of Broome County, Kerri Benson of Columbia County and Kristen Stevens of Delaware County were awarded $75 in prize money for the top three scrapbooks.

Three speech awards of $150 were also presented to Crane Williamson, and Julie Degear of Cortland County for their winning speeches and school presentations. Honorable Mention for speech presentations were: Kerrie Benson, Beth Plungis, Herkimer County, Sandra Mead of Rensselaer County and Tammie Cross, Sullivan County.

Robin Howland of Tioga County was chosen "Miss Congeniality" by her fellow princesses for her friendly and outgoing manner during the two day competition. She was awarded $50 from Ag Radio Network and received a gift on behalf of all the princess candidates.

The dairy princess program is designed to promote the consumption and sale of milk and dairy products to consumers and to create better relations between urban and rural people through one-on-one contact at the local level.

Andrus Receives Leo Briggs Award

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The Leo Briggs Memorial Award was presented to Jay and Kelly Andrus from Granville Summit, Pennsylvania, during the 32nd Annual Meeting of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) on Tuesday in Liverpool. The award recognizes those with a strong commitment to milk promotion.

Jay was active in the agricultural program at Troy High School and worked on the family farm after finishing school. He and his wife, Kelly, operate a 350 acre farm with Registered Holstein cattle and are presently milking 50 cows. They have been on their present farmstead for 9 years and are the parents of two children, 4-year old Cassiday and one-year old Lindsey.

As part of their award, Jay and Kelly traveled to San Antonio, Texas to attend the annual meeting of United Dairy Industry Association last fall. They reported on their trip to the meeting.

Kelly and Jay Andrus receive memorial award from Raymond Johnson, board chairman.

The award was initiated in 1983, following the untimely death of one of dairy promotion's key leaders, Leo Briggs. The fund was started with the goal of training a new generation of dairy promoters. A farm couple is selected each year.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council is a dairy promotion organization representing dairy producers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

ADA/DC Promotion On Target

SYRACUSE, NY — "Dairy Promotion: On Target" was the theme of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council's (ADADC) Annual Meeting held on Tuesday at the Sheraton Inn in Syracuse, New York. The meeting focused on specific ways ADADC impacts the marketplace with its promotion and advertising programs.

With the challenge of rising costs, new and innovative programming had to be implemented. According to Rick Naczi, chief executive officer, "By sharpening the focus of our existing programs, we reached out to promotion organizations in Texas and California to put together the right marketing mix. Only the most focused, measureable and research-based programs will survive our planning process."

Using a "broadcast" format, ADADC staff presented ways in which integrated programming was maximized in 1991. An excellent example of cooperative programming was the "Breakfast In School Is Cool" promotion. Nutrition information was supplied by Dairy Council staff to second grade and junior high school teachers and to food service directors of schools with breakfast programs; the communications department scheduled television and radio media tours highlighting children's nutritional needs, especially regarding the breakfast meal; and the consumer promotions department supplied Breakfast in School Is Cool kits to over 2,600 participating schools. More than $61,000 in media coverage was gained through this cooperative promotion effort.

To further emphasize the need to carry out integrated promotion programs, Tom Gallagher, chief executive officer of United Dairy Industry Association, and Cynthia Carson, chief executive officer of National Dairy Research and Promotion Board, defined how these two national organizations work together to attain the greatest impact in the marketplace. Cooperative advertising, nutrition research, and specific product promotion were discussed in their presentation.

To round the program out, Doug Banik from D'Arcy, Masius, Benton & Bowles advertising agency, presented a comprehensive update on the magnitude of the advertising programs of the soft drink, juice and coffee industries. Milk advertising, although greatly outspent, needs to compete head-to-head on television and radio with these beverages. Approximately 69 percent of the ADADC $11.2 million dollar budget is targeted for television and radio advertising in New York City, Syracuse, Albany/Schenectady/Troy, Utica, Binghamton, Plattsburgh, Elmira and

Young Couple Manages Dairy Farm With Help Of Family

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — In a southwest corner of Lancaster County is a pocket of farmland that has held on to time.

The Amish dairymen in the area have helped to keep it rural and agricultural.

But the Amish aren't the only ones. Some of the "English" are sticking it out, too.

Together, they have thwarted efforts by real estate speculators to turn their area into so many soulless strip malls sitting among rows of cookie-cutter frame houses, generic yards and mail-order landscaping.

Instead, the woodlots in the low rolling farmland are devoid of recently built houses. The woods are sanctuaries to small populations of wildlife, such as whitetail deer that the farmers hunt and enjoy.

(Such as a huge buck taken about four years ago which carried a set of antlers a peach basket would not cover.)

The area does not suffer from a constant roaring of relentless traffic. The residents of this area near Quarryville listen to pheasants cackle occassionally, or the bold, screaming cry of a red-tailed hawk.

And, it is not an area where farmers frequently get jolted awake in the middle of the night at the crash of a car smashing through a fence into a pasture.

Those kind of experiences create an emotional mixture of worry and disgust.

Instead, sleep is more often disturbed here by the bellowing of a cow giving birth, or a baby crying to be fed or held.

One young couple on their way to making a success with a dairy cattle herd in this pocket of farming country said they don't intend to move away, as long as conditions continue to be conducive to agriculture.

Mark and Kris Welk have been operating Welk-Shade Farm for the past four years. They have a 2-year-old daughter, Nicole.

Mark, 26, made news recently when he was presented with the title of "Outstanding Young Farmer, Under 30."

According to him, it was a surprise honor that is uncomfortable to talk about, because he said he is reluctant to show pride.

However, he did receive recognition from his peers for doing a great job in agriculture.

"You have to be dedicated," he said. "I'm fortunate to have had a good herd built up before we moved here, and that means a lot, but I guess it means doing the best with what you got."

The young Welk couple does do a lot with what they have.

They milk 70 registered Holsteins twice a day on a pipeline system, have 140 acres on the farm, 110 acres of which are tillable, and they rent an additional 80 acres. They grow predominately corn and alfalfa, and they always double crop with rye and barley.

The barn is old. The 64 tie stalls are too short at 57 inches. Manure is hauled daily, although Mark is working on getting work done for a storage system through the Chesapeake Bay Program.

And efforts are being made to remodel the barn for increased cow comfort.

Their rolling herd average is more than 20,000 pounds of milk and increasing. In fact, since switching to a total mixed ration, their milk production has increased 3,000 pounds and the fat and protein have each gone up about hundred pounds.

Their herd's somatic cell count has been staying around 100,000, which is premium range. They've got a bull calf headed for an artificial insemination stud, and one they're attempting to prove by themselves.

But they've had help.

Mark is the son of Paul and Bev Welk from Peach Bottom, where Mark worked for 15 years before moving to farm of Kris's parents, Fred (deccased) and Nancy Espenshade, four years ago.

The Espenshade farm became available to the couple through the tragedy of Fred's death and with Nancy's continued help.

On Mark's side, his father Paul has supported them with savy of the business and help around the farm. He also works at a feed mill and picks up forage samples from Mark to have them tested.

Mark's brother Matthew, 17, also helps out, driving from their Peach Bottom farm to milk and help fill the silos.

"If it wouldn't be for them, we wouldn't be farming," Mark said, in acknowledgement of the support of both families.

"Otherwise you'd have to be a millionaire to get into dairy farming. And if you were already a millionaire, why would you be a dairy farmer?" he said, laughing at the irony.

However, Mark loves to farm. And he loves to take care of his cattle.

"I don't feel I'm so much better," he said reflecting on the award. "I'm just fortunate to have had a real good teacher in my dad," Mark said. "He taught me to appreciate good cows."

Mark's herd is outstanding in that it contains seven Excellent cows and a number of Very Goods. His BAA is more than 106.

Although he buys from time to time, he traces his high index back to a calf he bought when he was 12 years old. She was an Arlinda Jet Stream daughter — VG 82, 180,000 pounds of milk in her lifetime, Dam of Merit winner — and she gave him five natural daughters, four of which were classified as Very Goods.

Those daughters continued providing good daughters and now, four generations later, he is sending a Vanguard calf, a great, great, granddaughter to his Arlinda cow, back to the auction where he made his first purchase — the Eastern Shore Showcase Calf Sale.

"I originally bought the Jetstream there and I thought it would be kind of neat to send one back after four generations," he said.

The couple's goal is "to manage the herd for milk and breed for type," Mark said. "We want to get into merchandising. We want it to be a breeding herd."

And it is not only his family that has helped in the couple's efforts to make a good life for themselves and their family. The Young Farmers organization figures into the equation, they said.

The Young Farmer organization is statewide and is important to the Welks because it provides valuable information, but also something else. It provides an opportunity for young farmers to meet young farmers — there aren't many of them left.

A portrait of a young dairy family: Mark Welk holds the show halter of Fran-Lou Clarine, a 7-year-old Excellent cow with strong legs and frame, while accompanied by wife Kris, daughter Nicole, and Buddy, a brown Labrador Retriever.

Welk-Shade Astro Jet Set-ET is a 2-year-old bull that Mark and Kris Welk are currently attempting to prove. He comes from a strong type and production line the young couple has bred for.

Warren 4-H Forage Meeting Scheduled

WARREN (Warren Co.) — All Warren County 4-H members with dairy, horse, or livestock projects are invited to attend a March 2 forage meeting at the county 4-H center.

The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m. and is to feature extension agents from Crawford, Erie and Warren counties discussing hay quality, cutting management and the economics of feeding hay.

Participants are also to learn about protein, fiber and energy contents in various types of hay.

They will also have an opportunity to place hay samples, according to a forage analysis.

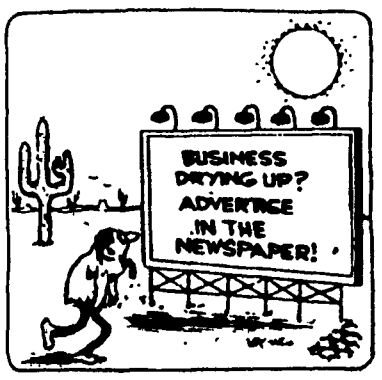
Adams County Holstein Board Sets Schedule

THOMAS E. PIPER
Adams Co. Extension Director

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — A calendar of activities for Adams County dairy farmers was confirmed when the board of directors, Adams County Holsteins Association, met Feb. 7 in Gettysburg at the home of Thomas E. Piper, county agent.

President Marvin Brown oversaw the meeting.

Jeffrey and Mary Kay Roche of New Oxford received thanks for directing the sale of 65 cases of cheddar cheese, a fund-raising project. Proceeds are targeted to support the dairy princess program, help underwrite dairy product promotion, and provide assistance to programs for youth. Responsibility for the next cheese sale will be shared by Adam and Vincent Lobaugh plus Jeffrey King.



Reservations with a $10 down payment are due by March 15th, for a dairy tour into York County on April 9. Accepting the recommendations of Jennie Hess, extension dairy agent, the tour is to depart Adams County at 8 a.m. to make stops at McRal Dairy Farm of Ralph McGregor; Smysers Richlawn Farm, and Sinking Springs Farm before lunch at Rutters Family Restaurant.

Afternoon visits to Bupplyn Farms south of York and Susquehanna Aquacultures, Inc. at York Haven will allow the group to return to Gettysburg about 4:30 p.m. Adam Lobaugh is chair of the tour committee.

The Pleasant Acres Farm of the Harold King family off Route 94 west of York Springs will be the site of a summer twilight meeting on Wednesday, July 15.

The annual membership meeting was tentatively scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 15, in the new firehall currently under construction in Gettysburg.

Jeffrey Roche announced that he is seeking a supporting sponsor for a championship trophy to be awarded at the South Central Pennsylvania Holstein Championship Show which will be held August 8, at the fairgrounds in Shippensburg. Roche, Kevin/Karen Holtzinger and Penn Gate Farms are to contribute to this award.

Follow-up contacts are being made to complete machinery enrollment for 1992.

An invitation to all dairymen to attend Dairy Day, an educational meeting planned for 10 a.m.-3 p.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 26, at the Gettysburg Family, Jamesway Shopping Plaza, Route 30 east, in Gettysburg, was issued by County Agent Thomas E. Piper. Area Extension Agents Dan McFarland, Roland Freund and Larry Yager will join with Extension Dairy Specialist Steve Spencer and County Agent Tom Piper in a review of new developments in housing, cow comfort, mastitis prevention and treatment as well as milk marketing.

DHIA members owning personal computers and wishing to learn how to benefit from the ARIS (Agricultural Records Information Service) program should plan to attend a workshop at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 25 at the Cumberland County Extension Office; at 1 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 26 in the Franklin County Extension Office; or at 7 p.m., Wednesday, March 11 at the York County Extension Office. ARIS is an on-line system which allows users to dial through a modem and connect to the mainframe computer at the DHIA Service Center.

After working with the Office of Rural Economic Development, he decided to move to Broadtop.

Hoffnar will receive his award at a banquet to be held on March 28, at the Embers Convention Center in Carlisle.

He was nominated by Michael Krempasky, executive director of the C.A.C.

"I have known Bernie Hoffnar for more than five years," Krempasky says. "I have a deep respect for his interest and devotion to the environment. He spends an inordinate amount of time improving the quality of the environment on a township, county, and statewide level.

"The water system that Broadtop has is totally a result of what Bernie has done."

Ag Teachers Fight Illiteracy

Lauffer is also president of the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association (PVATA), a relatively small, self-explanatory teachers' organization.

For some time, Lauffer has been working through the organization to bring attention to the lack of agricultural literacy. He said it seems ridiculous that a high school graduate does not know from where their food and fiber come, and, in general terms, what practices are required to provide those two basics of survival.

As president of PVATA, Lauffer has been putting in extra time to bring attention to that lack of very basic education.

The most pressing goal Lauffer said he hopes can be achieved is to get the state Deparment of Education to acknowledge that agriculture (or agri-sciences) should be recognized as a valid course of study and that agricultural information should be infused into all aspects of the curriculum.

However, when the 22-member State Board of Education, an agency of the Department of Education, wrote up regulations which mandate a list of "must haves" in each school's curriculum, they left out any mention of agriculture.

Not one word.

In a letter to the board, after reviewing its draft revisions to chapters 3, 5, and 6 of those regulations, Lauffer commented about the lack of agricultural education.

"In reviewing the draft revisions to Chapter 5 and 6 a major concern is the lack of any language that specifically encourages the development and/or improvement of agricultural education in Pennsylvania," he stated in the position paper.

In the letter, Lauffer cites a three-year study by the Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences, published in 1986, called, "Understanding Agriculture, New Directions for Education."

"The study noted that most American know very little about agriculture, its social and economic significance in the United States and particularly its links to human health and environmental quality."

According to Lauffer, the academy of sciences report "made two key recommendations. First, that agricultue education programs be upgraded to prepare students more effectively for the study of agriculture, and second that, beginning in kindergarten and continuing through 12th grade, all students should receive some systematic training about agriculture which may be integrated into existing science, math, history and/or social studies classes."

In light of the study, the lack of the mention of agriculture in the board's regulations for curriculum does not sit well with Lauffer and others in PVATA.

"We live in a society that obviously depends for its very existence on the most sophisticated, productive and efficient food and fiber production, processing and delivery systems ever known to man. Our concern is that 'man' knows very little about this system.

"Agriculture is the number one industry in the state of Pennsylvania, yet nowhere in the Chapter 5 and 6 regulations do we even see a mentio of the word agriculture.

"Agriculture is one of the few areas of technology in which our nation is still considered the world leader. Is it appropriate for us to take that world leadership for granted and wait until we are in a scientific and economic crisis to realize the importance of agriculture and agricultural education?"

The PVATA position paper states, "We sometimes hear the argument that the farming population or those who are engaged in the production of food and fiber is declining. That is exactly our point. It is beoming even more critical that we all develop an awareness of agriculture."

The letter also states, "The days of farmers producing maximum yields with little regard for related impacts are a thing of the past. The technological advances in agriculture are unsurpassed by any other applied science.

"Modern agricultural production is a complex science of management that defines optimum production in light of economic feasibility, social acceptance and environmental soudness. We can not in good conscience allow an increasingly agriculturally illiterate society to emerge from our school systems."

What PVATA members request are specific changes to the regulations to include agricultural science as a distinct and recognized course of study in primary and elementary education, middle level education and high school education.

For the regulations which address vocational-technical education, PVATA seeks to add wording which would recognize student " . . . participation in vocational student organizations to develop leadership skills and positive attitudes be considered as an integral part of the vocational technical program."

Or, in other words, to recognize the educational value of participation in organizations such as FFA and 4-H.

That wasn't the only letter written. There were several, the latest dated Dec. 20, 1991. And three times Lauffer testified before the board about the importance of agricultural study in the curriculum.

During a Jan. 9 meeting, the state Secretary of Education Donald M. Carroll Jr., who is the chief executive officer of the board, said that the board did not want to mandate agricultural education, and that the word "agriculture" had been entered in the regulations, though not the way PVATA had requested.

Lauffer, responding to why "agriculture" should be expressly addressed as part of a primary school curriculum, said, "When was the last time you went into a restaurant, carefully studied the menu and then ordered something that wasn't on the menu?"

However, for all his efforts, he said the State Board of Education has apparently cast a deaf ear. He wrote as much in a letter to Sheila Miller, executive director of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. Miller has promised help.

Lauffer said that PVATA, though very small, has not been quiet.

In addition to Miller, they have contacted and received support from the Agricultural and Rural Affairs committees, and the Education committees in both the House and Senate.

Responding almost immediately were the chairman and vice chair of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, Rep. Kenneth Cole, D-Adams, and Jess Stairs, R-Westmoreland, respectively.

In a joint letter to the chairman of the board, Sister M. Lawreace Antoun, Cole and Stairs stated that are seeking, " . . . favorable consideration of expanding the mandates of the current State Board of Education regulations to include agriculture industry, agriscience and ag awareness within a school district's curriculum or content. We write this jointly because we believe the matter deserves a bipartisan effort."

Also, during a meeting, PVATA members literally reached into their pockets to hire lobbyist Frederick C. Brown, of Harrisburg.

According to Brown, the status of lobbying efforts was "in the ball park" as of Thursday.

"I charaterize it that we're in the ball park," Brown said. "That is, with the Independent Regulatory Review Commission, based on the legislative support that has been offered and will continue to be offered by other ag leaders in the General Assembly, I think we stand a 50-50 chance of improving the status of agriculture with respect to the school curriculum."

Brown and Lauffer have been working closely to stay on top of things. They have been attempting to penetrate what they said they perceive to be an ingrained stereotype of agriculture which would have only those interested in running a family farm receive instruction in agriculture.

Brown said that some people are beginning to understand that the steel industry and every other manufacturing industry in the state is second to agriculture now, not the other way around.

And they are beginning to understand that the skill and educational levels required to work in agriculture and agricultural support businesses are not being met by the majority of those entering or in the work force.

In fact, according to a Penn State University instructor, Kenneth Kephart, certain agricultural job opportunities abound in Pennsylvania — for those qualified to fill them.

Brown said that people in Harrisburg are starting to look at the possibility of agriculture as part of the regular school curriculum a little differently.

"Initially (the suggestion of agriculture be offered as part of a curriculum) might have been 'pooed-pooed' somewhat.

"I think Bob (Lauffer), when he spoke to the state board back in January and said, 'How many times have you gone into a restaurant and ordered something not on the menu?' I think that got the attention of many of the state board members," Brown said.

Brown also said that, because some of the regulations considered by the board are supposed to allow school districts the flexibility in creating curriculum, if agriculture and agricultural sciences are not included in the curriculum regulations, a district's won't have the flexibility to provide those courses.

"I'm pretty optimistic that there will be some improvement in the status of agriculture. I think that if we move ahead one notch, we will benefit the industry."

On Thursday, Feir said that the state board is attempting to move into different directions with the state mandates.

"In reality, what the board is doing with the proposed change in curriculm regs is reducing a lot of the kind of specificity that (PVATA) would like inserted. In a sense it's moving in a different direction with the regs in general.

"The real answer is I don't know what the board is going to do. The board members will have to make decisions on a lot of things. We had a discussion about (agriculture) at the last meeting (Jan. 9). There were a couple of members who suggested not requiring specific teaching, but requiring some information about food processing and related industries.

"The messages that we got from Bob Lauffer and others has been expressed clearly, and in the end I think we will satisfy that to some extent."

The State Board Of Education

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Efforts to infuse agriculture into mainstream education statewide are placed before the State Board of Education, but many people are unfamiliar with what the board is and what their job is.

A general description of the board and its activities, an agency of the State Department of Education, is provided in the 1991-92 edition of the Pennsylvania Manual, volume 110:

What They Do

The board has the power and duty to review and adopt regulations that govern educational policies and principles and establish standards governing the educational programs of the commonwealth, upon recommendation of its councils.

What It Is

The State Board of Education is the regulatory and policy-making board for basic and higher education in the commonwealth.

There are 22 members of the state Board. Seventeen members are appointed by the governor and confirmed by the state Senate for six-year terms, and they serve without pay.

Four members of the board are members of the General Assembly. They serve as long as they hold majority and minority chairs of the House and Senate Education Committees.

The chairperson of the Professional Standards and Practices Commission (PSPC) is a non-voting member.

Ten members comprise the Council of Basic Education, with 10 also on the Council of Higher Education, with the chairperson of the board and each council designated by the governor.

The 22 members of the board also serve as the State Board for Vocational Education.

The Pennsylvania Department of Education provides administrative services for the board and the Secretary of Education is the chief executive officer of the board.

The current Secretary of Education is Donald M. Carroll Jr., of Mechanicsburg, a carreer education specialist who was appointed by Gov. Robert Casey in 1989 and reappointed in 1991.

The (board) is supported by a staff consisting of an executive director, an administrative officer and a secretary.

Related Agencies

Regulations and policies adopted by the board are subject to review by the Independent Regulatory Review Commission.

The five-member commission was created in 1982 to review all proposed and existing rules and regulations created by all state agencies, commissions, boards, departments and authorities, except for the Legislation, the fish and game commissions, local governments and the judicial system.

The chairman of the commission is appointed by the governor and the current chairman is Thomas P. Comerford, of Scranton, also Gov. Casey's hometown.

Board Of Education Reviews School Regs

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania State Board of Education Committee has planned to accept public comment on Thursday, Feb. 27, on proposed regulations which would affect school curriculums, among other things.

The meeting is scheduled for 9:30 a.m., in the Susquehanna Room of the Education Building at 333 Market St., in Harrisburg, which is on the 12th floor.

According to a notice published by Robert Feir, executive director of the board, "The purpose of the meeting will be to review comments and testimony regarding proposed revisions of Chapter 3, 5, and 6, which were received during the public comment period; to develop recommended changes in the proposed regulations for adoption by the State Board of Education at its meeting March 11-12, 1992; and to develop proposed student learning outcomes to recommend to the board for consideration in lieu of those proposed in September 1991.

The efforts of the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association to change the regulations to include agricultural sciences and refer to agriculture within the regulations are among the issues to be considered by the board.

The meeting is open to the public and comments are to be accepted starting about 9:35 a.m. Depending on the number of those wishing to comment, the committee may limit individual comment time, in order to conclude public comments by 11 a.m.

Copies of the documents to be considered are to be available at the meeting.

The board intends to adopt revisions of the codes on March 11 and March 12.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

-Vincent Becker, Lititz R3, was elected president of the Manheim Young Farmers Association Thursday night at a meeting in the Manheim Central High School.

Other officers elected were vice president, Mervin Shelly; secretary, Paul Kline; treasurer, Eugene Hoover, and director of public relations, Forney Longenecker.

-Society of Farm Women 22, meeting in the home of Mrs. Jay Landis, Lancaster R6, recently heard Mrs. Donald J. Brown, executive secretary of the Lancaster County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. Brown also showed two films from the Cancer Society. Donations were made by the society of farm women to the American Cancer Society and to the Lancaster Heart Haven.

Mrs. Donald Kepner was co-hostess and led devotions. Roll call was answered by "What we did this morning."

Next meeting will be Tuesday, March 13 at 1:30 p.m. with Mrs. Willis Rohrer of Smoketown as hostess and Mrs. Clarence Rohrer as co-hostess.

-Lancaster County Future Farmers of America will join with blue-jacketed farm boys all over the nation next week in celebration of National FFA Week.

Theme of the week this year is "Honoring Rural Opportunities." The phrase is part of the opening ceremony of all FFA meetings and comes in response to the president's question, "Future Farmers, Why Are We Here?"

The week is set each year to include George Washington's birthday since he was, the future farmers believe, one of the first American farmers to use scientific methods on his farm in Virginia.

Throughout the county, the 10 chapters of FFA will be presenting special programs and making displays tp call public attention to the work of FFA and vocational agriculture in the rural high schools.

The Future Farmers is a national organization of farm boys studying vocational agriculture in public high schools.

-Lancaster Couunty tobacco growers will set their own program, farmers were told Tuesday at the first of three county meetings called by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee to explain the upcoming referendum quotas.

"We have often heard Lancater County farmers complaining that western farmers set the policy for the eastern farmers, but the decision to accept or reject tobacco marketing quotas will be up to the farmers in Lancaster County and nowhere else," Raymond Connolly, Jr., told the 40 farmers meeting at the New Holland Fire Hall.

Berks Seedling Sale Under Way

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The 18th annual Tree Seedling Sale, conducted by the Berks County Conservation District, is under way.

The district is again offering a wide variety of quality stock 3-year-old tree seedlings at a very low price. Pre-paid orders will be taken until March 26, 1992.

The pickup dates are Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, April 16, 17 and 18. All orders will be picked up at the rear of the Agricultural Center across from Berks Heim on County Road.

Varieties being offered this year are Fraser Fir, Colorado Blue Spruce, Douglass Fir, Norway Spruce, Scotch Pine, White Pine, Arborvitae, Black Locust, Canadian Hemlock, Red Maple, White Birch, Mountain Ash, and Pachysandra (ground cover).

To receive an order form, call the Berks County Conservation District at (215) 372-4657.

Your Farm Credit Banker.
Nobody Knows The Field Better.

Sure, you'll find Farm Credit bankers all buttoned up, ready to talk short- or long-term loans, mortgages and sophisticated lines of credit.

But underneath the shirt and tie, you'll find the one thing the other banks don't offer. A fellow farmer.

Most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms and got their college degrees from ag schools. Nearly all of them grew up with 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

And, if that's not enough, every single one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

That means when you talk to a Farm Credit loan officer about any kind of ag loan, you won't have to waste your time translating to someone who's book smart but farm foolish.

What's more, because Farm Credit loan officers understand farming as well as they understand finances, they're not only smarter, they're faster. After all, they have the same loan closing authority as many local bank presidents.

So when you need competitive rates or creative options, see your local Farm Credit banker. Because nobody knows the field better.

Small-Scale Pork Producers

Also John Gadd, a private hog production consultant from England, who is a regular columnist in "National Hog Farmer" magazine, discussed the "Secrets to Success In The Hog Industry."

Gadd began by comparing European production to United States production and generally concluded that while the United States is far more the economical producer and larger producer, the quality of the average American hog is not as consistent as the European hog.

He said a strict and widely practiced genetic program has increased the genetics of their hogs to a point where the meat production averages are very high and the meat is lean.

Problems associated with their product, however, is that the meat is bland tasting and demand has gone down.

Also, because of the fast weight gains, the European hogs are having leg and structure problems — the meat production is outpacing the growth of the skeletal system.

According to Gadd, European hogs are producing at a rate of 70 pounds in 9½ weeks.

"They grow fast, but the meat is becoming very un-tasty. Our meat is extremely lean, but the taste is poor; therefore, meat consumption is down," he said.

He did offer some advice for the American producer, he said. In order for the smaller producer to compete with the large professional producers, the small producer has to imitate the large producer in business attitudes and in employment.

First, Gadd said, don't economize on the choice of breeding stock. He also said that producers need to emphasize a genetics proving program similar to theirs, similar to what is currently done with American dairy cattle.

He also said producers need to evaluate their herds and operations for weaknesses and work to improve them.

Also, he said, producers should demand proof of herd health when purchasing an animal before bringing it into the herd.

Gadd said one of the biggest problems the European community faces with hog production is attracting workers to the field.

Kenneth Kephart, Penn State University hog specialist, said that was also a problem here.

"I tell all my classes that I can get them jobs within a week," Kephart said. He said that he frequently gets calls from agribusinesses which are seeking qualified people, but the supply of trained and skilled people is very low.

Gadd said that employee benefits and working conditions must be improved in order to attract more people to the industry. Also the parents of potential workers have to be recruited also.

Kephart said much the same thing, although he talked more about keeping employees and creating attractive and competitive employee positions. He said that he stressed using a reasonable pay scale, keeping down on the repeated long-hour days, and creating an incentive system that provides frequent and justifiable reward.

"If you're going to compete with the big pros, you have to be a pro yourself," Gadd said.

During the Pork Congress, other programs were being held concurrently.

For the second year in a row, the Lebanon County team placed first in the Keystone Pork Bowl, held Wednesday afternoon. Lebanon County won it easily over second place Indiana County, 215-145. A total of 12 teams competed.

Lebanon team members and coaches were Jon Harnish, Katie Lefever, Scott Nolt, Jason Krall, Brian Kreider, John Risser, and Dan Atkins.

Indiana County members were Lisa Zack, Adrienne Elkin, Tonya Anthony, Beth Elkin, and coach Sue Glass.

Chester County, which placed second last year, dropped to third place this year. Team members included Matt McAllister, Christin Eyrich, Chris Gay, and Norm Gay, with coaches Titus Beam and Nelson Beam.

Another youth contest was public speaking, in which 18 members participated.

Grange Upset With Budget

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There are some glaring holes in Gov. Casey's agricultural appropriations in his proposed budget, according to Pennsylvania State Grange Legislative Director Brenda Shambaugh.

The most glaring holes are in the governor's appropriations to the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School and the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board. Both line items received nothing in appropriations. Yet both are vital to the agricultural community.

Being the only veterinary school in the state, the University of Pennsylvania plays an important part in making sure the commonwealth has an adequate supply of veterinarians. A large number of those who study at the University end up staying in the state which benefits our economy, Shambaugh said.

Other cuts which the governor has proposed are: a $770,000 decrease for agriculture research; a $100,000 decrease in agricultural promotion; a $166,000 decrease in agricultural research at Penn State; and a $718,000 decrease for ag extension.

"From the figures, one notices that most of the cuts are in the area of agricultural research and education," Shambaugh said. "We are distressed that the governor has decided to cut such a large proportion from our universities and extension agencies which help improve the number one industry in the state - agriculture.

"Clearly we have our work cut out for us. The Grange will be working with the General Assembly to restore funding for those vital items for the agricultural community."

The Pennsylvania State Grange represents more than 35,000 rural Pennsylvanians. Originally organized as the first family fraternity, the Grange today takes an interest in all areas of rural living including health care, education, local roads, farm preservation and other agricultural issues.

NCGA CHAMPIONS
HYTEST SEEDS has announced its 1990 winners in the National Corn Growers Association Yield Contest.

James C. Justice, Beckley, WV was named National Champion, Class A, non-irrigated div. with a yield of 228.6753 bushels per acre using HYTEST HT686.

Joe Hasbrouck Jr., Kingston, NY was named New York State Champion, Class A, non-irrigated div., with a yield of 202.7297 bushels per acre using HYTEST HT650A.

PROVEN PERFORMANCE
HYTEST with 9 state winners in 1990, has placed in the top four nationally for 4 years. It's a record of performance that many large seed companies envy.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT
A regional farm seed company, established in 1912, HYTEST employs the same careful breeding, testing and selection process that went into producing these champion hybrids, into all of its varieties. And they're all potential champions!

Foraging Around

By Dr. John E. Baylor
Forage Specialist (Retired)
Penn State University

SEEDING OPTIONS FOR FORAGES

Starting soon, weather permitting, farmers will be in the field sowing small seeded legumes and grasses. Red clover and timothy broadcast in winter grains are usually the first to be sown. But other species using a number of seeding techniques will be seeded in rapid order as the season progresses.

Here's another look at several of the seeding options available to you with a judgment as to how successful each technique might be.

Over-Seeding in Winter Grains

The term "seeding on the honey-comb" is frequently used. This refers to seeding a legume or legume/grass mix in an already established crop, usually a winter small grain, in late February or early March during the time when we normally have conditions of alternate freezing and thawing. The common seeding is one of red clover with or without timothy. Of the legumes, you will normally have most success with red and alsike clovers. Seedings of alfalfa in a winter grain are normally marginal at best, and the success rate with birdsfoot trefoil is even less.

Occasionally a farmer will wait until the small grain has started to grow, and soil conditions are favorable, and then sow alfalfa using a grass drill with coulters mounted in front to open the soil slightly. This has resulted in satisfactory stands, especially in more northern areas, but for most situations I'd still consider sowing alfalfa in a winter grain as somewhat risky.

Spring Seedings with Spring Grains

Where oats or other spring grains are used, if possible, choose a grain variety that is short, early maturing, stiff-strawed, and non-lodging, then reduce its seeding rate by one half. Many growers have returned to using a small grain companion crop for purposes of weed control and soil conservation, even though small grains compete with young seedlings for light, moisture, and nutrients.

For best results where a spring grain is used, remove it as green chop, silage or hay just as heads emerge from the boot. Of the legumes, the clovers are the least risk when seeded this way. But with careful management alfalfa can also readily be established successfully. Because of its low seedling vigor and lack of shade tolerance, birdsfoot trefoil is more of a risk. Most cool season grasses can also be sown at this time, although late summer is the "ideal" seeding time for most cool season grasses.

Again in areas of northern Pennsylvania and New York seedings of alfalfa made with mixtures of either oats or spring triticale and peas have been satisfactory. But as you move south, this becomes more risky.

Spring Seedings on a Prepared Seedbed

Making a spring seeding on a prepared seedbed without a companion grain crop, broadcast or band seeded, and weeds controlled chemically, continues to be a popular and generally low risk method of establishing alfalfa. In the Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers Program, for example, top yields were generally from such seedings. And seeding year yields of up to 5 tons of hay per acre have been obtained. A firm seedbed and good soil to seed contact is a must. Your success with grasses seeded with alfalfa depends, of course, on your herbicide program for weed control.

No-Till Seedings Gaining Favor

Seeding alfalfa or other legumes the no-till way, either in small grain or corn stubble, or in sod, continues to gain in popularity.

A good time to have gotten ready for a spring no-till seeding in sod, according to Virginia workers, was last fall with control of existing vegetation using appropriate herbicides. But regardless, both Virginia and Pennsylvania workers agree there are several requirements for successful no-till establishment including:

- Competition from other plants must be eliminated or minimized.
- Heavy thatch and plant growth tall enough to shade the soil surface must be removed.
- Seedlings must be protected from insects, especially when seeding in sod. Furadan in the row can still be used.
- Soil fertility must be medium to high with pH above 6.5.

As regards the latter Virginia workers have found that for seedings made in sod, surface applications of lime on soils needing lime are beneficial. Ideally the lime should be applied 6 months or more before planting.

Fluid Seedings

Fluid or suspension seeding, usually by a custom applicator or your fertilizer dealer, is another effective way to broadcast legume seeds uniformly over large acreages in a short time. Except for timothy, fluid seedings have not been satisfactory for most grasses.

Cultipacking before and after seeding, along with other good seedbed preparation to assure adequate soil/seed contact, is a must with this kind of seeding. Studies show that if seeding occurs immediately after the inoculated seeds are added to the suspension, there's no injury to the rhizobia. Likewise, recent studies indicate that with metalaxyl (Apron) treated seed, 1/3 or more of the Apron applied to alfalfa seed appears to be absorbed into the seed and is still available after being placed in the fertilizer solution.

Speaking of the systemic fungicide metalaxyl (Apron), studies indicate this material provides good protection against present strains of Phythium and Phytophthora seed and root rot organisms with initial stands from treated seed lots frequently 20-40% better than untreated controls where these organisms are present. The use of Ridomil (1 pint/acre) at seeding, in addition to Apron treatment, provides additional protection, especially in fields known to have a problem with the above diseases.

One final word. Many new seedings have been damaged from herbicide residues, particularly triazines. Thus, plan your herbicide program for all crops in the rotation, not just the immediate planting.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Well-Kept Dairy Farms For 1992 Beautification Recognition Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is ready to receive applications for 1992. This program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan Baker, dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has received great acceptance in the past and officers look forward to a good response again this year. "There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in past years, should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent in now to apply for the award. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1991. Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district. A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use more dairy products."

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given by Lancaster Farmning to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time to apply for you and your farm to receive the coveted honor of Dairy of Distinction. This award is based on the concept that attractive farms enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encouraging public support for the dairy industry."

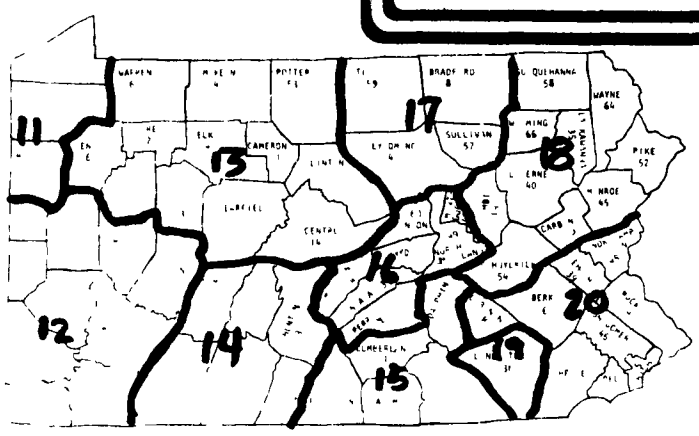
Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Evelyn Lightfoote, 3053 Depew Road, Stanley, N.Y. 14561. Phone: (716) 526-6654. In New Jersey, contact Angust Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: 201) 735-4989. In Pennsylvania, contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association/Dairy Council, Tower Business Bldg., 239 Schuyler Ave., Kingston, PA 18704.

Bush Valley Farm in Blair County and owned by Debra and Kenneth Bush family at Williamsburg is an example of the farms that were designated Dairy of Distinction last year. You are invited to send an application to enter the program for 1992.

Send Application By April 15

Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program



Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

Pennsylvania area chairpersons are: District 11, Leslie Firth; District 12, Wally Jackson; District 13, Susan DuJour; District 14, Janet and David Hileman; District 15, Norman Coons; District 16, Robert and Bernice Gable; District 17, Larue Thomas; District 18, Allen Roszel; District 19, Lisa Risser; and District 20, Russell Rooks.

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to install at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present a color farm portrait print to each of this year's winners in Pennsylvania. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

PFA, Insurance Firm Sign Pact

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) and Nationwide Insurance have signed a letter of understanding to form a sponsor relationship.

The action was announced today by Keith W. Eckel, PFA president, and John E. Fisher, Nationwide's general chairman and chief executive officer, after their respective boards approved the proposal.

As a sponsor, PFA will promote Nationwide Insurance products and services to its more than 23,000 members. The sponsor agreement calls for Nationwide Insurance and PFA to work together on mutually beneficial programs involving insurance, membership development and safety education.

Nationwide is one of the largest multi-line insurers in Pennsylvania and the nation. A $30-billion enterprise headquartered in Columbus, Ohio, Nationwide has major customer service centers in Harrisburg and Butler.

"We are taking this major step in our insurance program to better serve PFA member families, both for their personal and business insurance needs," Eckel said. "This move is the next logical phase in the development of a strong insurance program for PFA members."

Fisher said, "This sponsor agreement continues Nationwide Insurance's heritage of establishing special programs to provide insurance services and products for agricultural organizations. We look forward to a beneficial relationship with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association."

Commenting further on the agreement, Eckel said, "When we started offering insurance services in 1977, we had only one goal in mind and that was to meet the insurance needs of our members. That's still our goal. We sought an insurance company that would offer a full line of insurance, give our members strong, long-term stability, and great potential. Nationwide Insurance meets those criteria.

"Nationwide has more than 750 insurance agents in Pennsylvania and an extensive network of claims representatives. They will be a major benefit to our members. And Nationwide's financial strength will give us the flexibility to meet farmers' growing insurance needs."

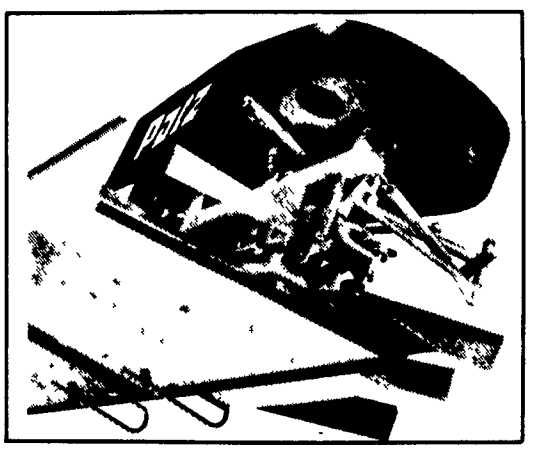
Eckel said the sponsor decision came after PFA made a major study of the insurance needs of Pennsylvania farmers and had explored different ways to meet those needs. PFA operates an insurance agency which offers a full line of insurance to its members.

PFA, headquartered in Camp Hill, was organized in 1951, is the largest general farm organization in Pennsylvania. It's affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Nationwide was started in 1926 by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. The company has sponsor relationships with that federation, the Maryland Farm Bureau, Inc., Farmland Industries, Inc. of Kansas City, Mo., and Ruralite Services, Inc. of Forest Grove, Ore.

Patz Gutter Cleaner

4.9% APR Financing



Fast Facts:

- Durable Patz hook-and-eye link chain allows easy maintenance. Progression forging builds extra strength in hook-and-eye link contact points. Final heat treating increases hardness, strength and wear resistance.
- Choice of two link sizes to match gutter length.
- Four-tooth sprocket drives every link. Each sprocket tooth drives each link behind the hook — the link's thickest and strongest point.
- Flexibility for various layouts.
- Select 2" steel angle flites for solid manure or 4" high flites for slurry manure. Flites are welded to Patz links.
- Three drive unit sizes match your gutter length and allow expansion.
- Corner wheel top-and-bottom flanges guide the chain around the corner. Corner wheel assemblies remove easily for service without concrete breakout.
- Automatic chain tightener.
- Heavy-guage steel slide with steel center beam for added strength.

Mifflin Holstein Club Holds Annual Meeting

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

ALLENSVILLE (Mifflin Co.)— At their annual dinner meeting, members and friends of the Mifflin County Holstein Club (MCHC) gathered to present awards, elect directors, and to hear comments, observations, and advice from speaker Ron Buffinton of Dublin, OH.

The club honored Bill Bradford of Lewistown with the Distinguished Service Award. Bradford became a member when the MCHC first formed in 1957 and served as a State Director from 1960-1980. He also served 6 years on the Youth Committee and has shown cattle for 26 years.

Darvin Yoder presented the Junior Membership Report. Junior member Andy Reed placed in the top third in the state at Penn State's Junior Judging School. Yoder distributed the award money for dairy show placings at the Mifflin County Youth Fair. Junior Production Awards for Milk and Protein went to Chad Renninger while Lee Leinaweaver earned the Junior Production Award for butterfat.

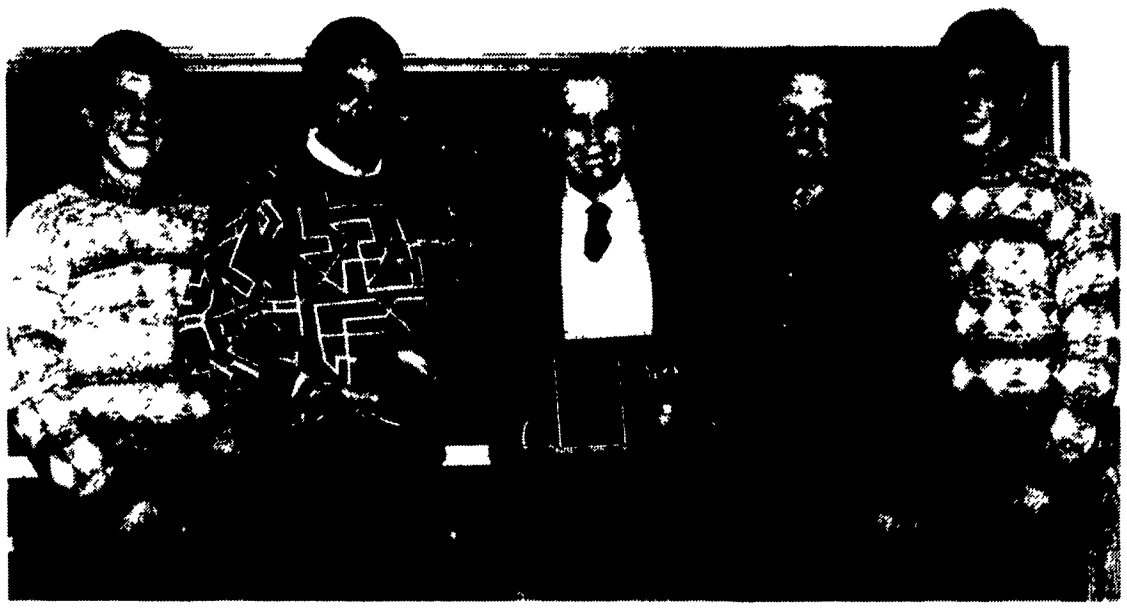
The Mifflin County Holstein Club annual dinner meeting featured speaker Ron Buffington (second from right), a farm consultant from Dublin, OH. From the left, Bill Nichol, Executive Director for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, John Rheam, Master of Ceremonies, Buffington, and Ed Glick, President of the Mifflin County Holstein Club.



Those receiving awards at the Mifflin County Holstein Club's annual meeting include: (L-R) Mike Kline, Russell Kline, Bill Bradford, John Byler, and Matt Kline. Mike Kline received a Distinguished Junior Member Award, Russell Kline had the highest classified herd in Mifflin County, Bill Bradford received the Distinguished Service Award, John Byler had the highest herd average in Mifflin County, and Matt Kline was recognized for his Junior All PA fall calf. He also received a Distinguished Junior Member Award.

State Director Ron Maidens presented the BAA Award to Russell Kline of McVeytown for having the highest classified herd in Mifflin County. For the DHIA Award, John and Saloma Byler has the highest herd average.

Bill Nichol, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, mentioned state activities. "The biggest part of our activities is international marketing." A cow from Mifflin County was one of six destined for Japan the same day as the banquet. Since 1970, the Holstein Association has shipped cows to 50 countries. Nichol stated that the Holstein first came to the United States in 1895 and was bred for milk production and rate of gain. Because of this emphasis on milk production, the global demand for Holsteins from the United States has increased. "We look for 5,000 head to be shipped to Kuwait this summer or fall and another shipment to Egypt."

Nichol mentioned that the 340 youth attending the State Junior Convention helped to sell 20 tons of cheese with proceeds going back to the local clubs. Rochester, NY, will host the 1993 National Holstein Convention while the 1995 Convention will be held in Pittsburgh. Nichol encouraged members to consider a purchase at the ballroom sale during the National Convention on February 27. The topic of diversification to increase income will highlight the convention.

Elected as MCHC Directors, Paul J. Zook, Glenn Peachey, and Keith Spicher join President Edwin F. Glick, Vice President David R. Spicher, Secretary/ Treasurer Rod Kauffman, Jeffrey A. Ranck, Michael Ammon, Estel Maidens, and G. Sheldon Peachey on the Board.

Ron Buffington, a farm consultant, addressed the group on matters concerning advertising, salesmanship, and financing. he was keynote speaker at the 1986 National Holstein Convention in Connecticut and has spoken at five National Junior Holstein Conventions.

"The frustrating part the longer I work with farmers is that the American farmer is the only businessman that buys most of his supplies retail, produces a product, and sells it wholesale. And I say to the American farmers, we gotta do something different in buying products," Buffington states.

Buffington reminded that the purpose of a businessperson should be to expand income and shrink costs with the motive to be debt free. He asked farmers to take a hard look at better ways to market their product, citing the successful ad campaign of the Florida Citrus Growers.

"There's a whole lot of things in salesmanship that you can do. One of the things I like toward the idea of helping us on the price of milk is selling cheese. I compliment the Pennsylvania Holstein Association for selling a lot of cheese this winter. It takes 10 pounds of milk to make a pound of cheese. And when you give somebody 5 pounds of cheese at Christmastime, that takes 50 pounds of milk out of the marketplace. And I know that most industries that got out of trouble got out of trouble by good, hard smart selling."

Buffington went on, "You need area effective advertising. If I were in charge of the American Dairy Association advertising, I'd hire the firm that does the Florida Citrus Commission to do our advertising. You gotta have some-

Annual Awards Banquet Held

The announcement of the 1992 Pork All American and the auction to raise funds for promotional activities were highlights of the 14th annual banquet held Wednesday evening.

Steve Wilson, New Freedom, in York County was named Pork All American. Wilson has 130 sows and a finishing operation that includes the Yorkshire, Hampshire, and Duroc breeds. In the Penn State boar test program completed this month, Wilson had the second high pen with a 144 index.

In accepting the honor, Wilson credited his family and his work with FFA and 4-H "as the place where it all started." He will represent Pennsylvania at the 1992 World Pork Expo.

In the auction, hog equipment and supplies donated by agribusinesses sold for a total of $6,483. Billed as the 1992 legislative fundraising auction, the funds will be used where check-off monies may not be used.

Other award winners included Dr. John Cable, retired from the Bureau of Animal Industry, appreciation award; Michelle Vonada, 4-H Youth award and Ginger Kegg, FFA Youth Award.

Kurtis Good was named the Pork Leadership Institute representative. Good graduated from Lancaster Mennonite High School in 1991 and represents the Lan-Chester pork producers as a spokesman. He plans to study Hatfield's buying system with special emphasis on weights and grades.

The new state officers were introduced. Abe Fisher is the new president; Floyd Huber is vice president and Herb Schick is secretary/treasurer.

New Terms, Greater Meaning

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — New buzzwords can turn people off, especially when these terms have little meaning to us compared to words like mastitis, ketosis, milk fever, degradable protein, acid detergent fiber, monocalciumphosphate, etc.

These, too, were buzzwords at one time, but because we now understand their significance, we know they can mean big differences in profit or loss in the dairy business.

Two new terms are CATION and ANION (pronounced like "cat" and "iron" without the "r" and like "Anne" and "iron"). We adopt these terms from the disciplines of chemistry and physics as they relate to nutrition and the more correct feeding of our dairy animals.

In simpler, better-known terms, cation and anion mean the acid-base balance in feeding rations, in digestion and in the internal metabolism of the absorbed nutrients afterwards.

Why not stick with the old names?

Well, this is the age of molecular chemistry, and understanding nutrition at the molecular level makes it easier to track down causes of problems.

Ions are the atoms or molecules that make up nutrients. When nutrients are absorbed into the body, they break down into ions.

Either they are the electronically positive-reacting ions like calcium, magnesium, zinc, sodium, potassium, iron, selenium and iodine, etc. Or they are the ions that are electronically negative-reacting like chloride, sulfate, phosphate, nitrate and carbonate, etc.

Acid-base balance, or cation-anion balance, happens from the relative contents of feeds in those compounds. When reacting positively or negatively on balance in the guts and in the body, they create acids or the opposite — an alkaline or base balance.

This is a much more serious business than previously realized, because the reactions mean a change in pH (a pH of 7.0 is neutral; less than 6.9 is more and more acidic; more than 7.1 is more and more alkaline).

This can only be balanced if the body has buffers in its bloodstream or takes buffers from its bones, or the dairy farmer feeds buffer supplements like sodium bicarbonate or magnesium oxide with the ration.

For example, calcium and magnesium in the feed ration mean an alkaline or cation reaction.

Producers who grow potatoes or alfalfa are more conscious of these facts than those of us engaged in feeding animals or in human nutrition. Crop growers and agronomists agree that you can't grow alfalfa without liberal fertilization of the field with limestone, a good source of calcium, while the opposite is true for growing potatoes. And fertilizer on fields is to plant nutrition as dairy animal feeding ration is to animal nutrition.

When do dairy animals need feeding rations that are going to be alkaline or acidic; that is, cation or anion? And when does ignorance of this (or ignoring it) cause problems and financial losses on the dairy farm?

High-milking dairy animals excrete in their milk lots of calcium in addition to other cations, which have to be replaced daily. If not replaced, then two things will happen: (1) milk production will drop, and/or (2) the milking cow, goat or sheep will draw calcium from her own bone substance, leading to serious consequences, such as brittle bones or worse.

In the beginning of lactation especially, paralysis and the dreaded milk fever are typical of a calcium deficiency in the bloodstream, which will kill cows quickly if they are not administered an emergency intravenous calcium treatment.

During the dry period when dairy animals do not secrete milk and do not lose those large amounts of calcium daily, the nutrition requirements are quite different and the animals do not require as much cation. In fact, just the opposite is true.

The same is valid for male animals, which do not secrete large amounts of cations because they do not give milk. Serious damage can occur to them, including kidney stones, when a change of ration content is not implemented, because the animals are trying to get rid metabolically of the unwanted, unneeded and surplus cations, while they have a shortage of anions or acid-producing feeds such as grass, grass hay, grass silage, grass haylage, starchy feeds, sulfate, chlorides, etc.

Customer Appreciation Day Offers Pesticide Courses, New Equipment

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Hundreds of Lancaster County farmers on Tuesday attended a Customer Appreciation Day as part of an Open House Week at Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc., in Lititz.

The annual customer appreciation day features speakers on issues of interest and importance to farmers and also includes presentations and large indoor machinery displays by representatives from the manufacturers of the equipment retailed by Binkley & Hurst, and others who provide related services.

Keynote speaker for the morning seminar was Mike Brubaker, a private consultant and agronomist who operates Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service, out of Lititz.

Michael Brubaker

Brubaker arranged to have Luke Burkhardt, a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture agronomic products inspector, provide seminars which qualified attendees for two core points and one catagory point toward certification or recertification of their pesticide application permit.

Also, Brubaker talked about residue management and how it relates to conservation plans, which, he said are expected to be made more and more attractive to have.

Currently, conservation plans are required by the federal government to be made by those who farm or own land considered highly erodible. The definition of highly erodible land takes into account the soil type and slope of the land, not necessarily by the present condition of the land.

Also, conservation plans are required by the sod-buster provisions in the farm bill which targeted.

In addition, Brubaker reviewed possible nutrient management legislation (see Lancaster Farming, Feb. 8 issue, Volume 37, No.13) that is currently in the state Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Burkhardt also showed slide presentations on pesticide applications safety.

learning to deal with both people and communications. They hope to pass all they are learning to other FFA members. And he says they want to stress to both local chapters and the media, that technology is a big part of today's FFA.

Paul is also a voting member of the state FFA board of directors and the teacher representative of the state board's western region. He is the teacher of vocational agriculture in the Berlin-Brothersvalley School District and advisor to the Berlin-Brothersvalley Chapter of the FFA.

"Quoting FFA membership numbers aired from a Frostburg, Md. radio station, the officers say that the Pennsylvania FFA membership is eight thousand. In the United States, FFA is three hundred-thousand strong. Because they were on a tight schedule — precise almost to the minute — the interview closed after about 45 minutes. The four men climbed into Paul's sporty-looking, green sedan that looked immaculate despite the winter season, and headed south into western Maryland for their third media stop of the day.

thing that captures the imagination of people and really sells product. We have to push product. I compliment Pennsylvania. When I enter Pennsylvania from Ohio there are half a dozen billboards that promote dairy products. I compliment what you're doing here, but nationally it's just not enough."

In addition to advertising, Buffington touched on farmers uniting to buy supplies wholesale. Or, he said, consider network marketing or becoming a dealership or supplier as a way to cut your costs and increase income.

Concerning financing, Buffington cautioned against using credit cards. "The average savings in America is less than $500 per person. In Japan, it is over $50,000 per person. It is very important to develop a financial philosophy for the future so we do not pay for things twice."

Buffington, who works with over 300 farmers across the United States, encouraged farmers to take a hard look at income and expenses. "I saw a new definition of a farmer. It's frustrating, but true and I wish I could change it. A farmer is a person outstanding in his field who is asked to feed the world with enough money to starve his family. The only way I figure the American farmer can make it is either by raising his income or cutting his expenses, or do both."

Bull To Test

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — 7H4216 Londondale Swind Master-ET, a young sire bred by Dennis London of Punxsutawney, has been chose to senter a sire sampling system for Select Sires artificial insemination cooperative.

The selection for Master was made based on pedigree. He is a Southwind son and a Very Good, 87-point dam with an Excellent mammary. The grandam is a Very Good, 88-point cow with three lactation records showing a production in excess of 34,000 pounds of milk, 1,270 pounds of fat and 1,100 pounds of protein.

More Than 200 Ultraflo® Systems Have Been Sold In The Northeast Since 1985 - That's Over 14 Million Birds!

We've freed over [illegible] of top egg producers from their CHAINS*
Here are the facts why ULTRAFLO® outperforms chain feeders
FEED SAVINGS. Customers report 1/2 to 2 lbs. per 100 birds/day—over $10,000 per year saved on a 100,000-bird house. Year after year!
TROUGH DESIGN. High tensile steel for strength. No feed holdup or waste like chain trough.
NO BLOCKAGES of feed, due to auger design. Chain lets birds pick over feed while feeder runs.
REPAIR & MAINTENANCE. Ours needs the least of all feeders. Only splicing with auger connector, and no ventilations corners or chain guides to replace. Saves money and time year after year.

SIMPLE OPERATION. "Push-Pull" Power Units with low HP motor are located along the feeder line as needed. Have hardened steel gears for trouble-free life. Microprocessor control lets you program feeding time to the second.

EASY AUGER CONNECTOR. Allows fast and simple installation, also quick and easy repair of auger if ever necessary. Auger and trough are both warranted 5 full years. Chain feeders are not.

Egg producers have been putting up with obsolete chain feeders far too long. Now there's a better way: Chore-Time's proven ULTRAFLO Cage Feeding System. Since introduction, more than 80% of the top 54 egg producers* have gone to ULTRAFLO. A lot of smaller ones have too.

They've all looked at the advantages and chosen ULTRAFLO. That's because it makes them more profitable. Total egg production and egg size—these are the best benefits of our complete feeding system.

Why not check out the facts for yourself? Contact us now—or ask any producer who owns ULTRAFLO.

Because the only negative comments about our feeding system come from our competition—not from our customers.

MILK CHECK

THOMAS JURCHAK
Dairy Specialist
Lackawanna County

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — After dropping 38 cents in December, the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series took another dip of 39 cents in January, dropping it to $11.71. But that's still $1.55 better than last year and $1.77 above the support price for manufacturing grade milk.

Cheese prices dropped another five cents but most of that came the first two weeks of January and have held pretty steady since then.

Cheese inventories are considerably lower than a year ago and even though sales are not great, present prices may hold until the normal inventory building starts with the spring flush.

Support prices on butter and powder were tilted again by the Commodity Credit Corporation to favor powder.

Butter prices were dropped 11 cents to 87 cents on January 17 and powder prices increased six cents to 91 cents. This dropped market prices of butter to 85 cents in January and had some impact on the M-W price but will be more of a factor in February.

Further drops in the M-W are expected but the worst seems to be behind us.

Cheese and powder prices are expected to stay above their support prices and butter is about as low as it can go.

All of these changes of butter prices in the last few years to stimulate sales have produced a butterfat differential below 10 cents and the last time that happened was in 1976.

It's still pretty much a milk supply problem. There seems to be more than enough in most areas including the Northeast. Without increases in fluid sales, it has become a buyer's market, but so far the market for manufactured dairy products is carrying the load.

However, you're on thin ice and predictions are difficult. If last year's drought is to affect the milk supply it will have to show up soon.

Farm Prices

And so far it hasn't shown up in Federal Order 2 with receipts in January reaching a high not seen since 1986, and average daily deliveries per producer setting a record for the month.

However, the full impact of a 79-cent drop in the M-W in three months hasn't yet been reflected in farm prices so the blend price for January was $12.97 for 3.5 percent milk at the 201-210 mile zone.

That's 37 cents less than December but $1.86 better than last January.

Total milk in F.O. 2 in January was 16 million pounds or two percent more than last year, while Class I sales were the same. It indicates that the supply problem mentioned earlier exists here in the Northeast also.

This sends more milk to manufacturing which lowers dairy product prices that are the basis for your milk prices.

In January, the Class I price at $14.90 was only two cents lower than December and kept your blend price up. This will drop 77 cents to $14.13 by March so you can expect the full impact of the lower M-W by then.

For February, the Class I price will be down 38 cents to $14.52 and the Class II price down 30 cents to $12.20. That makes up 56 percent of the pool.

The Class III price or 44 percent of the pool will change with the M-W for February.

Looking Ahead

With last year's prices starting low and ending high, it's easy to say the first half of 1992 will be better than 1991.

From January to June last year the average F.O. 2 blend price was only $10.95 and we're starting 1992 about $2 higher, so an average of a dollar more for the first half looks pretty safe.

It's the second half of 1992 that's difficult for the forecasters. There have been no signs of reduction in milk supplies because of lower prices. What we lose in cow numbers we make up in production per cow. One producer quits another one expands.

Adding to the forecasting problem are changes in the system already adopted or expected this year.

The New England and Mid Atlantic F.O.s already have a new Class IIIA price for milk used to make butter and powder; producer assessments will be increasing and the M-W may be replaced to calculate the Basic Formula Price.

If all that isn't enough, then try to predict the rate of recovery for the national economy that will certainly affect your milk prices.

Looking Back

Now that 1991 is history, we can look at the prices to see how they measure up to the past.

Last year the M-W started at $10.16 in January and peaked at $12.50 in October. In 1990 it was just the opposite starting at $13.94 in January and dropping to $10.19 in December.

In 1989 the pattern was back to a low in the spring of $10.98 and a high of $14.93 in December.

This is the roller coaster that everyone talks about, but produced by market conditions some of which you may never see in combination again.

However, if you look at yearly averages it may be easier to see from the top of the roller coaster.

The average M-W last year was $11.05, which seems low compared to $12.21 in 1990 and $12.37 in 1989, but right back to the $11.03 in 1988.

Last year it was $11.80, falling from $13.14 and $13.10 in 1990 and 1989, but right back to the $11.87 you got in 1988.

The point is, there was something very different about 1989 and 1990 that doesn't exist any more.

The reasons were mentioned often in this letter, and many other sources, in 1989, but have largely been ignored. It was a combination of a drought in the upper Midwest which affected the milk supply in Minnesota and Wisconsin — right where your milk prices start.

If the M-W hadn't gone to $11.93 in December 1989, or if the drought had been any where else, you may not have seen the impact.

Adding to the short milk supply was a drop in worldwide stocks of powder produced partly by cuts in production quotas for European common market dairymen.

Powder prices in world trade went so high we cleaned out our own surplus stocks and powder was hard to find here at any price.

In the meantime, we had given away all of our surplus butter and cheese in give-away programs at home. This means there were no CCC stocks to put on the market to keep a lid on prices so they went as high as the market would allow.

Butter prices were over $1.35 and cheese reached $1.60 a pound.

That's all behind us now and what should be considered more normal market conditions have returned.

That roller coaster ride is now referred to as price volatility which is not new to the dairy industry. We just hit higher peaks and lower valleys than ever before.

We'll always have seasonal changes in milk supply and certainly the weather will be a factor, but the same pricing system that gave you the low prices in January 1991 was the same system that gave you the high prices of December 1989, but it was the outside forces that made the difference.

Now, if you're looking for the prices of 1989, you'll have to get them on your own and without much government money. It sounds like a job for cooperatives or a super co-op.

IRS Gives Farm Preservation Flexibility

Samuel A. Goodley Jr.
Esquire

Editor's Note: The author is a tax attorney practicing in Lancaster and is the solicitor for the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board. In addition, he farms with his father in Chester County.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The combination of last year's drought and depressed milk prices has increased interest in the state's Agricultural Conservation Easement purchase program under which farm owners can sell their development rights to the commonwealth and/or county government for cash.

In effect, the landowner is cashing out on part of his farm capital investment by permanently restricting the use of his land to agriculture. The receipt of the easement proceeds by the landowner triggers a taxable event for federal and state tax purposes.

Until now, a landowner receiving cash for his easement likely had a tax bill to the state and federal governments to go along with it.

A recent private letter ruling by the Internal Revenue Service permits the use of a tax-deferred exchange with a farm owner participates in the state Agricultural Conservation Easement program and conveys development rights to the commonwealth and/or county.

Under the ruling, the IRS has decided that an Agricultural Conservation Easement, as defined in Pennsylvania's Agricultural Area Security Law, is an interest in real property that is "likekind" to an unencumbered fee simple interest in another farm for purposes of tax-deferred exchanges under section 1031 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Although a private letter ruling issued by the Internal Revenue Service can be relied upon only by the taxpayer who requested it, the issuance of the ruling is helpful because a farmer contemplating an exchange utilizing the value of his development rights can be reasonably certain that a similar ruling can be obtained on his behalf.

For the farm owner who desires to expand his operation but is reluctant to increase his debt load to buy more farm ground, the ruling means that he can, in effect, trade his development rights for another farm and defer recognition of gain that might occur if he simply sold the development rights for cash.

If the farm owner holds the replacement farm at death, his heirs receive a "stepped-up basis" in the farm and the income tax which has been deferred as a result of the exchange is avoided entirely.

Pennsylvania's Tax Code does not recognize tax-deferred exchanges. This means that the exchange, although tax-deferred for federal tax purposes, will be taxable for state tax purposes even if there is a full exchange with no cash received by the landowner.

The landowner need not use all of the easement proceeds in the exchange, that is, he can defer recognition of gain on part of the easement sale and take some cash away from the transaction. In such a case, the landowner will pay tax on the lesser of the realized gain or the net cash received.

A successful tax-deferred exchange can be accomplished only with careful legal documentation and adherence to all of the constraints imposed by IRS regulations.

In addition, agreements with the state and county may need to be modified to accommodate the requirements for an exchange.

Jersey Herd Averages Break Records

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — For the first time in history Jersey herds have passed the 20,000-pound mark for DHIR herd lactation average.

This list, recently released by the American Jersey Cattle Club, includes 795 herds which were enrolled on DHIR or TPE in 1991.

Among these herds is Sunny Day Farm, in Chester, S.C., which topped the list for milk with an average of 20,582 pounds. The farm is owned by Herbert, Betty and Herby Lutz.

Rated by average of protein production, the dozen Meri-Acres Jerseys was top with 768 pounds. The 40-head Sunny Day Farm recorded an average 705 pounds of protein.

On the other coast, Russell Dairy Farm, of Coquille, Oregon, took high honors for having the herd with the highest fat production. His 93-milking cows made an average of 960 pounds of fat. The farm is owned by Wayne, Mary, Tony and Marcella Russell.

Sunny Day Farm captured the second spot with a 950-pound fat production average.

The 1991 DHIR herd lactation average list contained 11 Jersey herds averaging more than 18,000 pounds of milk. Included was a herd of 230 animals on test. Six herds averaged more than 700 pounds of protein and three herds averaged at least 900 pounds fat.

PSU Product Judging Team Wins

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Seven College of Agricultural Sciences students practiced evaluating six classes of dairy products for eight weeks before participating in the Midwestern Regional Contest with ten other teams. When comparing evaluations of milk with dairy industry official judges, the three team members from Penn State received the first place trophy with the closest score for eight milk samples. Overall they were sixth of the eleven teams, led by Tammy Balthaser, who was 14th high individual. Other team members were: Aimee Eopechino, Ruth Bicher and Dan Berlin being the alternate.

Two weeks later the four team members participated in the 70th International Collegiate Dairy Products Evaluation Contest with sixteen other teams. After evaluating eight samples each of cottage cheese, cheddar cheese, strawberry yogurt, milk, butter and vanilla ice cream, they placed 13th of the 17 teams. Again Ms. Balthaser was the top Penn State judge, 30th of 51 contestants. Most of the funds for purchasing hundreds of samples for practicing, and costs of two van trips to Chicago were provided by Pennsylvania dairy processing companies. The 15 week spring course included 30 sessions and coaches Sidney E. Barnard, Professor of Food Science and Rodney A. Smeltz, Senior Research Technologist had more than 25 practice sessions in the fall. The experience of the students helps ensure that the dairy products you use are of good flavor, appearance, and body and texture.

Barbara Grumbine Appointed To U.S. Department Of Agriculture

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Barbara Grumbine, always a staunch supporter of family and farm, is moving to Washington D.C.

Grumbine is the newly assigned Northeast area director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

That means, she is responsible for the coordination and administration of all Federal Farm Programs in a 12-state area covering Connecticut, Delaware, Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virginia.

Barbara, her husband Dennis, and sons Daryl and Darren are well known in political and agricultural circles. It is the combination of ag and politics that has given Barbara the expertise needed for this government-appointed job.

"The government needs people who are sensitive to community needs in order to do what is best for constituents," Barbara said.

"My goal is to go to Washington and do the best job that I can for the people in the Northeast," Barbara said.

As far as Barbara has been able to determine, she is the first woman appointed to this position that serves as a liaison between the government and those who request public aid for drought, depressed milk prices, and other ag-related problems.

The Grumbines are well acquainted with the concerns of farmers since they have been farming for 22 years. They own a 150-head purebred hog and a 125-head Dorset sheep operation that has received national and state recognition for its champions. They also raise corn, wheat, beans, and hay on their 125-acre Myerstown farm.

Politically, Barbara and her husband Dennis have been involved at local, state, and national levels for 25 years. Barbara has served as past president of the Lebanon County Council of Republican Women, as Judge of Election, with Pennsylvania Ag Republicans, with the Farmers for Thornburgh campaign, with the Farmers for Scranton campaign, with the Reagan-Bush campaign, with the Farmers for Bush campaign, and attended the last three inaugurals.

Barbara recalls that when she first heard about the position, she knew right away that it was something that she wanted to do. She said, "It was too good of an opportunity to turn down."

The only drawback seemed to be the distance, which would require that she live in the D.C. area during the week.

Barbara, who has always made her family a priority, is a bit concerned that she will be separated from her family during the week, but her 19-year-old son Darien advised her, "Go for it, Mom. You've been here for us, now it's your turn."

After considerable discussions, the family decided that the move will not be detrimental to family life since Barbara will be able to come home weekends. "Besides, Barbara said, when I'm home, we don't get to see each other much in the evenings because we are involved in so many community organizations, school sporting events, and meetings."

The big attraction to accepting the position is that it gives Barbara a chance to do what she seems to do best — speak up for agriculture. "No matter what I do or where I am, I seem to always end up talking about agriculture," she said.

"Agriculture is our life — not just a way of life," she continued, "I'll do anything to promote agriculture."

While Barbara packs her bags to move to a Washington D.C. highrise, Dennis and the boys stack up cookbooks in an effort to develop some culinary skills.

But forget about cleaning. Dennis said, "As meticulous as she is with cleaning, we aren't even going attempt to tackle that."

Naturally, Barbara doesn't want to fill her weekends with cleaning either so she is hiring a housecleaner.

Although Barbara will be separated from her family during the week, she said that her personal goal remains the same. "To have a strong family unit and do what I can to support them. I'm old-fashioned in that respect."

Barbara applied for the government position in October. Several national committee people wrote letters on her behalf. Congressmen Bob Walker, Arlin Specter, and farm organizations such as the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau also backed Barbara's appointment.

On November 21, Barbara was interviewed by six people such as the administrator of ASCS, the U.S. Sec. of Agriculture, and President Bush's personnel director.

Scenes like these will be rare when Barbara moves to Washington D.C. while Dennis and the dog remain on the Myerstown farm.

Because the assignment is a political appointment, it may end in one year if a new President is elected. On the other hand the term may be extended indefinitely or it may be the stepping stone to a higher government appointment.

Barbara said a big part of her job will be to learn to know people in the 12-state area. But the immensity of meeting so many new faces doesn't bother Barbara who said, "I can be in a group of strangers and strike up a conversation with anyone."

Leadership skills have also been honed in Barbara through her six years of serving on the Friedens Lutheran Church council. At church, she has also been chairperson of the Social Ministry committee; served on Christian Education committee; acted as substitute Sunday School teacher, and as co-chairperson of Bible School for several years.

She is a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, American Farm Bureau, and Myerstown Junior Woman's Club, where she was past club president and is currently chairperson of the Homelife Committee. Twice Barbara was named the outstanding club woman of the year for her involvement in taking charge of projects and for her commitment to club projects and leaders.

She is legislative chairperson of the Lebanon County Federation of Women's Clubs, past president of the ELCO Football Boosters, past president of the Lebanon County Society of Farm Women, and on the Lebanon County 4-H Development Board.

Because of her strong agricultural and political background, Barbara was appointed Northeast area director of agricultural stabilization and conservation service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

She was past president of the Lebanon County Council of Republican Women, Eastern Star member, Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce member, and served as Jackson Township Assessor.

Recently, Barbara received her real estate license and works for Century 21. She has driven school bus full time for 10 years and part time for the past 10 years.

For the past nine years, Barbara has worked full and part time in the business co-owned with husband, Evergreen Tractor Company, Inc., a John Deere and Bobcat dealership located in Lebanon. In 1987, the John Deere Company recognized their dealership as being the largest John Deere Ag tractor dealer in Pennsylvania that year. In 1990, the business was named Bobcat Dealer of the Year.

When Dennis was 14, he started raising purebred hogs, which he continued on a larger scale after his marriage to Barbara. The Grumbines got into the sheep business when Daryl wanted a market lamb for a 4-H project. Immediately, the Grumbines became successful in showing sheep. Dennis explained that being in the hog business gave them an edge in the sheep business. He said, "If you understand livestock, you can move into another species and take a lot of the general knowledge with you."

"We are of the opinion that if you don't allow children to use their own ideas then they will lose their interest in farming," Barbara said. "When they are interested, they take the time and energy to read and find out what's happening."

Dennis said, "We've always taught them that if you want to do something badly enough you can achieve it."

The sons have achieved recognition in state and national shows from the swine and sheep industry. As they become to old to compete in 4-H, they are competing in open shows. Barbara said, "They (sons)

(Turn to Page B4)

Barbara will miss the 1783 Ironstone log house with its original log walls when she moves to a Washington D.C. highrise to begin her government appointed job. She will return to the farm weekends to be with her husband Dennis and two sons.

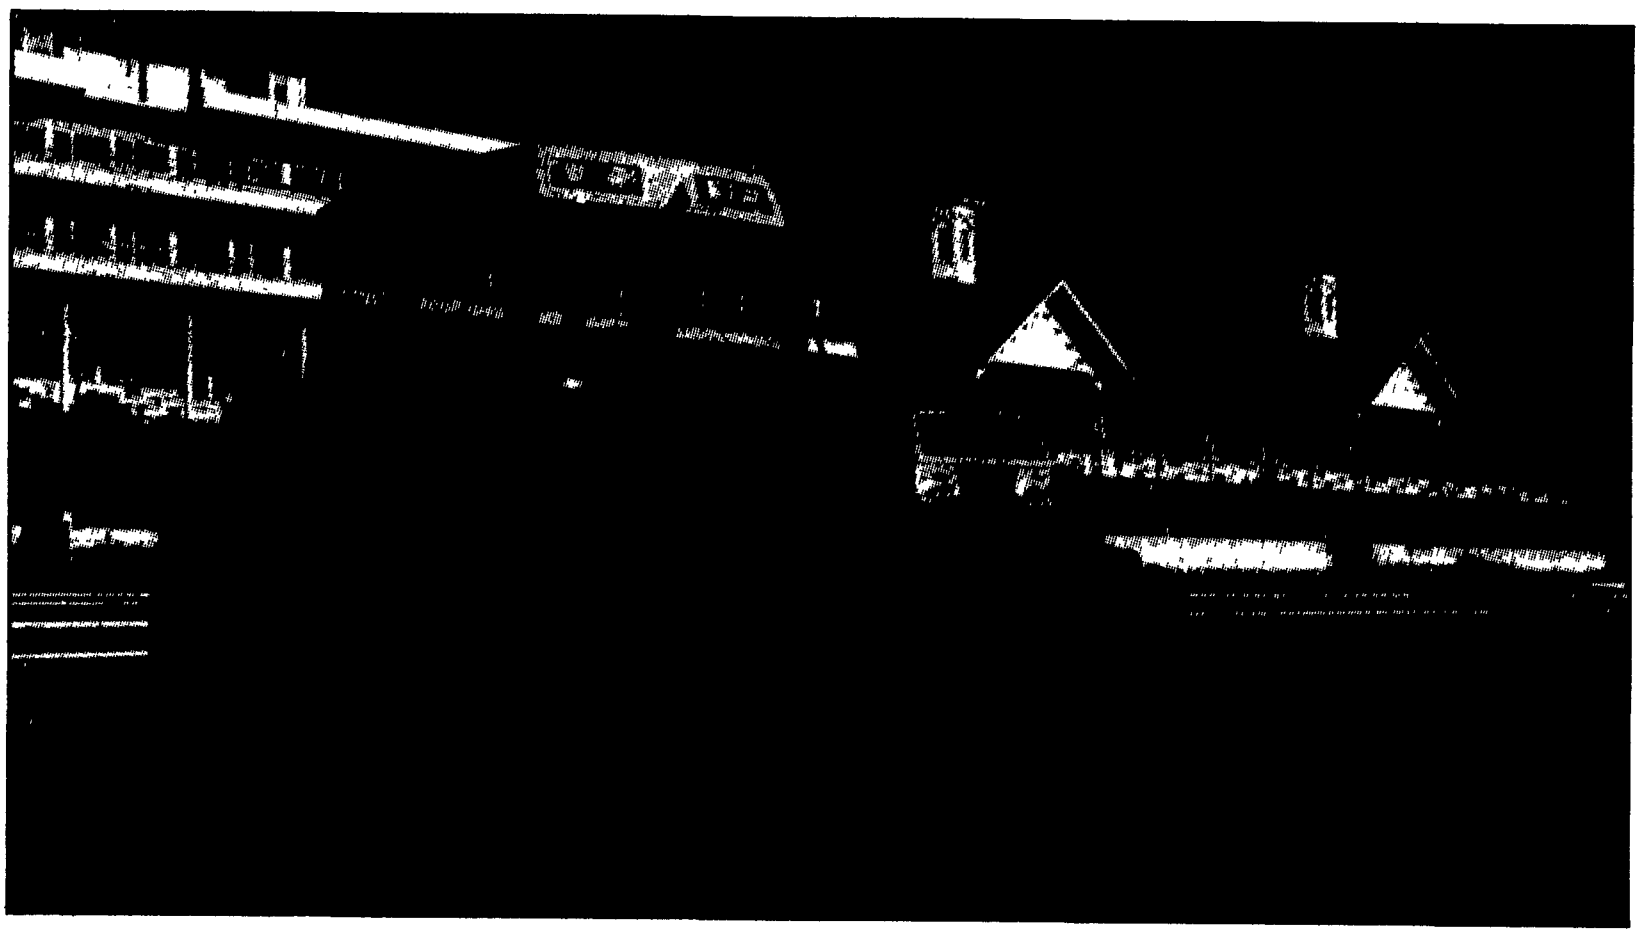
Best Values in New Equipment



If you were a jockey, this would be Secretariat.

Power, speed, performance ... the best of its kind. That's what you think of when someone mentions a famous Thoroughbred like Secretariat. And it's what you get in Case International MAXXUM™ tractors at 77, 86 and 94 PTO horsepower (57, 64 and 70 kW).

Built with farmers like you in mind. MAXXUM tractors are in a class by themselves, with the features farmers like you demand: Plenty of glass for an unobstructed view. A forward/reverse shuttle shift and optional powershift transmission to make you more productive. Optional creeper speeds for added versatility. Quiet, comfortable cabs to make long days go easier. Power and traction to handle more work than you've ever done with this size tractor. But that's not all.

Put a Thoroughbred to work for you. You may not be a jockey. But as a farmer, you need a tractor that performs like a Thoroughbred day after day, season after season. You need a MAXXUM tractor. Ask your Case IH dealer to bring one out to your farm so you can put it through its paces.

Have You Heard?

FOOD SAFETY STARTS AT HOME

KITCHEN CLEAN-UP — Don't forget that kitchen surfaces that have touched raw meat or poultry may be contaminated with bacteria which may cause food poisoning. Most food safety experts recommend using two separate cutting boards — one for meat and one for produce. That way you won't be able to cross contaminate foods as you prepare them. If you take meat or poultry from your kitchen to your grill, remember that you either need to wash and rinse the plate you carried them on or use a clean one to take them to the table. This holds true for any cooking forks or spatulas you used during the cooking process.

Take stock of your kitchen and toss any wooden items such as cutting boards, spoons and meat mallets. It is not possible, even with automatic dishwashing, to thoroughly clean and sanitize wooden utensils. Substitute hard plastic or metal accessories and acrylic cutting boards. These latter items can be sanitized, after washing and rinsing, with a solution of two to three teaspoons of household chlorine bleach in one quart of water, followed by a cold water rinse.

To store perishable food safely you need a thermometer to test the effectiveness of your refrigerator and freezer. Keep your refrigerator between 34 and 40 degrees F. The freezer should always be below 0 degrees F. You may need to adjust the temperature control setting if you have an unusually large amount of food stored. The temperature danger zone is between 40 degrees F. and 140 degrees F., when bacteria multiply at an alarming rate. Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold to avoid this zone. Foods stored in a freezer above 0 degrees F. will not spoil, but their quality will deteriorate rapidly.

Canned foods should be kept in a cool, dry place and used within 12 to 18 months. Never store canned goods in places with extreme temperatures, such as over the stove, under the sink, in your garage, or in a damp basement. Canned goods with dents or bulges can make you sick, so avoid them. Cans that stick to the bottom of cupboard shelves may have slow leaks and should be thrown away. A good rule of thumb is "when in doubt — throw it out."

HINTS FOR BETTER HYGIENE — The three most important rules for food handling hygiene are wash your hands, wash your hands, and wash your hands! Wash your hands in warm soapy water before and after every step in the food preparation process. Kitchen hand towels should be used for drying clean hands only — never to remove food from your hands.

Don't forget to clean under your fingernails. Germs love to hide there. Keep a small nail brush at the kitchen sink to help remind you to scrub your nails. Large or ornate jewelry may also trap dirt and food particles and carry them to food and equipment, so remove this kind of jewelry before you start to work with food.

Can openers regularly spread the food and bacteria tucked away in those tiny crevices, so wash them often. Keep appliances clean by wiping up spills right away. All kitchen equipment should be kept clean and in good repair so that germs will not gather in broken or chipped places and multiply.

Use a clean spoon whenever you want to taste or sample food. And of course, wash any flatware or other utensils that fall on the floor. Also, always wash any flatware that has been on your table even if it has not been used.

Remember to follow these food safety tips I have shared with you in this column as well as in last week's column and you should avoid food-borne illness. If, despite your best efforts, food poisoning occurs, mild symptoms can be treated with plenty of fluids and rest.

Barbara Grumbine

got competitiveness from their father and love and encouragement from their mother to work hard."

Although Barbara did not grow up on a farm, she said, "I had no trouble adjusting to farm life because I was not a stranger to hard work. We had eight children in our family so I knew how to raise a big garden."

Barbara helped with the daily aspect of livestock care until the boys were old enough. She continues to take livestock to the auction, help with the field work, especially hay raking, and is in charge of the bookkeeping.

During lambing season, the Grumbines usually stay up until 1 a.m., then set the alarm and get up at 3 a.m. to check on the sheep.

The sheep are pastured until November 1, then kept in barns until the middle of May. Rams and ewes that are used for showing are kept on grain. Although the feed for the pure-bred hogs (Yorkshires, Hampshires, and Berkshires) are fed with feed made on the farm, sheep feed is purchased except for creep feed.

The Dorsets lamb twice a year. At this point only 25 percent of the flock lamb in the fall. The Grumbines would like to see that percentage jump to 50 percent since there are not as many problems caused by flies and hot weather in fall. The drawback about fall lambing is that usually there are not as many multiple births.

The Grumbines' oldest son Daryl is 19 and a sophomore at Kutztown State University. Darien, 16, is a junior at Eastern Lebanon County High School.

Daryl does all the shearing on the Grumbine flock in addition to custom shearing.

Although Barbara will have little day-to-day work on the farm, she said, "I'm supporting the farm with working in Washington."

Her apartment will be within walking distance to her job, about 10 blocks.

She intends to focus on doing the best job possible for agriculture. Her family has a big influence in this desire because she hopes her sons will continue farming. She said, "I want to do whatever I can to assure that they can farm by promoting good policies for ag."

As far as long term goals, Barbara said, "I keep my options open. You never know what will come your way."

AGCO ALLIS
5600 SERIES TRACTORS

UTILITY VERSATILITY

The AGCO Allis 5670 and 5680 utility tractors offer fuel efficiency, reliable drawbar and PTO power, and excellent maneuverability in the 63-72 PTO hp range. They're also backed by a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty.

- Air- and oil-cooled diesel reliability. The 4-cylinder, air- and oil-cooled diesel engine delivers 63 PTO hp in the 5670 and 73 PTO hp in the 5680, both with a 22% torque rise. It also eliminates components that cause downtime in liquid-cooled engines. Plus, it is among the best in fuel consumption tests
- Lots of speed choices. The synchropower transmission with synchro-reverser offers 12 forward and 12 reverse speeds, planetary final drive and a self-adjusting, hydraulically-actuated clutch. The optional transmissions include 16 forward and 16 reverse with creeper speeds and a dual-speed of 24 forward and 12 reverse speeds. Both tractor models are available as either 2WD or AWD.
- PTO power to do more. The independent PTO operates at 540/1,000 rpm with 6- and 21-spline shafts and a hydraulically-actuated wet PTO clutch. The Category II/I 3-point hitch has a convenient rear remote control and is equipped with telescopic stabilizers. Optional telescopic lower links are available.
- Quality features put you in control. The 5600 Series tractors ride on premium Goodyear* radial tires. They have hydrostatic power steering, hydraulically-actuated wet disc brakes, and a mechanically-actuated differential lock. AWD models have four-wheel brakes for 40% better braking and an operator controlled front differential lock for tighter turns.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

As safe as we all think the microwave is for children, I would like to share with you an accident that happened at our house recently involving three children ages 7, 8 and 10 making microwave oatmeal. An accident occurs when the dish becomes too hot, is dropped to the floor, and the oatmeal splatters out onto the three kids' pants. As each child screams, from across the room you wonder what on earth happened. When the oatmeal splattered on their pants, the seven-year-old received third degree burns (the size of a saucer) on her leg. One cup of oatmeal, three children burned, and still half of it landing on the refrigerator door. The heat from the oatmeal made a steaming effect on their pants, resulting in a worse burn than if the oatmeal had hit their bare legs. A lesson is to be learned from this. Fire rarely results from a microwave, but the burns can be even more devastating.

Another friend related that her child got severe burns from opening a bag of microwave popcorn. The steam caused third degree burns to the little boy's face. If anyone has microwave tales, please submit them to the paper. I would like to know about them.

Another thing to remember when you're cooking meat in the microwave is to trim away the fat so that the grease doesn't burn you. For example, when you are preparing a simple meat sauce, cook the meat in a strainer with the strainer in a dish. This way the grease drains through the holes in the strainer.

Sloppy Joe Meat Sauce

1 - 10¾ ounce can condensed tomato soup
2 tablespoons water
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
6 hamburger buns, split and toasted
1 pound ground beef
1 medium onion, finely chopped (½ cup)
¼ teaspoon pepper

Crumble ground beef into a strainer into a 2 quart casserole; add onion. Microwave, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 minutes. Stir once to break up meat. Drain off fat. Stir in pepper, liquid, and seasoning into the cooked ground beef in the casserole. Microcook, covered, on 50 percent power (medium) for 20 minutes; uncover and microcook on 50 percent power (medium) for 10 to 12 minutes more or until of desired consistency, stirring at least once during cooking. Serve on bread or pasta. Top with garnish. Makes 6 servings.

Stuffed Cabbage Rolls

⅓ cup cornbread stuffing mix
⅛ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
¼ pound bulk pork sausage
¼ pound ground pork
½ cup tomato sauce
1 tablespoon water
¼ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
¼ teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
4 large cabbage or romaine leaves; or 8 small cabbage or romaine leaves
1 beaten egg
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 stalk celery, finely chopped
¼ teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ cup water

For sauce, in a nonmetal bowl, stir together tomato sauce, 1 tablespoon water, sugar, basil and oregano. Microcook covered on 100 percent power (high) for 1½ minutes. Set aside.

Remove center vein of cabbage or romaine leaves, keeping each leaf in one piece. Place leaves in a 12x7½ x2" baking dish. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Microcook covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 3 minutes or until leaves are limp.

For filling, stir together egg, chopped onion, chopped celery, salt, pepper, breading and seasoning. Add meat, mix well. Divide meat mixture into four equal portions. Place one portion of meat mixture on each cabbage or romaine leaf. If using small leaves, overlap 2 leaves for each portion. Fold in sides. Starting at unfolded edge, roll up each leaf, making sure folded edges are included in roll.

Arrange rolls in a 12x7½ x2" baking dish. Pour ¼ cup water over rolls. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Microwave covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 14 to 17 minutes, rotating the dish a half turn after 8 minutes. Remove rolls to a serving dish. Reheat sauce, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 1½ minutes or until warmed through. Spoon some sauce over rolls, pass the remaining sauce.

Host Families Needed

PITTSBURGH (Allegheny Co.) — American farm families are being asked to host young visitors from Europe and South America who are offering to help out during the coming summer months.

Farm families with an interest in learning more about this not-for-profit project are invited to contact the program director, Mrs. Penny Tarplin, International Farmstay Project, 128 North Craig Street, Pittsburgh, PA 15213; Phone: (412) 621-FARM.

These visitors are between 19 and 29 years old and they will be arriving from Finland, Germany, Brazil, Netherlands, Spain and Portugal as well as from other countries. They are both males and females and are not, for the most part, from farm backgrounds. But they are quite serious about making a real contribution with their volunteer services, will rise early and help out with whatever chores need to be performed.

They are also anxious to improve their English skills and to make friends in America. They may remain in America for one, two or three months and are protected by comprehensive health and accident insurance.

They will fly to the airport nearest to their farm hosts. Host families may specify male or female and may indicate a country of choice, but this is not always possible to arrange.

The Farmstay Visitors have submitted detailed applications including photographs and identifying their interests and backgrounds.

This will be the fourth summer of placements for the International Farmstay Project and Host Families with dairy, beef, horse, sheep, and fruit or vegetable produce can participate.

Butter And Noodles Campaign

ARLINGTON, Va. — The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board, American Butter Institute and the Hershey Pasta Group, a division of Hershey Foods, have united for a Butter and Noodles promotion to coincide with the Lenten Season.

The goal is to increase butter sales by an additional 182,000 pounds during the run of the campaign, March 1 through May 31. A one-page insert will be in Sunday newspapers throughout the country on March 1, featuring the slogan, "Taste the Real Goodness."

By sending in the UPC symbol from a package of butter as well as from one package of Hershey noodles which are marketed under four brand names depending on the region, consumers will receive a 16-page recipe booklet featuring butter and noodle recipes and a coupon for a free package of noodles.

The promotion is another activity coming out of the industrywide Butter Task Force which is composed of NDB, state and regional promotion groups and manufacturers.

NDB is matching campaign costs with Hershey up to $300,000. The promotion includes an insert with a redemption coupon in Sunday newspapers, the recipe booklet and in-store materials. Those materials will be tear-off pads with redemption coupons and four recipes, and end-of-aisle display cards.

The Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board is funding a retailer display contest to generate extra display space for butter in supermarkets. Butter and pasta brokers used a two-sided sell sheet to announce the promotion to retailers and emphasize the profitability of butter and pasta.

America's dairy farmers are funding this campaign through the National Dairy Board. The National Dairy Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, was established to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry's position in the marketplace.

Sizzling Bacon Recipes

Bacon isn't just for breakfast. It's only the start of the sizzling flavor you get when you add bacon to favorite dishes from appetizers to salads.

Recently, more than 1,500 Americans were busy sizzling up a variety of dishes accented with the crisp taste of bacon. It was part of the National Live Stock and Meat Board second annual "Makin' Bacon" recipe contest. In addition to our readers' contributions, the prize-winning recipes are included in this column.

Remember, regardless of the time of day or year, bacon is always a perfect accompaniment to any meal. Add some sizzle to your meals by trying these recipes.

IMPOSSIBLE BACON PIE

12 slices bacon, crisply cooked and crumbled
1 cup shredded natural Swiss cheese
⅓ cup chopped onion
2 cups milk
4 eggs
1 cup Bisquick baking mix
¼ teaspoon pepper

Grease 10-inch pie plate. Sprinkle bacon, cheese, and onion in pie plate.

Beat remaining ingredients 15 seconds in blender on high speed or until smooth. Pour into pie plate. Bake at 400 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 5 minutes.

If you don't have a 10-inch pie plate, a 9-inch one will work if you make a few minor changes in the recipe: Use 1½ cups milk, 3 eggs, and ¾ cup Bisquick.

BROCCOLI SALAD

1 bunch broccoli
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 purple or white onion, chopped
8 slices bacon, fried and crumbled

Dressing:

½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

Wash and cut broccoli buds and stems less than ½ -inch diameter. Add onion, shredded cheese, and crumble bacon. Mix mayonnaise, sugar, and red wine vinegar. Pour over broccoli mixture and marinate several hours or overnight.

CANADIAN BACON BEAN BAKE

1-pound can pork and beans in tomato sauce
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
¼ cup catsup
2 teaspoons prepared horseradish
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Pour into a 10x6x1½ -inch baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Arrange 4 orange slices ¼ -inch thick and 8 slices Canadian-style bacon, about ¼ -inch thick on top. Sprinkle with ⅓ cup brown sugar. Dot with 2 tablespoons butter. Bake for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

BACON N' BABY TATER SALAD

1 pound baby red potatoes
6 cloves garlic, peeled and halved
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon chopped fresh rosemary
Salt and pepper as desired
1 pound bacon, cut crosswise into 1-inch pieces
¼ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons snipped chives
1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
½ pound fresh green beans, trimmed, halved crosswise and steamed until tender
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
6 cherry tomatoes, quartered

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Pierce potatoes with a fork and place in shallow roasting pan. Toss with garlic, 1 tablespoon olive oil, rosemary, salt and pepper. Cover with foil and bake at 350 degrees for 60 minutes; stir every 15 minutes.

Fry bacon in large skillet until crisp. Drain well on paper towels; crumble. Set aside. Drain all but 2 tablespoons bacon drippings. Whisk in ¼ -cup olive oil, vinegar, chives, and mustard; heat thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper; keep warm.

When potatoes are cool enough to handle, quarter and place in medium bowl with green beans and parsley. Pour on warm dressing; toss gently to mix well. Stir in bacon and tomatoes. Serve warm or at room temperature. Serves 6.

Herbed Bacon, Red Pepper, and Goat Cheese Tart is a terrific way to sizzle up an appetizer. It was the first place winner in the "Makin' Bacon" recipe contest sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

BACON MONTE CRISTO FRENCH TOAST

12 strips bacon
½ cup ricotta cheese
¾ cup peeled, chopped Rome or Granny Smith apple
½ teaspoon cinnamon
8 slices firm white bread
1 cup skim milk
3 eggs, beaten
Apple slices
Maple syrup

Cook bacon until crisp. Drain well on paper towels, crumble.

Combine bacon, ricotta, apple and cinnamon. Spread mixture on 4 bread slices; top with remaining bread slices.

In shallow dish, combine milk and eggs. Dip each side of each sandwich in milk mixture. Cook each sandwich in greased skillet over medium heat until golden (about 3 to 4 minutes per side). Garnish with apple slices and serve with maple syrup. Serves 4.

MEXICAN BREAKFAST B.L.T.

12 slices bacon
2 cups chopped cherry tomatoes
½ cup fresh cilantro leaves
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ teaspoon salt
4 English muffins, split and lightly toasted
¼ cup fat-free mayonnaise
1 cup shredded pepper jack cheese

Preheat broiler. Cook bacon, either in microwave or on stovetop method until crisp. Drain well on paper towels; cut each slice in half. Set aside.

In medium bowl, combine tomatoes, cilantro, onion, and salt. Spread muffins with mayonnaise; arrange on cookie sheet. Top with tomato mixture; reserve bacon and the cheese. Broil six inches from heat source just until cheese melts, about 2 minutes. Serves 4.

HERBED BACON RED PEPPER GOAT CHEESE TART

1 refrigerated unbaked folded pie crust
1 pound bacon, cut crosswise into 1-inch slices
1 medium onion, chopped
2 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed
1 cup whipping cream
3 eggs
4 ounces goat cheese
¼ cup minced fresh basil
¼ cup minced fresh parsley
Salt and pepper as desired
7-ounce jar roasted red peppers; drained and cut into ½ -inch pieces

Preheat oven to bake pie crust according to package directions. Arrange pie crust in 10-inch tart pan with a removable bottom; press against sides and trim excess dough. Place on a cookie sheet and bake according to package directions for unbaked pie crust. Set aside.

Reset oven to 375 degrees. Brown bacon until crisp. Drain well on paper towels; crumble. Reserve 1 tablespoon bacon drippings; saute onion and garlic in the drippings in a small skillet until tender, about 3 or 4 minutes.

Blend sauteed mixture with cream, eggs, and goat cheese until smooth. Add basil, parsley, reserved crumbled bacon, salt and pepper; blend just to mix well.

Pour half of bacon mixture into prepared tart crust. Top with red pepper pieces, then with remaining bacon mixture. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until puffed and browned. Cool slightly (about 10 minutes) before slicing into 12 wedges for appetizers. Serves 6.

Whether you are looking for a novel brunch or unique dinner menu, try turning to a popular breakfast staple — pancakes.

Ham 'n Apple Pancakes combine biscuit baking mix, milk, and eggs with smoked ham and cheddar cheese for a hearty meal. These tempting, hot-from-the-griddle pancakes are topped with a scrumptious apple pie filling. Complement your menu with a fruit salad.

HAM 'N APPLE PANCAKES

1 21-ounce can apple pie filling
2 cups biscuit baking mix
1 cup milk
2 eggs
¾ cup diced fully cooked smoked ham (about 4 ounces)
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons sliced green onions (with tops), if desired

Heat pie filling until hot; keep warm. Beat baking mix, milk, and eggs in large bowl with wire whisk or hand beater until smooth. Fold in ham, cheese, and onions. For each pancake, pour scant ¼ cup batter onto hot griddle. (Grease griddle if necessary). Cook until pancakes are dry around edges. Turn; cook until golden brown. Serve with warm pie filling. Makes 15 pancakes.

Free Milk With Your Cookies

COLUMBUS, OH— The all-time great team of milk and cookies has a new teammate for the annual American Dairy Association and Nabisco free milk promotion, NBA All Star and retired forward of the Philadelphia 76ers, Julius "Dr. J." Erving.

The promotion, which begins March 1, will feature Nabisco offering customers one free half gallon of milk at the checkout stand when they purchase a half gallon of milk and any two packages of Oreo cookies and/or Honey Maid Grahams. Mid East UDIA and other American Dairy Association member organizations will lend their marketing efforts to announce the promotion to the dairy and grocery industries and will provide camera-ready milk carton side panel art.

1992 NABISCO

The theme of the Nabisco-funded promotion is "The Original Dunkers," featuring the great dunking team of milk and cookies. And as part of the year-long celebration of the 100th anniversary of basketball, one of the original dunkers, Dr. J., will be the spokesman for the promotion.

The free milk offer will reach consumers in three ways: through mail-in certificates available at the point-of-purchase displays; from milk carton side panel art; and in a free-standing insert in Sunday newspapers, March 1. The latter is expected to reach more than 45 million consumers.

In addition to the free milk offer, consumers will be able to see how they measure up to Dr. J. when they send for a full-color growth chart poster of the 6-foot 7-inch legendary dunker. The poster is available by mail with the proofs-of-purchase of Oreos and Honey Maid Grahams and $4.95 plus $2 for postage and handling.

The Nabisco sales force will also install "FREE MILK" materials and large end-aisle displays in store cookie sections. One of the major pieces will be a life-size cutout of Dr. J. dunking Oreos in milk.

Other lively materials for the dairy aisle include colorful case flags and a banner featuring "The Original Dunkers" and tear pads for the free milk and the growth chart.

Mid East UDIA expects "The Original Dunkers" to score big with consumers. The 1991 free milk promotion proved to be a success for Nabisco and for dairy farmers. Consumers increased their purchases of Oreos and Honey Maid Grahams significantly and redeemed coupons for 864,100 free half gallons of milk.

Mid East UDIA is one of 25 state and regional member organizations and affiliated Dairy Council units of the dairy farmer-funded and directed United Dairy Industry Association. Mid East coordinates and implements dairy marketing programs on behalf of dairy farmers in Ohio, western Pennsylvania, and parts of West Virginia and northern Kentucky. These programs include advertising, retail and foodservice marketing, nutrition education, communications, and industry promotions.

Home-Based Business Seminar

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Do you have a desire to turn your craft or sewing skills into profit? Are you already working as a home-based business person? If so, Penn State Cooperative Extension's "Sewing and Crafts for Profit" seminar will be of interest to you.

Joyce Smith, Ohio State University clothing specialist, will discuss "Is Home-Based Business for You?" and "Marketing Your Product." Learn about "Legal Issues" and "Taxes and Record Keeping" for home-based businesses from Fred Davis, Penn State Cooperative Extension's Resource Management Agent. A "Business Plan" and "Pricing for Profit" are an important aspect of this venture as Winifred McGee, Penn State's small and home-based business agent, will share with the participants. Learn from other successful entrepreneurs during the panel discussion, and network with others who have an interest similar to your own.

This seminar is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and will be held at the Meyers Restaurant, Route 309, Quakertown. This one-day seminar is scheduled for Tuesday, March 17, 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Advanced registration by March 6, of $20 is required. This includes lunch, all materials, and .5 Continuing Education Units from Penn State University.

To receive registration material, contact Chester County Cooperative Extension by calling (215) 696-3500.

ANSWER — For the reader who wanted to make chalk, here is a recipe that is to be used on sidewalks, not black boards.

Sidewalk Chalk

6 egg shells
1 teaspoon flour
1 teaspoon hot water

On a smooth surface, using a smooth rock, grind washed and dried egg shells to a powder. (Shells grind best if membrane is removed from inside of shell). Discard larger pieces. Measure flour and water into a bowl. Add 1 tablespoon egg shell powder. Mix and mash until it sticks. Press into shape. Wrap in strip of paper toweling. Dry 3 days until hard.

ANSWER — Fern of Annville wanted to know how restaurants make pies that have 3- to 4-inches of meringue on top. Thanks to S. Ruth Witman, Elizabethtown, who sent in a recipe given to her by Mary Haldeman. And to Jane Jackson, Coudersport, for sending a recipe. Jane writes that egg whites should be at room temperature before beating and that 2 tablespoons water should be added for every egg white. However, we caution that the risk of salmonella poisoning from using raw eggs has caused USDA to say that eating raw eggs is unsafe. Pasteurized egg whites are available in selected supermarkets.

Meringue

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ cup water

Combine 2 tablespoons sugar, corn starch, and water. Cook until thick and clear. Cool slightly.

Beat 4 egg whites, ⅛ teaspoon salt, and ½ teaspoon vanilla, gradually adding remaining sugar until soft peak stage. Stir in cooled cornstarch mixture slowly, and continue beating until soft beaks form. Spread on top of pie. Bake 12 to 15 minutes in 350 oven or until golden brown.

ANSWER — Lisa Ishimuro, Pipersville, requested a recipe for a cherry pie with either a top crust or crumb crust. Thanks to Hazel Yoder, Belleville, for sending a recipe. She writes that the recipe is a combination of her mother and her mother-in-law's recipes. Her husband prefers this pie above all others.

Never Fail Crust

3 cups flour
1 cup lard
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
5 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon white vinegar

Cut shortening into flour and salt. Combine egg, water, and vinegar. Pour gradually into flour mixture and blend with a spoon until moistened. This is an easy crust to handle and can be rolled without toughening. Makes 2 large double crust pies.

Canned Berry Pie Filling

1 quart drained sour cherries
1 quart juice (juice that was drained plus water or raspberry juice)
1 cup sugar
½ cup clear-jel

Cook juice and sugar until almost boiling. Thicken clear-jel and add to juice slowly. When thickened, take off heat and add cherries. Cool and put at least 3 to 4 cups in a 9-inch pie.

ANSWER — Mary Wagner, McClue, requested a recipe to sugar cure ham and shoulders and bacon. Thanks to Eva Southard, Glen Rock, and Eli Stoltzfus, Lebanon, for sending recipes.

Sugar Cure
For 200-pound hog

4 pints salt
1½ pounds brown sugar
¼ pound pepper
¼ pound saltpeter
½ pint hot water

Put all ingredients in large container and mix water. Rub on hams and let lay for 4 weeks. Hang up and smoke.

Sugar Cure
For 150-pound meat

6 pounds salt
3 pounds brown sugar
8 ounces saltpeter
1 pound pepper

Dissolve saltpeter in small amount of water then mix all ingredients together in a big pan.

Rub mixture into meat. Place hams in cool place or in cellar on table or wide planks. Once a week, rub remaining mixture on ham. Store for 3 weeks. Smoke slowly until smoke is through meat.

PESTO BACON WEDGES

1 pound bacon, cut crosswise into 1-inch pieces
1 cup shredded smoked Gouda cheese or smoked Swiss cheese
1 small garlic clove, peeled
1½ cups fresh basil or parsley leaves
2 pieces sun-dried tomatoes in oil
4 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts
Leaf lettuce

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cook bacon until crisp. Drain on paper towels, crumble. Set aside ¼ cup bacon; spread remaining on bottom of lightly greased 8-inch square glass dish. Sprinkle cheese on top.

In a blender or food processor, mince garlic. Add basil and tomatoes and blend until basil leaves are finely chopped. Spoon teaspoonful of pesto mixture on top of cheese and gently spread evenly.

Combine eggs, milk, and mustard; pour over pesto center. Cool slightly. Cut into 12 rectangles, then cut each one diagonally. Place wedges on leaf lettuce to serve. Serves 6.

BACON DUMPLING SOUP

1¼ cups milk
2-ounces lean bacon slices
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 garlic clove
1 tablespoon chopped parsley, fresh
¼ teaspoon marjoram, diced
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
3 large eggs
1 cup flour
5 cups broth, beef or chicken
Flour, as needed

Remove crusts from bread. Put bread into a large bowl and add milk. Let soak for 2 hours. Fry bacon until crisp, drain, and chop finely. Peel and chop onion; peel and press garlic clove, put into bowl with milk and bread. Add seasonings, bacon and herbs and stir.

Add eggs and mix well. Sift flour and stir in until absorbed.

Heat broth in large saucepan. Shape dough into 1-inch balls, roll in flour so they don't fall apart when cooking. Add dumplings to hot broth. Cover and simmer for 15 minutes. Serve hot.

Molded Seafood Salad

2 cups tomato juice, divided
1 small package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 can shrimp or crab
2 teaspoons lemon juice
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup sliced green onion

Heat 1 cup tomato juice to boiling. In medium bowl, dissolve gelatin in hot tomato juice. When dissolved, add 1 cup cold tomato juice. Stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into a loaf pan or salad mold. Refrigerate until set. Unmold to serve.

ANSWER — Thanks Vivian Plasterer for sending a bread recipe that does not use any fat or egg, which was requested by a reader. Vivian writes that her family loves this recipe. Caution: although fat is not listed as an ingredient, a percentage of fat is found in buttermilk and sour milk.

Bread

2 cups thick buttermilk or sour milk
2 cups All Bran Cereal
1¼ cups brown sugar
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup raisins or chopped dates
⅓ cup chopped walnuts
2 cups flour

Pour buttermilk over bran cereal and let stand 10 minutes. Add sugar, baking soda, and salt; stir well. Mix raisins and nuts with flour. Stir into bran mixture. Pour into greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Bake in 350 degree oven for 1 hour or until done.

ANSWER — Fern of Annville requested a recipe for fried cabbage. Thanks to Margaret Nice, Halifax, for sending a recipe.

Fried Cabbage

Shred cabbage and place in skillet with a little water. Simmer until dry. Add salt and pepper. Add enough shortening to fry cabbage until lightly browned. Keep stirring cabbage so it does not burn.

ANSWER — Hazel Bair, Chambersburg, requested a recipe for corncob jelly. Thanks to Vivian Plasterer, Newburg, for sending a recipe that she said is delicious.

Corn Cob Jelly

12 sweet corn cobs
4 cups water
4 cups sugar
1 box fruit pectin
Red food coloring

Mix cobs and water; boil for 10 minutes. Measure 3 cups liquid and strain through cloth. Put into saucepan. Add 1 box fruit pectin and bring to a rolling boil. Add sugar and bring to a boil. Simmer for 3 minutes. Skim. Add 1 or 2 drops red food coloring for a pink color.

ANSWER — Eva Southard, Glen Rock, sent the following recipe for fried cabbage requested by Fern of Annville.

Fried Cabbage

Cut the cabbage very fine, as for slaw; salt and pepper, stir well, and let stand five minutes. Have an iron kettle smoking hot, drop 1 tablespoon shortening into it, then the cabbage, stirring briskly until quite tender. To one-half cup sweet cream, add three tablespoons vinegar. After the cream has been well stirred, pour over the cabbage and serve immediately.

Lancaster Extension Highlights Commodities, Activities

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — About 200 guests snacked on goodies handed out by commodity groups during the annual Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Association meeting held Thursday night.

The Lancaster County commodity groups that provided food for the annual social event the Poultry Association, Sheep and Wool Growers Association, Lancaster-Chester Swine Producers Association, Fruit Growers Association, Greenleaf Enterprises Incorporated, Honey Producers, the Dairy Industry.

Five new Extension directors were elected to three-year terms: Joyce Graybill, Mount Joy; Harvey High, Lancaster; Dorothy Charles, Lancaster; Emily Welk, Strasburg; and Lloyd Welk, Quarryville.

A slide presentation of the James Garber and Sons' Milton Grove farm honored the Garbers for their recent Master Farmer award.

In other business, the Extension presented awards to Bob Anderson, Extension agronomist, for 5 years, Anita Rhawn, nutrition advisor; Audrey Kelly, nutrition advisor 10 year, and Suzanne Schmalhofer, office manager for 25 years.

Three Extension board members received certificates for service. They were Larry High for three years; Helen Rohrer, six years; and Ed Zug for six years.

Jay W. Irwin, Lancaster County Extension Director Emeritus, told the audience about his six-month work in Poland.

Humans Battle Insects In Crop Wars

BELTSVILLE, Md. — We have met the enemy, and it has six legs.

In the Battle of Southern California, it is the tiny sweet-potato white fly, which devasted the region's fall vegetable crops — the latest struggle in the long-running war between humans and insects over food.

The news from the front is not all good.

"I guess the insects are winning," concedes Douglass R. Miller, head of research for the Systematic Entomology Laboratory at the U.S. Agriculture Department's research center here.

As much as 95 percent of the fall melon crop in California's Imperial Valley was lost last year to swarms of white flies so thick that they plastered windshields and lodged between farmworkers' teeth.

Other crops were savaged by the hungry creatures as well: citrus fruits, grapes, sugar beets, lettuce, cauliflower, broccoli, squash, cabbages and carrots.

With winter settled in and the insects retired from the field, scientists are using the cease-fire to figure out what to do next. Their first job has been to determine what they're up against.

"We suspect the white fly was introduced into the United States from somewhere else, and has no effective natural enemies here," Miller tells National Geographic. "There is also a remote possibility that it's something that changed into a whole new biotype once it got here, though we doubt that in this case."

A new biotype would be an insect that belonged to the same species (that is, it could mate with others and produce offspring) but would have different biological characteristics because of mutation or reorganization of genetic material.

These characteristics could be passed to successive generations, resulting in a new breed of insect that is impervious to existing insecticides or capable of overcoming natural resistances that have been built up in plants.

"In the case of the sweet-potato white fly, we're working very hard to try to find differences in appearance, and as yet we have not been able to find any," says Miller. "But there are some major differences in some of the enzyme systems and in terms of behavior."

Such clues are eagerly sought, as farmers and environmentalists alike increasingly demand less reliance on chemical pesticides such as DDT — banned in this country since 1971 for all but essential uses — to control bugs.

One promising approach to controlling insects such as the white fly is to find "good" bugs to wipe out "bad" ones.

"Most crop-damaging insects and weeds in the United States came from somewhere else, but left their natural enemies behind," says Richard Soper, who heads the Agriculture Department's research program on natural pest controls. "We want to turn the tables on the pests by bringing their worst adversaries to this country."

In 1991, U.S. Agriculture Department scientists overseas shipped a record 402,766 pest-fighting insects and mites into the United States. The bugs are aimed at helping control more than two dozen insect pests, as well as another enemy of agriculture: weeds.

Bugs are not released wholesale into the U.S. environment without careful study to ensure that they don't cause more harm than they were intended to alleviate.

Another line of attack is to help nature itself as it tries to keep marauding insects in check through plant evolution.

Over centuries of exposure in Europe, for example, rye has developed a genetic hostility toward a rye-loving insect known in this country as the Hessian fly.

The pest is believed to have been brought into the United States more than 200 years ago in the straw bedding of Hessian mercenaries hired by the British to fight in the Revolutionary War. George Washington routed the Hessians at Trenton, N.J., but their flies have plagued American wheat fields ever since.

Wheat varieties that genetically resist the feeding larvae have been used to fight the bug, says entomologist J.H. Hatchett, who heads an Agriculture Department research team in Manhattan, Kan. But some of those genes are losing their effectiveness because new strains of the fly can overcome the plant's resistance.

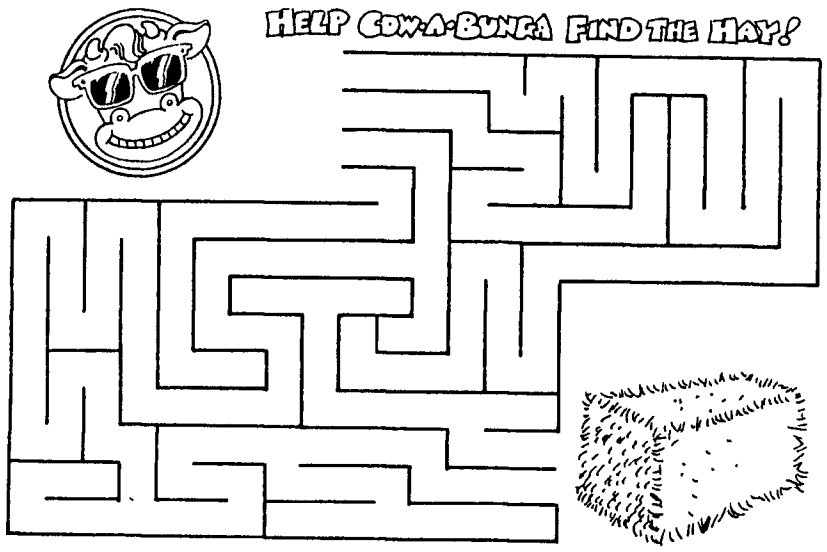
Hatchett's team is trying to assist the plant's natural defenses by transferring fly-resisting genes from rye to wheat, with the help of X-rays.

"We feel there's a possibility that, in the long run, rye genes may be more durable than those in wheat," Hatchett says.

"My personal view is that we should be looking toward the natural controls rather than chemical controls," says Douglass Miller. "But I do believe we'll always be using chemicals of some sort, because there are going to be organisms that we don't know enough about."

A vedalia ladybug lays eggs atop her lunch: a cottony cushion scale. The insect inside the gummy white sheath devastated California citrus groves in the late 19th century until farmers imported the ladybug from Australia. Ancient Chinese also used "good" bugs — ants to figh "bad" ones feeding on citrus.

The pistol on Utah farmer Tim Munns' hip does him little good as migratory grasshoppers descend upon him and some recently baled hay. In the age-old competition with insects for food, nature sometimes comes to the aid of humans by evolving insect-resistant crops. But hot conditions may produce a plague.



FACTS ABOUT BEEF

1. How many hamburgers does the AVERAGE American eat each year?
   a. 114
   b. 75
2. How many leather basketballs can be made from the hide of one steer?
   a. 5
   b. 12
3. How many stomachs does a cow have?
   a. 1
   b. 4
4. In what country was "hamburger" first made?
   a. Russia
   b. United States
   c. Germany

1. 114. The AVERAGE American eats 114 hamburgers a year according to U.S. Department of Agriculture research. We each also eat 80 hotdogs a year. Some people eat more than those numbers, some eat less. A recent poll by USA Weekend declared hamburger as America's national food!

2. 12. Twelve leather basketballs can be made from the hide of a steer. Hides are used to make many leather products we enjoy such as baseball gloves, shoes, belts, boots, purses and saddles.

3. 1. Cattle are RUMINANT animals. That means they have a stomach with four compartments. This allows them to eat feeds like grass and hay, which humans cannot. Cattle are "walking protein factories" which produce beef for humans from feeds that we cannot eat.

4. Russia. The people of Tartar (in Russia) liked their beef raw, chopped fine with salt and pepper. When their ships reached the German port of Hamburg, "Tartar Steak" found its way to Germany. Soon a German Chef cooked the "Tartar Steak" to make "Hamburg Steak". Many years later, in America, the chopped meat cooked Hamburg style became known as the "Hamburger".

Dorothy Caskey Heads Adams County Farm Women

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ASPERS (Adams Co.) — Since Dorothy Caskey joined Farm Women Society 3 of Adams County about 18 years ago, she has held every county office in the organization. She was also state treasurer for three years.

Through all her years of involvement with Farm Women, Dorothy is convinced that the organization is one of the best around. She said, "I think you will find that Farm Women members are generous, outgoing, and willing to help others. I made lots of new friends through working with county and state members."

Adams County has two societies with 25 members. Dorothy plans to change that. She said, "I want to form a new group this year. The southern and western end of Adams County is not represented in our organization. I think it is our fault because we haven't been getting the word out to them."

Through other agricultural-related groups, Dorothy is now telling them about Farm Women. "There seems to be interest in forming a new group," Dorothy said. Interested persons should contact Dorothy at (717) 677-7724.

Dorothy and her husband have been married 53 years.

"It's been a good life," she said. Their secret to 53 years of married bliss according to Dorothy is "Putting the Lord first in our life and living by his teachings."

She added, "Think positive, talk things over, be able to see the other person's point of view, and appreciate others."

The Caskeys have 9 children, 29 grandchildren, and 19 great grandchildren. Having so many family members have enabled the Caskeys "to see a lot of answers to prayer. I know that God answers prayer if you just turn it over to Him," Dorothy said. "We waited 16 years for one prayer to be answered."

Dorothy and her husband John farmed until 16 years ago. They now live on a corner of the farm that was turned into a fruit farm by the new owners. This is the first year that Dorothy has retired from packing fresh fruit for 19 years. She enjoys making crafts. With her husband, Dorothy enjoys a lot of camping in their motor home. This past year, they camped on the way to visit a daughter in Kentucky and another in Michigan.

Most of her activities involved church work and Farm Women meetings.

"Farm Women are always looking for ways to help the needy in our area," Dorothy said.

The group makes peanut butter and coconut eggs to sell at bazaars. They hold an annual hoagie sale and some personal money raisers. One of these was a calendar for Farm Women members. Each day on the calendar was marked with such things as "Put two cents in a jar for every window in your home." Or, "Put a nickle in the jar if you drank more than three cups today."

Although the calendar proceeds were not huge, members thought it was a lot of fun and the money did help with needs in the community.

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

2 cans string beans, drained
1 can undiluted cream of mushroom soup
Bread crumbs
French fried onion rings
¼ cup cheese, grated

Combine beans and soup in casserole dish.

Top with fresh bread crumbs. Bake in 350 degree oven for 20 minutes. Place French fried onion rings on top. Return casserole to oven long enough to warm onion rings. Sprinkle with grated cheese, if desired.

Dorothy Caskey
Adams Co. Farm Women president

The Society of Farm Women of Pennsylvania was founded October 14, 1914. Its purpose is to contribute to the power and influence of the farm home; to contribute to the community activity of farm women; to develop leadership and to promote better living and working conditions in the farm homes of Pennsylvania. The 16 county societies have a state membership of 3,371. Check this section weekly for a feature story on individual Farm Women presidents from Pennsylvania.

Lancaster Society 19

Lancaster Farm Women's Society No. 19 met Feb. 8 at the Landisville Church of God with Lou Loder as hostess. During the business meeting, Millie Eshelman and Hazel Stauffer gave reports about the State Convention.

The next meeting will be held at the Hempfield Church of the Brethren at 6:30 p.m. on March 12 with Betty Saylor serving as hostess. Mrs. Veronis will speak on the subject, "My Faith Journey."

Berks Society 4

Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 4 met at the Boyertown home of Marguerite Rush with eight members present. President Elsie Rothenberger conducted the meeting. In memory of charter member Lottie Burkefile, who died January 17, a reading was given "Safely Home."

A donation was made to Multi-Service yearly appeal. Orders for Stanley products will be taken by the group. Mary Fizz placed second in the Name the Heifer Contest held by the state in conjunction with the State Convention.

Valentine gifts were exchanged, the bylaws were read and a presidential quiz was enjoyed during the evening.

The program committee is planning a Fasnacht Party for the March 3 meeting at the home of Charlotte Mauger in Bechtelsville. Each one is to wear something green.

Cindy Slatcoff Believes Wool Business Is Ideal For Women

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

GLENCOE (Somerset Co.) — Brush Creek Wool Works, owned by Anthony (Tony) and Cindy Slatcoff, is operated mainly by Cindy, but her family often helps her with sundry tasks.

The year-around business is headquartered at their sheltered home in a mountainous valley; the under-construction house (where they have done everything "but dig the hole"), flanked by tree-lined slopes and small adjacent sheep pasture. Passing through the rugged terrain, down near the main road, and on its way to somewhere else, flows the gurgling waters of the Brush Creek tributary.

The Slatcoffs sell breeding stock, freezer lambs, and wool sheared from their stock of White Romney and Border Leicester sheep, currently numbering some 23 animals. Cindy is an artisan who works with wool (not usually their own), from beginning to end. Which means that, after all the preparations, she demonstrates, sells, and teaches classes from May through November each year.

Cindy says she is ready for the lambing season — nine pregnant ewes are due on March 7 — and looking forward to using the newly-built lodging facility that Tony has built for her in the second larger sheep barn. The modern paneled nook has bed space and a counter area for conveniences such as a coffee maker.

The ewes and lambs will have 24-hour attention from Cindy while Tony and their sons — Jason, 14, and Mark, 9, — follow their normal routine. They travel together to school in Berlin where Tony teaches biology and the boys attend classes in the Berlin-Brothersvalley School District.

When she was in fourth grade, Cindy was taught by her baby-sitter, Yorkshire, England, grandmother, to knit. "After moving to Somerset County (as an adult)," says Cindy, "I thought it would be nice to spin my own yarn." She didn't like the synthetic yarns on the market. At the Somerset Historical Center qualified persons taught her how to spin and soon she was invited to demonstrate the craft during the Center's annual Mountain Craft Days.

"It was more like doing it for friends than a business arrangement," she notes, saying how a strong bond of friendship had been formed.

Despite their upbringing in separate Cambria County mining towns where neither Tony nor Cindy had had any agricultural experience, the Slatcoffs itched to raise sheep, because they realized the best wool-producing sheep breeds weren't being raised locally.

"In this area, most wool is on meat-producing sheep and the wool is not ideal for spinning," says Cindy. "I did a lot of research," she says. "I researched for two years. I found what kind of fleece I and other spinners like and those are what I bought," she says.

I decided that if I'm going to do this, I'm going to follow the example of the experts."

To Cindy, that meant gathering information about wool-producing sheep raised in Australia and New Zealand. She located a four-year-old copy of National Geographic that she keeps in her shop in which the subject is featured on its glossy, informational pages. She told about the network of women throughout eastern United States who are in the same business and who are excellent resources.

Nevertheless, mistakes were inevitably made. This bothered Cindy. "We've lost sheep because of being ignorant," she says. "I didn't want an animal to have to suffer at my expense," says the former teacher of earth and planetary science, who taught classes at two campuses of the University of Pittsburgh.

"Raising sheep is a business that lends itself to a woman doing the work by herself if need be," she says as she recelled some tough personal experiences.

Son Jason is the owner of this Jacob sheep, a rare breed having four horns and traced back to England and Scotland.

"I can do this and make a living doing this," she says. "It gives me a sense of pride and a lot of peace of mind."

Her uncompromising standards are high, based on an unshakeable belief that bigger dividends will reward meticulous care of the sheep and their wool. A staunch devotion to that philosophy paid off in 1991 when her wool sold for prices well above the average prices being paid.

"Everybody laughs at my sheep wearing coats," she says, but I don't care. "My fleece is clean, has no breaks, and they get the breed they want. They get the best," she states without apology. "They only get grease when they wash it."

But wearing the coats on the sheep is only part of her strategy. Cindy says she tells her shearer, Bedford County's Karl Kaufman, when the pregnant ewes are due. He comes to shear them days before that date. While he shears he allows Cindy to work with the wool. Thus the fleece isn't exposed to the dirt and matting that naturally accompany the lambing process. Coats are put on the ewes for warmth and then changed later.

Made in the United States of a polypropylene material, Cindy says the coats last at least three years. They shed water easily, dry fast and are machine washable, all for about $6 each. She uses and sells them.

Her opinion is that United States wool dealers would make out better if they devoted more attention to the wool while it is still on the sheep.

"I'm really tied down with shows," she says. "Even if you are sick, the show goes on." She says you just can't back out of something like this and disappoint persons who come each year just to see your new designs because they know and like your work. Summer shows demand a lot of travel, lugging things, handling animals, and always being creative," she says. "That's work!"

With her carding machine — purchased in Vancouver for a price equal to that of a good used car — she creates original yarn designs often using mohair, alpaca, rayon or silk in addition to wool.

From Silk For Life, located in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Cindy buys silk fiber in an effort to help the organization in its quest to encourage South American people to grow silk rather than cocaine. The mulberry tree which is home to the silkworm is adaptable to the same climate.

"The biggest drawback is getting people to take you seriously," says Cindy. "The family doesn't understand why you don't attend family gatherings."

Growing up around coal-mining and the coal-shipping railroads, Cindy learned all about black lung disease and cancer. So she isn't taking good health for granted. She wears a face mask, gloves and apron that are approved by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), to do her work. Regardless of what it is, washing, dyeing, picking, carding, spinning, there are dusts and chemicals to be reckoned with. So unless she is demonstrating at a show, Cindy is always protected from these things.

Although the summer travel reaps educational benefits for the boys — they've seen Vancouver, Oregon, Michigan and Pennsylvania neighbors — Cindy says, "I try not to make this their work. If we need help, we ask them, but they have to find what they want to do." One of their current interests is membership in the Johnstown Figure Skating Club.

Cindy says her 1992 show season starts with the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival near Baltimore. Then it's the Bedford Sheep and Wool Festival, Bedford; the Fiber Festival, Somerset; Cooks Forest Spin-In, Allegheny National Forest; Summerfest, Grantsville Md.; Mountain Craft Days, Somerset and the Springs Folk Festival, Springs. Additionally, in conjunction with FiberFest '92, held in Kalamazoo, Michigan, Cindy will teach at a textile workshop during the spinning and weaving conference. She has just contracted to work as a summer artisan in the Spruce Forst Artisan Village near Grantsville, Md.

Parenting Teens

YORK (York Co.) — Do you, or the parents of teens that you know, sometimes wish your teens and pre-teens could be sent away for a few years and then returned to you as cooperative young adults? Or maybe, as the parents of teens, you and your friends just want some direction on how to guide adolescents through their most troublesome years. Well, now there's help — an innovative video-based parent education program designed specifically for parents of teens — and pre-teens. Called Active Parenting of Teens, the program is being sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension starting Tuesday, March 3, and continues March 10, 17, 24, 31 and ends April 7th.

Active Parenting of Teens will be taught in six, two-hour sessions by Lois Kinzie, private parent education consultants. The program features more than 60 video vignettes that stir reactions like "Yes, that's just how I feel" or "That's our teenager, all right"; and demonstrates positive ways to resolve the conflict. After viewing the various scenarios, parents participate in group discussion, role plays and other activities.

Active Parenting of Teens is not psychotherapy, but rather a common-sense approach to parenting. There is no dwelling on blame, only a move-ahead attitude that shows it is never too late to improve parent-child relationships.

Parents will learn encouragement skills, discipline skills, communication skills, problem solving skills, problem prevention skills and family enrichment skills. There are also sessions on how to prevent substance abuse and how to openly discuss sexuality.

To sign up for the Active Parenting of Teens program, call Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 757-9657. The cost of the program is $20 per participant, or $30 per couple. A handbook is included in this price. The first session will be held Tuesday, March 3, at the West York Junior High School, Bannister Street, York with subsequent sessions to be held over the course of the following five weeks. Don't wait until your children are teens to take this class. It may be too late then!

TAKING TIME

Pace Yourself!
It's Good Advice

When I got married, one of my co-workers shared a valuable piece of advice with his "Best Wishes". His advice — "Pace yourself."

"Pace". Webster defines it as a verb meaning, "to set or regulate the rate of speed". When individuals and families experience changes, pacing is important. (And I don't mean creating nervous traffic back and forth across the living room or bedroom floor.)

Personal energy is exhaustible. Everything will not get done. What can you do?

First, you have a variety of obligations. Don't spend all your time and energy in one area at the expense of the others. You need some energy for work, but you also have to conserve strength for your children, personal interests, and spouse. Young couples with children are hard-pressed to find time for themselves. Try! Farm couples may be able to share some together time during the midday instead of trying to catch a few minutes at the end of the evening.

Second, name your most important tasks. Tackle them when you have the most energy. Early evening is usually a stressful (non-productive) time! Children are returning from school and may have had nothing to eat for five or six hours. For adults, patience and energy are dwindling.

Third, with every change we need to let some obligations go. "Because we're planning a roadside stand this year, the house may just not get cleaned." "Because we're caring for a new baby, the garden may have to be smaller." "If I'm taking on leadership at church, I can't continue to coordinate our parent group at school." Keep this in mind in relation to aging, too. As your physical energy and skills change, you need to adapt your expectations about the amount and kind of work that can be done.

Make it clear that a few things have priority and devote energy and thought to them. I certainly haven't perfected this to an art. But I'm trying. It's frustrating for me to have things that I care about being squeezed out of a jam-packed schedule.

A lecturer commented on how people try to do too much. She said, "Working full-force seven days a week until you are exhausted at the expense of relationships is not a sign of strength. It is a sign of weakness." Pacing, finding balance, learning to give and take and being content when you don't have everything is a sign of strength.

It is easy for adults to exhaust themselves physically and mentally so that they are of no use to the people they care about. Parent educator Jean Illsley Clarke shares this caring reminder, "Children deserve parents whose needs are met. We need to remember that when our own needs are met we can then take better care of other people."

It sounds easy, but it is not. For those of you who are struggling, try these suggestions: Start going to bed one-half hour earlier. Your body will take several weeks to adjust to the schedule, but the extra rest will strengthen you.

Think through your needs for the next day. Have lunches packed and clothes selected for you and your children. Keep a running list posted on the refrigerator or bulletin board noting needed grocery items and "to do's".

Build in some quiet times. Get up and shower before the rest of the household is in full swing or listen to relaxing music while you're driving.

Always keep in mind the ONE most important thing for you to accomplish at work (and if your home is your "work", what's the most pressing task there?), for your child, for your spouse, and for yourself. If you can do these things during the day, you have done very well.

The pace of life that our society sets is exhausting. It is nearly impossible to maintain. Do yourself and your family a favor, change the timing, choose a new step, and walk at that pace with confidence.

Steps For Homebuyers

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension presents "Steps for Homebuyers," a three-part series to educate prospective homebuyers or current homeowners. Step One: Finding a House to Fit Your Budget will be held on Monday, March 16, and includes advantages and disadvantages of home-ownership, working with a real estate agent, finding out about financing, and setting realistic expectations. Step Two: Sizing Up the Structure will be held on Monday, March 23, and will address assessing structural quality, checking the electrical, heating and plumbing systems, and testing for radon. The series concludes on Monday, March 30, with Step Three: Learning about the Purchase Process, which is making the purchase offer, understanding the paperwork.

"Steps for Homebuyers" will be held at the Chester County Cooperative Extension office, Dague Building (3rd floor), corner of New and Market Streets, 235 W. Market Street, West Chester, from 7:00-9:30 p.m. The cost is $12 for the entire series; registration is due by March 9. For registration information, contact the Chester County Cooperative Extension at (215) 696-3500.

York Extension Focuses On Team Work

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — York County no longer has a county agent.

Instead, York County has moved to the concept of a team of county agriculture extension agents, each with specialized expertise and leadership skills to serve diverse agriculture and community needs.

And, the York county agents' team recently got a new coach.

A "sounding board" or a facilitator for the staff is the self-described role of Roxanne Price, who on January 2 became county extension director for the York Agriculture Cooperative Extension Service. The position is a fairly new one for women in Pennsylvania's extension service; and Roxanne is both York County's first female and youngest extension director to date.

York County Extension director Roxanne Price sees her role as a sounding board for the staff of 10 agricultural, family living and 4-H agents and assistants.

"Extension director is an administrative position, working with personnel, with the physical facilities, working closely with our administrative assistant on budget issues, and overseeing all extension programming," said Roxanne. Public relations and representing the extension service at various community programs is also an important part of the director's task. In addition, she coordinates York County's 4-H program.

An 18-year veteran of extension work, Roxanne joined the York office in 1973, beginning as a 4-H assistant. A home economics education graduate of Mansfield College, she had been active in the 4-H program through her teen years. In preparation for her director role, Roxanne recently completed graduate studies at Penn State's Capitol Campus, specializing in training and development.

Jennie Hess, dairy agent, works with 4-H'ers and farmers on industry issues ranging from production to paperwork.

"It's very applicable to extension work and dealing with adult education," Roxanne says of her graduate work major. "We want to make extension training meet people's needs."

According to the director, the federal government has in recent years seen the need to broaden the audience of extension outreach into areas such as family living and finance. If extension programs are to continue to operate with some levels of federal funding, they are mandated to reach more people.

But, a major challenge to Roxanne - and to extension in general - is the budget crunch faced by all levels of government.

"There's a strong support for extension but we must be accountable for what we do," she recognizes. "Our Pennsylvania goal is to reach every citizen. In the last decade, the number of people reached by extension has doubled, to 6 out of 10. We want to service clientele but must really prioritize and make sure every need is sincere."

"We don't want to cut activities here, but we will look at travel and involvement outside the county," Roxanne says of budget-meeting measures. "We have always stayed within our budget, and we do want to be team players because we do appreciate the support of the county. Our board of directors has always taken meeting the budget as a priority goal."

Because agriculture, from the farm through the processor to the retailer, continues to be a driving force in the economy of Pennsylvania, farm and fural needs remain a vital part of the state's extension

Jodi Myers is one of the newer members of the York staff, serving as the Extension 4-H assistant for the past year.

A New View
Of Rootworm Control

Now's the time to look at rootworm control in a whole new way. Only LORSBAN* 15G granular insecticide gives you the rootworm control you're looking for, yet is one of the least hazardous to handle of all soil insecticides. LORSBAN 15G is the only leading granular, at-plant insecticide with a CAUTION signal word and is not Restricted Use.

For a new view of rootworm control, as well as control of other crop-damaging insects, see your ag chemical dealer for LORSBAN 15G.

goals. Key Pennsylvania extension issues for the '90s include:

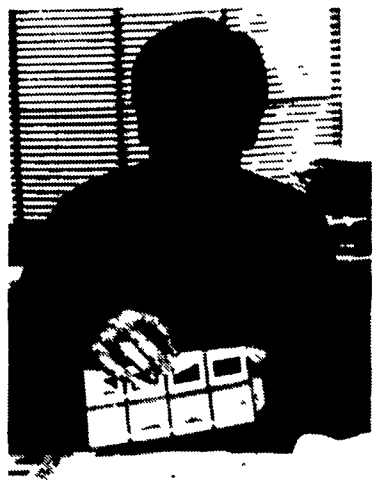
- water quality;
- nutrition, health and food safety, from basic home food preparation to the food processing industry, and related issues such as pesticide usage;
- profitability in agriculture, incorporating such diverse areas as herd management, disease control and financial planning;
- conservation and management of natural resources, especially in areas such as forestry;
- community development, including public policy, leadership skills and agriculture preservation efforts.
— developing human resources, ranging from 4-H volunteer recruiting and training to child care givers to working in tandem with various social and community agencies.
- family social and economic well-being.

To meet such a diverse range of needs by the extension service, Roxanne is a firm disciple of delegating responsibilities to the county's staff of trained specialist agents.

"They are very knowledgeable and all have a lot of expertise in their specialty areas. Empowering them to do what they know best adds credibility to extension," believes Roxanne. "A county agent used to have to know everything about everything. Technological advances have made it impossible to stay abreast of all the diverse areas of agriculture."

Four full-time agriculture agents and two York-based agents serving the region have their own specialty areas, but work together closely in conducting combined educational programs.

Jennie Hess, dairy and 4-H agent, organizes and coordinates numerous educational programs, workshops, newsletters, and farm visits addressing a range of dairy industry issues, from production to marketing. She also coordinates the 4-H dairy cattle and dairy goat programs and activities.



With slide programs often in hand, ag engineer Dan McFarland assists farmers in the five-county region in designing efficient and economical housing systems.

Tim Beck, livestock and community development agent, handles the full range of both adult and youth 4-H programs in the areas of beef, sheep, swine and horse production. He also works closely with community development issues, including land preservation efforts.

John Rowehl, agronomy agent, works with general field crops management, especially in the areas of potato, grain, and hay production, through numerous meetings, demonstration plots, and newsletters, and with related 4-H projects. He is currently conducting an assessment of the needs of county growers for a crop management association.

Tom Becker, the horticulture agent, works with the diverse needs of both commercial horticulture production and home gardeners. Currently on sabbatical for advanced degree studies, Tom's horticulture responsibilities are being partically handled by graduates of his Master Gardener training programs.

Dan McFarland serves the region of York, Lancaster, Franklin, Cumberland and Adams counties as an agriculture engineering agent. He works primarily with design systems for dairy, swine, and beef housing, as well as programs emphasizing farm and home safety.

A former county 4-H member, Tim Beck returned to York from Kansas six months ago as the livestock and community development agent.

Regional farm management agent Roland Freund also serves the five-county area. He provides counseling and training in financial management and estate planning, both one-on-one for individual farm families, as well as in group programs and seminars on agriculture profitablity.

Merrill Crone is the county gypsy moth coordinator and extension 4-H livestock assistant. In addition to his management of the gypsy moth tracking and spraying programs, Merrill is the staff liaison to the 4-H Center board and works with various 4-H programs and activities.

Joann Lamberson is the extension agent for family living. She coordinates and prepares educational programs conducted through volunteers, leader groups and media outreach, ranging from child care to nutrition and food safety, from home business operation to financial planning.

Extensions 4-H assistant Jodi Myers works with area schools on the 4-H embryology program and coordinates 4-H programs for the Children's Home of York. She implements the two major 4-H fundraisers in the county, is the extension contact for the county's Teen Pregnancy Coalition and works closely with the 4-H Fair board and numerous project clubs.

Part-time staffer Eileen Smith works with nutrition and health. She has trained leaders for the "New Weigh of Life" weight-loss programs and is conducting exercise and nutrition programs for elementary and middle schools.

As York's agronomy agent, John Rowehl's job includes some hands-on demonstrations, like soil sampling.

"Extension is well known in the York area; our previous county directors have done a good job. We'll continue to be involved as in the past and stay in the forefront of the community," Roxanne promises.

Sometimes Roxanne takes her job home with her - to the 4-Hers in her family. She and her husband John, whom she praises as "very supportive" of her work, have two daughters, ages 15 and 11. Both have numerous interests, including school sports, but are following their mother's footsteps as York County 4-H members.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Do you ever feel that your life is a jumble of things that need to be done and so you do them? I've just been looking at the February calendar. It is so full of things to do and the time of day to do them that it is almost not readable.

This last week's actitivies: Monday — Phone and type Sale Reports for Lancaster Farming. Got my cousin's will out of her safe deposit box and turned it over to her lawyer along with all of her financial records, which I took care of last year. You see, the week before I arranged her funeral and disposed of her belongings.

Tuesday — Took care of our grandchild a bit in the morning and worked on my braided rug. Then in the evening toured Hershey Medical Center's Pediatrics Department with my husband as he is a member of the Penn State Club. We had a nice meal in their renovated cafeteria. But, I really did not enjoy seeing those tiny immature babies.

Wednesday — Watered all of my houseplants as I do twice a week. Studied the lesson for Bible Study that was held in the afternoon. Drove to Lancaster for a special bulb for my projector and got groceries on the way home.

Thursday — Took the car to the garage as the computer causes a light to go on on the dashboard — "Service Engine Soon." Extension held their annual meeting in Lancaster in the evening and we attended.

Friday — Met with a landscaper that we've being trying to see for months. I told him that I didn't think he wanted the job of planning our lawn as it has taken him so very long. Went to the dentist and baked several pies.

Saturday — Cleaned the house and went to a travelogue at Lititz in the afternoon after setting the table for company that evening. Made a big turkey meal and showed slides.

Sunday — We went to early church, read the Sunday newspaper and had supper at a friend's house. And, these are just the major things that kept me busy.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

Minnie Schlegel bakes everything from scratch. She believes every woman should learn to bake. Her advice to those who want to be good cooks is "practice."

Practice Results In Good Cooking

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — What makes a good cook?

"Practice," Minnie Schlegel answers.

The wife of Fleetwood dairy farmer, Kermit, Minnie has had plenty of practice.

Because Minnie's father died when she was young, she was hired out to work when she was only 14 years old.

"I learned to bake, clean, and cook," she said, as if necessity automatically developed skill.

Minnie's specialty is yeast breads. In fact, in many circles, she is referred to as "the woman who makes sticky buns."

Many years ago Minnie catered through the Fleetwood Grange, but when state inspection was required, she decided not to pursue it. She did cater the food for about 400 guests at her daughter's wedding.

Minnie has won numerous ribbons at fairs for layer cakes and pies. In fact, Minnie's apple pie won first place at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in 1988.

For those who would like some tips on yeast breads, Minnie has these words of advice: Use western wheat flour such as Gold Medal or Pillsbury brand. Buy bulk yeast because it rises faster and is easier to use. Knead the dough well. She said, "I disagree with the bakeries who say bread should be baked at 400 degrees. I think it works better to bake bread at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Despite timesaving devices and mixes, Minnie said, "I bake everything from scratch."

She credits most of her good recipes to those she clipped from Lancaster Farming.

Since 1957, Minnie and her husband have been cooking for the Fleetwood Grange, which is only about a mile from their farm. The Grange holds banquets weekly from September through May. The Schlegels and two other women are in charge of roasting the ham and turkey.

The Schlegels married in 1945 and moved to their present farm in 1946. They have 85 to 95 milking cows, farm 260 acres of corn, wheat, oats, hay, and alfalfa. The Schlegels are the second Berks County family to sell development rights to ag land preservation.

"I retired from milking several years ago and let my husband and son be in charge. But I still feel I must go get the milk tank ready and do several different odds and ends," Minnie said.

Minnie's apple pie won blue ribbons in county and state competition.

The Schelgels have three married children and five grandchildren who help on the farm. Their grandson Keith was named All-American Soccer player last year and received media publicity when his parents had a billboard painted on the Schlegel barn illustrating Keith kicking ball with the words: "Make it Milk, Milk Builds All-Americans."

Between her cooking chores, Minnie finds time to make each of children and grandchildren afghans, for which she also received ribbons in Grange competition. She hopes to make quilt tops for each family member also.

Minnie laments the changing times where many women no longer know how to bake a pie or a loaf of bread. "I think all women should learn to bake because it tastes so much better," she said.

Here are several of Minnie's favorite recipes. The Bavarian Apple Pie is the one that earned the state apple pie award in 1988.

BASIC WHITE BREAD

1¼ cup milk, lukewarm
½ cup warm water
2 packages dry yeast
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons butter
5 to 6 cups flour

Put sugar, salt, butter, water, and milk into bowl. Mix together. Mixture should be lukewarm. Sprinkle yeast over mixture. When dissolved, start mixing in flour gradually, using enough to form soft dough, which leaves sides of bowl. Knead by hand, adding more flour until dough is no longer sticky and is smooth and elastic. Cover and let rest for 30 minutes. Punch down and divide dough in half. Shape into loaves by pressing flat, fold in 2 sides then roll starting at third side to form loaf. Put into lightly greased loaf pans. Brush top with butter. Let rise until double. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

BAVARIAN APPLE PIE

Beat together:
½ cup soft butter
¼ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Gradually add 1 cup flour to form soft dough. Press into bottom and sides of 9-inch pie pan. Set aside. Beat together:
8-ounces cream cheese
¼ cup granulated sugar

Add:
1 egg
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat until smooth and spread over crust. Mix together:
4 cups thinly sliced apples
⅓ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Layer over cream cheese mixture. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter. Sprinkle ½ cup chopped nuts over top. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes. Lower heat to 350 degrees and bake an additional 35 minutes or until apples are soft. If apples begin to brown too much, cover with foil.

STICKY BUNS

Boil about 3 medium potatoes (enough to make 1 cup mashed) in salt water. When done, drain potatoes and save 1 cup potato water. Mix together 1 cup sugar, 1 cup mashed potatoes, 1 cup potato water and 1 cup milk. When cool to lukewarm, add 1 package dry yeast. Let set a few minutes to dissolve. Mix in 3 cups flour. Mix well. Let rise at least 2 hours until foamy or double in size. Add 1 stick butter, 3 eggs, and 1 cup sugar. Mix well. Gradually, add flour until dough is no longer sticky. Kneading well all the while. Cover. Let rise overnight or until double 6 to 8 hours. Divide dough in half. Roll out half into rectangle about 12x20-inches. Spread each half with ½ stick butter. Sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll like jelly roll and cut each into 18 pieces.

Syrup for pans: Heat together:
1½ cups butter
1½ cups brown sugar
2 tablespoons molasses
¼ cup water

Blend well and divide in pans. Arrange rolls on top of syrup in pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Locally Grown Apples Best Says Pennsylvania Apple Queen

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ORRTANNA (Franklin Co.) — What's the best variety of apples to use for cooking or eating?

Ask Crystal Bard, the Pennsylvania Apple Queen, and she has one answer: "Locally grown apples."

It's appalling to her that so many people buy supermarket apples shipped from other states just because it is convenient.

"I guess I'm spoiled," she said, "but apples taste so much better fresh from the orchard. You get so much better quality."

Crystal's preference in apple varieties vary according to the time of the year. In early summer, she prefers Molly Delicious, later she switches to Red Delicious, then Lowry, and finally Golden Delicious.

"My grandmother makes everything from Golden Delicious apples and I just love them," Crystal said, "but some people prefer the tart apples and Stayman tastes good in cooking."

Crystal works for Bingham's Orchard, Inc., in St. Thomas. For three years, she has worked as a cashier at the orchard, which she said is one of the largest orchards in Franklin County where peaches, apricots, nectarines, and 17 varieties of apples are grown.

Because Crystal is convinced that everyone should try locally-grown apples, her aunt and uncle who own the Bingham's Orchard encouraged Crystal to enter the Apple Queen competition.

In preparation for the judges' questioning of her apple knowledge, Crystal studied a 45-page book describing the different varieties, and apple facts.

"It was easy because I had learned most of the answers while working at the orchard," Crystal said.

She also gave a two-minute speech on how she would promote apples during her reign. After winning the Franklin County crown, Crystal entered state competition where she again was tested on her apple knowledge. After winning the state title, Crystal now is responsible to carry the "apples are good for you" message across the state.

She gives out cider and apples at Fairs, malls, commodity banquets, and other promotional events. She especially enjoys helping with orchard tours when elementary classes visit the orchard where she works. Recently, she appeared on the TV show, Lifestyles '92, where she assisted a chef in food preparation.

"Children are easily educated and take the brochures we give them back to their parents," Crystal said.

As a senior at James Buchanan High School in Mercersburg, Crystal plans to attend Millersville University on a track scholarship. She hopes to become a state police officer. This career plan began when Crystal was in sixth grade and heard a trooper talk about his work.

"It sounded so exciting and like so much fun," Crystal said.

In seventh and eighth grade, Crystal attended Police Camp, the first time as a camper and the second time as a counselor. "It's like most camps except it is based on military practices such as marching, wearing uniforms, and learning about every aspect of police work," Crystal said.

Crystal describes herself as a "sports nut" who participates in the following sports: field hockey, basketball, track, softball, bowling, and Powder Puff football. She is a member of the Varsity Club, band, and the National Honor Society.

While in college, Crystal expects to continue working at the orchard on weekends and summers. Here are some of her favorite apple recipes that she hopes you'll try.

STUFFED CELERY

1 apple, finely chopped
¼ cup walnuts, finely chopped
Salad dressing or cream cheese celery, washed and cut into 2-inch lengths
Lemon juice, optional

Combine apple, nuts, and cream cheese and/or salad dressing in small bowl. Use to stuff celery. Sprinkle with lemon juice before serving.

APPLE CAKE

1¼ cups sugar
3 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup oil
1 cup chopped walnuts
4 to 5 apples, sliced

Mix sugar and eggs until fluffy. Add vanilla. Mix flour, salt, baking soda, and cinnamon. Add to egg mixture, alternating with oil. Fold in apples and walnuts. Pour into 13x9-inch baking dish.

Topping:

Mix ½ cup walnuts with 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Sprinkle over batter before baking. Bake at 370 degrees for 45 minutes.

APPLE DUMPLINGS

Dough:
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅓ cup shortening
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar

Mix together to make dough. Roll and cut into squares. Enclose ½ apple in each. Place in baking dish.

Syrup:
1 cup brown sugar
1½ cups water
½ cup butter
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Boil 4 to 5 minutes and pour over dumplings before baking. Bake 375 degrees about 30 minutes or until apples are tender.

The winners are as follows: five enterprise- Linda Hall (Gold), State College; four enterprise- Jodi Hall, State College (Gold); three enterprise- Ernie Auman, Penns Valley (Gold); two enterprise- Mark Hough and Mary Anne Rearick, Penns Valley (Gold), Shelia Grenoble, State College (Silver), and Mike Kline, Julie Huey, and Joe Byler, Penns Valley (Bronze); single enterprise- Corby Shunk, Penns Valley, Chad Wingard, Penns Valley, and Katie Biddle, State College (Gold), Hannah Auman, Penns Valley, and Jason Wolfe, Penns Valley (Silver), and Dan Dashem, Penns Valley, and Seth Everhart, State College (Bronze), and Amy Corrigan, State College (Honorable Mention); on-farm work experience- Jennifer Smith, State College (Gold), Bob Weaver, Penns Valley, Larry Rider, State College, and Amy Clair, State College (Silver), Cory Rudy, State College, and Jason Wasson, State College (Bronze), and Jason Carbonara, State College (Honorable Mention); off-farm work experience- Brian Carper, Penns Valley, Paul Bowersox, Penns Valley, and Toby Stine, State College (Gold), Nancy Anne Bishop, State College, and Mary Shelow, State College (Silver), Paul Lauchle, State College, Angel Ellenburger, State College, and Brandon Wrye, State College (Bronze), and Micah Schrenkle, State College, Tom Stauffer, State College, and Kristen Lukovich, State College (Honorable Mention).

On Tuesday, October 29, members of the Twin Valley FFA participated in the Southeastern Pennsylvania FFA Wildlife Contest with other Berks and Lancaster County FFA members.

Placing first over all was Jason Hess, second was Bob Sauder, fourth was Ryan Marshall, fifth was Ray Dymond, seventh was Jeff Repinsky, eighth was Ned Gardner, and ninth was Larry Medaglia. Other participants were Chad Steffy, Steve Yarmush, Becky Duncan, Ray Reinhard, and Michelle Jacobs, Jason, Bob, and Ryan represented Berks County, and received first place for team.

The contest includes a written test, and two sites where you tell what kind of animals live there. The participants also had to identify birds, mammals, bird calls, wildlife calls, and animal signs.

RITCHEY TO BE TRAINER FOR MARKETING PLAN

Thomas Ritchey was one of 32 from across the nation who recently completed training to become a master trainer in the National FFA Organization's Marketing Plan Project. Ritchey will travel throughout Pennsylvania and the surrounding area presenting workshops on the Marketing Plan Project.

The project assists students in developing practical skills in the marketing process. Through research, students develop and present a plan which may focus on the introduction or improved marketing of a new or existing agricultural product, supply, or service.

After selection of the product, supply or service, the student team must develop strategies to increase its value based on the results of the research they conduct. Students compile their findings and solutions into a written plan.

Emphasis is placed on products, supplies, or services available in or to their local community or FFA chapter. Local chapters may involve all their members, one agricultural education class, or only a few students in preparing the plan for competition.

The intent is to have a large number of students involved in gathering and analyzing the data and developing the plan. A three-person team then presents the survey results, which were used to define the marketing problem, and the solution that was developed.

The students' understanding of the marketing process is demonstrated in the 5- to 8-page written plan and in an oral presentation to a panel of judges. The project consists of three parts: written plan, live presentation, and questions and answers.

The live presentation simulates the selling of the written plan to a company's board of directors or top management. The three-member presentation team has 15 minutes to provide an explanation for their plan. The presentation is judged on the effectiveness of the team's visual aids, their use of the five parts of the written plan, the effectiveness of their presentation, and a question and answer period.

The Marketing Plan Project is sponsored by Rhone-Poulenc Ag Company as a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

Apple Queen

GRANDMA'S APPLE CRISP

½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup brown sugar
¾ cup flour
¼ cup butter or margarine
4 cups thickly sliced apples
¼ cup water
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Work sugar, flour, and butter together with fingers until crumbly. Pare apples and slice into a shallow greased pan. Pour water over apples and generously spread crumb mixture over apples.

Bake uncovered for 50 minutes at 350 degrees. When apple crisp is done, sprinkle cinnamon on top.

APPLE MUFFINS

2 cups sugar
3 eggs
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup salad oil
3 cups grated apples
2 teaspoons vanilla
¾ cup walnuts, optional
¾ cup raisins or dates, optional

Combine ingredients in large bowl. Pour into lightly greased muffin tins. Bake at 350 degrees. Serve hot. Makes 3 dozen.

CREAMY APPLE BARS

1 yellow cake mix with pudding
½ cup butter, softened
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 to 3 apples

Mix cake mix and butter together until crumbly. Take out ⅔ cup mixture for topping. Press onto bottom of ungreased 9x13-inch pan. Slice apples on mixture.

Beat egg and add sour cream. Spread on top of apples.

MARYLAND DHIA

The January, 1992 DHI information for Maryland dairy herds is listed by herd name, county, total number of cows in the herd, and the average production per cow on a 3.5% Fat Corrected Milk (FCM) basis for all milking cows in the herd. The herd must consist of at least 10 cows averaging 60 lbs. or more of 3.5% FCM per cow per day. All of the herds are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys and Jerseys, and the top eight herds for Ayrshires.

Today's successful growers work harder than ever before — but they also work smarter. Alfalfa farmers across the country recognize that in tough times, they can't afford to gamble with anything less than W-L alfalfa seed to give them the high yields, quality forage and long stand life necessary for a profitable crop. They also know that W-L alfalfas are backed up by over 25 years of research, technical teams of experts and a reliable, service-oriented distribution system.

You can't buy better alfalfa seed than W-L — you can't afford to buy less.

UDS President Objects To Milk Pricing Changes

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — The president of a Seneca Falls, N.Y.-based dairy pricing organization has written to the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture in an effort to eliminate a new pricing catagory for milk in two federal milk orders.

Edward D. Anna, president of United Dairy Services, sent a letter to Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan to express his concern that the Secretary's decision to amend Federal Milk Orders #1 and #4 to include a new Class IIIA price will create a severe disruption in the movement of milk supplies from farm to market.

Anna, who is also an independent milk marketing consultant, said that milk buyers in Orders 1 and 4 are seeking supplies of milk from Order 2 dairies to put into large powder plants in those federal orders for the sole purpose of taking advantage of the change in the new Class IIIA price, not because of a surplus situation or lack of plant capacity in Order 2.

He said he sees many Order 2 dairy producers being encouraged to transfer out of that order and into Orders 1 and 4 in an effort to fill "surplus" powder plants, merely to take advantage of the order amendment, not because of consumer demand.

The result could be that Order 2 plants, in order not to loose their supplies of raw milk, would be forced to pay premiums not warrented by consumer demand for their products.

In addition, Anna said the implementation of a Class IIIA price for milk utilized in the manufacture of non-fat dry milk powder will lower the blend price now paid to the dairy farmers in the orders that adopt this measure.

Milk used to manufacture non-fat, dry milk powder is currently assigned to Class II which yields a higher return to the dairy farmer.

Anna said, "If the industry is going to have a milk price that is tied to the consumer/commodity prices like this new Class IIIA price, then it should apply to the entire country, not a few selected orders."

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Think spring!

That two-word message headlined the advertising signboard of a neighborhood hardware store I drove past on a sunny afternoon last week.

Spring. A truly lovely word, conjuring up pleasant pictures of greening grass, a gentle sort of breeze, and cheery yellow crocus blooms poking up through moist, brown earth.

Spring fever hit me even earlier than usual, in this most snow-less, barren, brown, monotonous-weather winter in memory.

With no snow cover, the soils and dormant crops have no sheltering blanket against the harsh, drying winds. No insulating layer of white tempers the freeze/thaw alternates which heave the root systems of alfalfa and fall-planted grains out of the soil.

And, most critically, almost no snow has accumulated to soak through topsoil and filter down to replenish still-short supplies of life-giving water, not just for farms, but for everything dependent on Mother Earth's moisture.

Not to mention the lack of slippery stuff for us restless snow lovers whose skis and sleds sit lonely, unneeded and gathering dust.

The Farmer wished this snowless-ness on us, he did. Some weeks ago, as I lamented the lack of white stuff, he expressed a preference for no snow - because of the extra work and mess it makes around the barn and feeding areas.

Okay, if there's to be no snow, then winter begone. Git. Think spring.

The Canada geese already are. "Our" family of four has been making return visits to the pond in recent weeks. Periodically, the big pair examines the mid-pond nesting site where they hatched out goslings for the past two springs.

Appearance of a fifth (a stranger courting one of the young ones?) on a recent morning brought a couple hours of loud honking, airborne arguing, and neck-stretched chases. The melee seemed to mightily amuse the mallards nonchalantly waddling about in the thick of the battle.

A small bouquet of pussywillow branches on a windowsill is showing pale green leaves above soft gray catkins, with tiny roots sprouting from stems immersed in water. In a shelted corner near the house, upstart dandelions are pushing out jagged foliage. Inches away, a clump of yellow-tipped daffodil foliage huddles around a fat bud hugging tight to the ground.

And we're a few cows farther down the milking lineup each evening before daylight fades outside the dairy barn windows.

Funny though. That "think spring" sign caught my eye as I hurried up the road to the local convenience store. We were out of bread - and the weather forecasters were warning of a winter storm front barreling our way.

Sure enough, by morning the ground was white, with several hours more of flakes and slippery conditions predicted. The daffodils and dandelion got buried. So did the day's meeting plans, leaving several hours of unexpected, wintry-wonderland free time.

With birdfeeders restocked for our ever-hungry feathered dependents, Solomon and I glided toward the meadow. Fresh snow never fails to add a fairyland dimension to the familiar landscape of woodlot and heifer pasture.

Tracks in the snow marked where others had preceded us, squirrels and rabbits and birds of various sizes. A pile of brush was transformed from just limbs and twigs to a piece of modern art, white on dark, anglular patterned, textured, snowy shadows adding depth.

Round bales stacked on a wagon looked like a giant serving of sugar-coated shredded wheat. And the dark-fuzzed cattail heads ringing the little pond were reminiscent of chocolate eclairs topped with ice cream. (Note how even a smidgeon of fresh air and exercise focuses the mind on food.....).

Think spring!

But keep the snow toys handy.

PDPP Has Summer Intern Position

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has announced the continuation of its summer internship program.

The PDPP's summer intern will be involved in the coordination of two statewide promotion campaigns, one during June Dairy Month, and the second during July Ice Cream Month.

The successful candidate will be working with the staff on press releases, media visits, and general coordination of several events in key media markets. In addition, the intern will experience the PDPP's total promotion activities in Pennsylvania.

"Our internship program has been very successful over the past several years," said Betsy Dupuis, communications director.

"Both of our recent interns have been a big part of our effective statewide promotions of ice cream. We plan to have our 1992 intern involved in both June and July promotions to give them an opportunity to work in several different media markets."

For the internship, the PDPP is looking for students pursuing careers in communications and/or marketing. Special emphasis will be placed on students who have agricultural experience and effective communications skills. Students must be in their fifth semester of study to qualify for the internship.

"We are especially adamant about communications skills because of the intern's job responsibilities," added Dupuis. "We encourage all applicants to send writing samples along with their application to aid us in the selection process."

To apply for the position, students should send a cover letter, resume and writing samples to Betsy Dupuis, Communications Director, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA, 17110. All applications must be received by February 28, 1992, to receive consideration.

The assignment with the PDPP will be for 12 weeks, beginning in mid-May and ending in late July, 1992. Further information about the internship is available by calling Dupuis at (717) 787-5903.

Symposium Focuses On Preventive Medicine

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Why do vaccinations sometimes fail to prevent disease in cattle herds? What happens when drugs are not used according to the label directions? How do producers decide what their herd's vaccination program should be?

These and other questions about preventive medicine in beef cattle herds will be discussed at the Eastern Cattlemen's Symposium, March 26 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Penn State Meats Lab at University Park.

Held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, the symposium will bring together veterinarians, meat scientists, producers, and regulators to discuss cattle health issues.

"The discussion will start with the economics of a preventive health program," said symposium organizer Dr. John Comerford, assistant professor of dairy and animal science at Penn State. "From there, we'll address a number of concerns and challenges to herd health."

Dr. Merlin Kaeberle, professor of microbiology and immunology at the Iowa State College of Veterinary Medicine, will discuss the effect of the animal's environment on vaccine perfommance and the reasons vaccines sometimes fail to prevent disease. Dr. Dean Elliot of the Troy Veterinary Clinic will analyze vaccination programs for dairy-beef calves. Dr. Kurt Wohlgemuth, manager of technical services for Smith, Kline-Beecham Animal Health, will discuss vaccination programs for cow herds and young calves, focusing on available products and how they are best used.

Dr. William Henning, Penn State assistant professor of animal science, will explain how producers can avoid causing carcass damage during injections, a problem that costs the beef industry millions of dollars annually.

The implications of not following the label directions on cattle drugs will be examined by Dr. Gerald Guest of the Food and Drug Administration's Center for Veterinary Medicine. He will discuss the need to maintain a high level of integrity in using these drugs.

The symposium will conclude with a panel discussion of how veterinarians and producers can work together more efficiently to prevent disease in cattle. The discussion will be followed by a question-and-answer period.

The registration fee of $20 includes a copy of the symposium proceedings and "Keystone Ribeye Steak on a Roll" for lunch. Preregistration is encouraged since seating may be limited. Registration forms for the symposium are available from Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices and members of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, or by calling Dr. John Comerford at (814) 863-3661.

GEHL

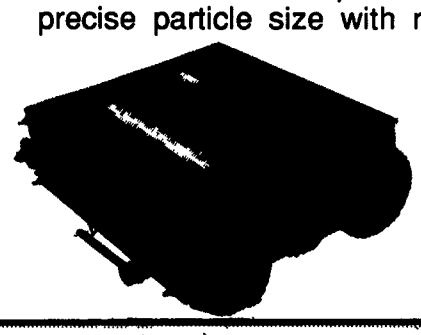
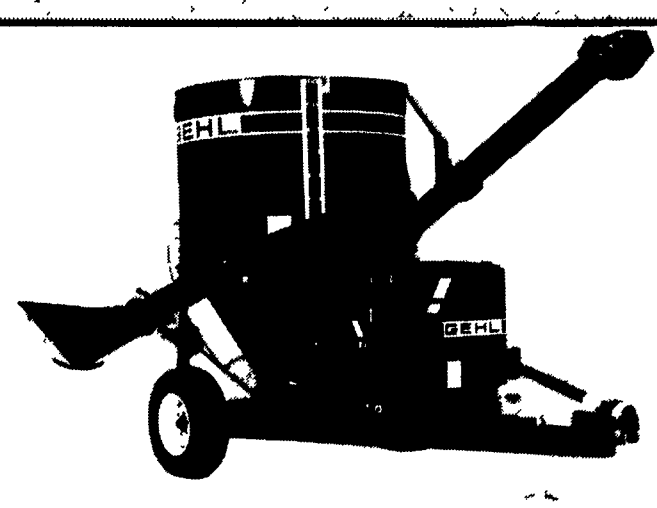
The Industry Leader

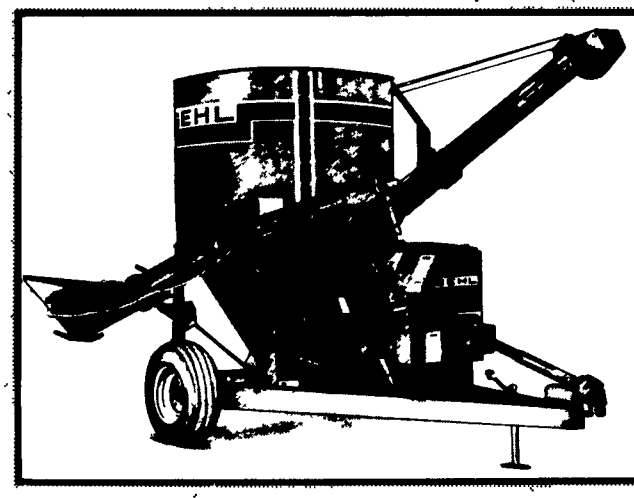
We've combined the proven features and advantages of our Mix-All with a commercial grade roller mill to give you the best portable roller mill feed maker available today.

A Gehl roller mill produces a coarse feed of precise particle size with reduced dust and "flour" in the feed. That means optimum gain for your livestock.





A heavy-duty, commercial grade roller mill features deep grooved rolls that uniformly reduce grain to a pre-determined particle size for maximum nutritional value.



THE #1 NAME IN FEEDMAKING

Gehl Mix-All® portable grinder-mixers have been leading the industry for over 30 years. Now the new Gehl Roller Mixer combines proven Mix-All features with a commercial-grade roller mill to produce the best possible feed for your livestock. Gehl Mix-Alls and Roller Mixers offer these advanced features:

- Total hydraulic control -self-contained hydraulic system allows infinite speeds to power the discharge conveyor, unloading auger and in-feed attachments.
- Remote controls - operate the unloading conveyor from the tractor seat or from the rear of the machine.
- Electronic scales - for precise ration weighing.
- Customize your machine - with a wide variety of options and attachments.

Gehl TMR Mixer Feeders Are #1

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action - Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes - From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities.
- Three Styles - Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

PSU Dairy Club Judging Contest Soon

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania State University Dairy Club has scheduled its spring dairy judging contest for March 21 at the college Agriculture Arena.

The contest is open to all state 4-Hers whose date of birth falls on or after Jan. 1, 1978, and to FFA members up to and including those in ninth grade, but no older.

Additionally, bonafide 4-H members who have not judged in the national contest may compete in the senior 4-H division. Also, FFA members who have not competed in the national FFA contest are eligible.

The spring judging contest is a feature of the club's 67th annual Dairy Exposition, though the rest of the exposition is slated for April 25 at the arena.

The dairy judging contest begins at 10 a.m. and costs $4 per contestant, and per coach, attending, if paid by March 4. Entries received after that date will be charged $5. Registration on the day of the event begins at 9 a.m.

The entry fees pay for lunch and help reduce the cost of mailing contest results.

Contestants in the junior 4-H and junior FFA divisions are to have the option of attending an afternoon workshop or deliver a set of oral reasons. They can not participate in both activities.

Reasons scores will not count in calculating high individuals and teams in these two divisions. However, the three highest scoring individuals in the junior reasons division are to receive awards.

It is important to note that junior contestants giving reasons must pre-enter by indicating their intentions on the entry form.

Send the completed entry form and a check payable to the "Penn State Dairy Science Club," to: Shelly Harshbarger, Penn State Dairy Science Club, 324 Henning Building, University Park, 16802.

The club plans to present awards in eight classes, including both cows and heifers, during the exposition banquet in April.

The PSU Dairy Club is inviting 4-H and FFA teams from across the state to participate.

For more information, call Larry Muller at (814) 863-4205 or Dale Olver, at (814) 863-3914.

PFA President Criticizes Television Show

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — A statewide farm organization leader recently criticized a television program which stated that the nation's milk supply is unsafe to drink.

Keith W. Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA), said "milk quality is stringently monitored by milk processors and state authorities" across the nation.

A TV program, "In America" which was aired on WNEP-TV, Avoca, "was absolutely terrible," Eckel wrote in a letter to Elden Hale, WNEP-TV president. "Dairymen deserve an apology for poor judgement and (poor) reporting.

"If a dairyman was shipping 'tainted' milk as alleged by the show, he would soon be out of business, because it would cost the average dairyman in Pennsylvania more than $5,000 in penalties for each offense."

The farm leader explained how milk sanitation is enforced: "Test samples are taken at every farm and random testing can be done on any milk, picked up at the farm.

"Dairy farmers are aware of the withdrawal period necessary when medicating sick dairy animals. Lactating cows are kept out of the milk herd for at least 72-hours after the last application of medication. Many farmers use a leg band system to identify an animal on medication. Many farmers report that those animals are hand-milked and the milk is dumped.

"Milk haulers agitate each milk tank at the farm for 15 minutes and then take a sample from each tank prior to pumping that farm's milk into the bulk tank of the truck hauling it to a processing plant. "Upon arriving at the plant, each bulk tank is tested for all impurities. If any questionable product is found, then each sample collected at various farms is analyzed to determine the type and source of residue. This method helps to pinpoint the source of contamination. That farm is then 'penalized' the total value of the milk contained in that truck's tank.

"Federal law also stops all shipments from that farm for two days at the farmer's expense. If the producer violates sanitation regulations the second time, he can't ship for three days, plus the cost of a tank load of milk. Repeated violations would result in the dairy farm losing its contract for milk processing," Eckel said.

ALFALFA ALERT

by Willard Jones

Phytophthora root rot can steal you blind if new seedings get waterlogged this spring.

Water triggers the fungus attack, killing new seedlings.

Hay losses can run $50 to $100 an acre. Every year.

But it doesn't have to happen. Best advice is to (1) seed an alfalfa with high resistance to Phytophthora. And (2) buy seed treated with Apron. It protects young seedlings.

Doebler gives you both. Starmaster and Precedent carry the top rating for Phytophthora--High Resistance (HR). But many alfalfas sold today are rated low resistance (LR), moderate resistance (MR) or resistant (R).

And here's where dollars can be made. As resistance ratings go up, Wisconsin researchers say, so do yields.

Here's what they found:

Phytophthora Resistance rating	Extra tons from 10 acres
HR	8
R	4
MR	3
S	0

But don't overlook the other major diseases. All can play havoc with yields.

Best defense is a multi-disease resistant alfalfa like Doebler's Starmaster and Precedent.

I'm Willard Jones. Phytophthora Root Rot could be on the prowl in new alfalfa seedings this spring. My advice--seed the highly resistant Starmaster or Precedent and quit worrying.

PASS Reports On 1991

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service (PASS) recently released results from several surveys conducted to compare agricultural production and storage levels over the past year.

Included are reports on turkey production, fruits, hogs, grains and field crops.

The PASS is an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, located in the state's agriculture department building in Harrisburg and reports on all agricultural production statistics throughout the year.

Turkeys Down

Pennsylvania turkey producers raised 8.4 million birds in 1991, down slightly from 1990, according to PASS.

There were 285 million turkeys raised in the United States during the year, 1 percent higher than the 282 million raised during 1990.

North Carolina ranked first in the number raised with 58 million, followed by Minnesota with 44 million, and California with 29 million. Pennsylvania ranked ninth in the number of turkeys raised.

Producers in Pennsylvania reported intentions to raise 8.6 million turkeys during 1992, which would be 2 percent more than the number raised in 1991.

Producers in the 20 major producing states intend to raise 272 million turkeys, up 1 percent from last year. The number of turkeys actually raised in 1992 may vary from growers' intentions depending on feed costs, supply of hatching eggs, cost of poults, and prices growers receive for turkeys during the next few months.

Crop Production

Based on acreage and production data, Pennsylvania farmers produced less corn for grain, corn for silage, oats, soybeans, wheat, potatoes, rye, alfalfa hay, and other hay in 1991 than in 1990.

Production was up for barley and tobacco.

Corn for grain production totaled 64.5 million bushels, 41 percent below last year's crop due to the drought conditions during the summer and fall of 1991.

Corn acres harvested for grain amounted to 860,000 and yielded 75 bushels per acre.

Corn for silage production was 5.2 million tons, 17 percent below 1990 production. Acres harvested totaled 520,000, 33 percent above last year, while yield dropped to 10 tons per acre, 6 tons per acre below last year.

Alfalfa hay production was 2.03 million tons, 17 percent below last year's production. Acres harvested were 780,000 with a yield of 2.60 tons per acre.

All other hay acres harvested totaled 1.11 million acres which yielded 1.80 tons per acre for a total production of 2 million tons, down 13 percent from last year.

Oats production was 8.4 million bushels, 47 percent less than last year's production. Harvested acres totaled a record low 210,000 and the yield was 40 bushels per acre.

Production of winter wheat was 7.7 million bushels, 27 percent less than production in 1990. Harvested acres totaled 175,000 with a yield of 44 bushels per acre, 6 bushels below last year.

Soybean production, at 9.9 million bushels was 12 percent less than last year's record high. Acreage harvested was 300,000 and yield was 33 bushels per acre.

Barley production was 4.20 million bushels, 1 percent more than 1990. Acreage harvested was 70,000 with a yield per acre of 60 bushels.

Rye production from the 11,000 acres harvested was 297,000 bushels, 40 percent lower than in 1990. Rye yield averaged 27 bushels per acre, 4 bushels lower than last year's yield.

Fall potato production at 3.50 million hundredweight (cwt.) was a record low for the state and 35 percent less than 1990 production. Acres harvested was a record low 20,000, which was 2,500 fewer acres than last year, with a yield of 175 cwt. per acre, down 65 cwt. from last year's yield.

Pennsylvania seedleaf-type tobacco production totaled 13.7 million pounds, 5 percent above last year. Acres for harvest amounted to 6,700, up 300 acres from last year, with an average yield per acre of 2,050 pounds, unchanged from last year.

Maryland-type tobacco production totaled 7 million pounds, 6 percent above last year. Harvest was from 3,800 acres, up 200 acres from last year, with an average yield of 1,850 pounds per acre, unchanged from last year.

Pennsylvania farmers seeded 180,000 acres of wheat in the fall of 1991 for the 1992 crop, unchanged from last year. Rye seedings for all purposes amounted to 50,000 acres, up 5,000 acres from the previous year.

At the United States level, production was up for hay, soybeans, barley, potatoes and tobacco. Production decreases were for corn, corn silage, oats, wheat and rye.

U.S. production of major crops and changes from the previous year are as follows: corn for grain, 7.47 billion bushels, down 6 percent; corn for silage, 80.5 million tons, down 7 percent; alfalfa hay, 83.8 million tons, up fractionally; other hay, 69.7 million tons, up 10 percent; oats, 243 million bushels, down 32 percent; winter wheat, 1.37 billion bushels, down 32 percent; soybeans, 1.99 billion bushels, up 3 percent; barley, 464 million bushels, up 10 percent; rye, 9.8 million bushels, down 4 percent; all potatoes, 418 million cwt., up 4 percent; all tobacco, 1.66 billion pounds, up 2 percent.

Winter wheat seedings during the fall of 1991 for the 1992 crop is estimated at 50.2 million acres, down 2 percent from a year earlier. Rye seedings were 1.59 million acres, down 5 percent from last year.

Sweet Corn, Etc.

Pennsylvania's vegetable farmers harvested 19,000 acres of sweet corn in 1991.

Of this total, 15,700 acres were for fresh market with production totaling 659,000 cwt. This is 26 percent less than the 1990 production for fresh market.

Average value of fresh market sweet corn was $21.80 per cwt., up $3.60 from the $18.20 per cwt. value in 1990.

Production for processed sweet corn amounted to 11,560 tons, a decrease of 28 percent from 1990's production. The average value for processed sweet corn decreased from $58.90 to $56.40 per ton in 1991.

Nationally, 175,400 acres of sweet corn was harvested for fresh market in 1991 and 542,260 acres were harvested for processing.

Fresh market production totaled 14.8 million cwt. and was valued at $17 per cwt.

Processing production totaled 3.4 million tons in 1991 with an average value of $71.60 per ton.

Sixty percent of the processing production was utilized for canning and 40 percent was for freezing.

Pennsylvania's 1991 fresh market tomato production was estimated at 344,000 cwt., down 44 percent from 1990. Area harvested was 4,300 acres.

The average value was $21.90 per cwt.

Pennsylvania's production of tomatoes for processing was 27,600 tons, down 21 percent from a year ago. Total acreage harvested was 2,000. The average value per ton decreased from $94.70 in 1990 to $93.10 in 1991.

United States' production of fresh market tomatoes was 33.4 million per cwt. in 1991, 1 percent less than 1990. The area harvested was 129,630 acres. Average value of tomatoes for fresh market was $32.70 per cwt.

Production of tomatoes for processing was 10.9 million tons. Harvested acreage was 355,980 compared with 354,700 in 1990. Average value per ton was $66.40 in 1991.

In Pennsylvania, 6,200 acres of snap beans were harvested for processing in 1991, down 27 percent from the previous year. Total production was 9,420 tons with an average value of $218.00 per ton.

Strawberry production for fresh market and processing was 61,000 cwt., harvested from 1,600 acres. Average value per cwt. was $105.00.

At the U.S. level, 233,450 acres of snap beans were harvested for processing in 1991. Total production decreased 3 percent to 775,780 tons. Canning utilized 544,980 tons of the production. Average value decreased from $183.00 per ton in 1990 to $174.00 in 1991.

U.S. strawberry production in 1991 is estimated at 14 million cwt., up 12 percent from 1990. Acreage harvested was 46,680; the average value per cwt. was $47.30.

Grains, Hay Storage

Pennsylvania's corn stored in all positions on Dec. 1, 1991 was 57.6 million bushels, down 45 percent from Dec. 1, 1990.

On-farm corn stocks amounted to 55 million bushels, while off-farm stocks were 2.6 million bushels.

Wheat stored off farms totaled 5.7 million bushels. Soybeans stored off farms totaled 8.8 million bushels. Barley stored off farms was 699 thousand bushels.

Oats stored in all positions was 6.3 million bushels, 5.4 million on-farm and 934,000 off-farm.

Pennsylvania's on-farm stocks of wheat, soybeans and barley are not published separately but instead are included with an unallocated national total.

Hay stocks on-farms on Dec. 1, 1991 were estimated at 2.58 million tons, down 23 percent from a year ago.

On Dec. 1, 1991, there were 349 off-farm storage facilities (mills, elevators, warehouses, terminals and processors) with a total grain storage capacity of 45 million bushels, up fractionally from Dec. 1, 1990.

On Dec. 1, 1991, on-farm storage capacity was 180 million bushels, unchanged from Dec. 1, 1990.

Nationally, corn stocks in all positions on Dec. 1, 1991 was estimated at 6.54 billion bushels, 6 percent less than on Dec. 1, 1990. Of the total stocks, 4.29 billion bushels were stored on the farm, 12 percent less than last year; and 2.24 billion bushels were stored off the farm, up 9 percent from last year.

All wheat stocks in all positions on Dec. 1, 1991 are estimated at 1.44 billion bushels, down 24 percent from a year ago. Wheat stored on farms was 565 million bushels, while off-farm stocks totaled 877 million bushels, down 23 percent. Off-farm stocks made up 61 percent of total wheat stocks.

Soybeans in all storage positions on Dec. 1, 1991 totaled 1.78 billion bushels, up 6 percent from Dec. 1, 1990. Farm stocks totaled 810 million bushels, 7 percent above last year, and accounted for 46 percent of total soybean stocks. Off-farm stocks are placed at 968 million bushels, 4 percent above a year ago.

Barley stored in all positions on Dec. 1, 1991 totaled 329 million bushels, 8 percent above stocks a year ago. Of the total barley stocks on hand, 195 million bushels were stored on farms, 11 percent above a year earlier; and 134 million bushels or 41 percent of the total were stored off farms, 4 percent above last year.

U.S. hay stocks on farms on Dec. 1, 1991 are estimated to be 111.6 million tons, 6 percent above a year ago.

The total number of off-farm storage facilities in the U.S. on Dec. 1, 1991 was 12,854 with a total grain storage capacity of 8.91 billion bushels, down 2 percent from a year ago.

On-farm grain storage capacity on Dec. 1, 1991 for the United States was 12.2 billion bushels, down 2 percent from a year ago.

Hogs

There were 920,000 hogs and pigs on Pennsylvania farms on Dec. 1, 1991.

This estimated inventory was equal to the previous year's inventory.

Market hog inventory at 820,000 head and breeding stock inventory at 100,000 head were equal to 1990's totals. The September-November 1991 pig crop totaled 324,000 head, unchanged from the same period a year earlier.

There were 39,000 sows farrowed during the quarter, a decrease of 2 percent. The average litter rate was 8.30 pigs per litter, compared to 8.10 for the previous year.

Pennsylvania hog farmers intend to have 39,000 sows farrow during the Dec. 1991-Feb. 1992 period, 3 percent above the actual farrowings a year ago.

Farrowing intentions for the March-May quarter are projected at 38,000 sows, 5 percent fewer than the same period last year.

There were 7,700 hog farmers in the Keystone State during 1991. The total value of the 920,000 hogs and pigs on hand was 69.9 million dollars, a decrease of 10 percent from the previous year.

The average value per head was $76.00 on Dec. 1, 1991, compared to $84.00 a year earlier.

Nationally, the inventory of all hogs and pigs was estimated at 57.0 million head on Dec. 1, 1991. This was 5 percent above a year ago but 4 percent below the Sept. 1, 1991 inventory, which was revised downward by 50 thousand head.

Breeding hog inventory, at 7.22 million was 5 percent above last year and 5 percent above two years ago. Market hog inventory, at 49.8 million, is 5 percent above a year ago and 6 percent above two years ago.

The U.S. pig crop for 1991 totaled 95.1 million head, 5 percent above 1990 and 3 percent above the 1989 pig crop. The Dec. 1990-May 1991 pig crop, estimated at 47.5 million head, is 5 percent above the comparable period a year earlier and less than 1 percent above the comparable 1989 period.

The June-November 1991 pig crop, estimated at 47.6 million head, is 6 percent above last year and 6 percent above the June-November 1989 crop.

U.S. hog producers intend to have 6.22 million sows farrow during the Dec. 1991-May 1992 period, 4 percent above the actual farrowings during the same period a year ago.

Primary data used in setting these hog estimates were obtained from a sample of farmers in Pennsylvania and across the U.S. using probability surveys. These surveys included information from 82,000 agricultural producers. Information was collected during the first half of December by mail, telephone and personal interviews.

Potatoes

Stocks of potatoes stored in the state on Jan. 1 totaled 1,550,000 hundredweight (cwt.), down 34 percent from a year ago. Of the amount, 751,000 cwt., or 48 percent, was stored in processors' facilities.

Stocks are defined as the quantity, whether sold or unsold, remaining in storage for all purposes. Included are shrinkage and waste and other losses that occur after the date of each report. Stocks may also include potatoes produced in other states.

Sales of fall potatoes for all purposes generally account for about 90 percent of the total fall production. Shrinkage, loss and home use account for the remaining 10 percent.

Storage of fall potatoes in the 15 fall storage states totaled 211 million cwt., up 8 percent from last year and 22 percent above two years ago. Farmers and storage operators reported 58 percent of fall production on hand, the same percentage as last year.

Storage consists of 79 percent russet, 18 percent white and 3 percent red potatoes.

Disappearance from 1991 harvest to Jan. 1 was a record 153 million cwt., up 2 percent from last year and 7 percent more than two years ago. Shrinkage and loss totaled 18.8 million cwt., up 6 percent from last year and 15 percent above two years ago.

Processors in the eight major processing states have used a record 70.6 million cwt. so far this season, down 2 percent from last year, but 6 percent more than two years ago.

Fruit Crops

Pennsylvania's 1991 commercial apple production is estimated at 530 million pounds, an increase of 18 percent from the 1990 crop of 450 million pounds.

The value of the apple production (based on first utilization) was set at $56.7 million.

Last year's peach crop totaled 100 million pounds, up 32 percent from the 1990 peach crop. PASS placed the value of utilized peach production at $18.1 million.

Pear production in the state totaled 5,500 tons for the year, 67 percent above the previous year. Utilized production of 5,350 tons was valued at $2.2 million.

Sweet cherry production in 1991 was 1,100 tons, compared with 50 tons in 1990. Utilized production of 1000 tons was valued at $1.5 million. The state's tart cherry crop more than tripled in 1991, from 3.5 to 11.5 million pounds. The 1991 price and value will be published by PASS on July 7, 1992.

Last year's grape production of 78,000 tons was 47 percent more than the 1990 production. Utilized production was valued at $17.9 million.

Nationally, the 1991 apple crop totaled 9.9 billion pounds, up 2 percent from 1990. Washington State — the leading producer — reported 4.3 billion pounds, 10 percent below the previous year.

U.S. production of other fruit crops and the percentage change from 1990 were: peaches, 2.7 billion pounds, up 20 percent; pears, 908,500 tons, down 6 percent; sweet cherries, 151,550 tons, down 3 percent; tart cherries, 189.9 million pounds, down 9 percent; and grapes, 5.5 million tons, down 4 percent.

Livestock Notes

Pseudorabies (PRV)

The Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry lists Lehigh County as a PRV-infected county. Remember, also, that swine regulations were adopted on August 17, 1991 that require pseudorabies testing of Pennsylvania swine herds that wish to sell or transport feeder pigs.

Feeder pigs from counties with PRV-infected herds are allowed to move intrastate or interstate only if the swine are test negative within 30 days of movement or from qualified pseudorabies-free herds or from pseudorabies monitored (negative) herds. Pseudorabies monitored herd status is granted by the department on the basis of a statistically significant negative pseudorabies sample of the herd at least once a year.

Livestock markets have been advised that feeder pigs may not be marketed unless from PRV-free counties or from qualified herds. This will mean that owners of feeder pigs must provide proof of one of the following: (1) The herd of origin is a Qualified Pseudorabies Negative Herd; or (2) the herd of origin is a Pseudorabies Monitored Herd; or (3) the feeder swine for sale are pseudorabies test negative no more than 30 days before sale; or (4) the herd of origin is located in a county not known to contain swine infected with or quarantined because of pseudorabies. A properly completed Bureau test report (AAI-11) including test results is acceptable documentation that test requirements have been met.

Proper identification of feeder and breeder swine is necessary to document PRV status and to permit trace of movement. Tattoo of the ear or flank with a department-registered herd number or herd acronym or a unique eartag or an eartag bearing the registered herd number or herd acronym is acceptable identification of feeder pigs.

Breeder animals must be individually identified with a unique eartag or registered ear or flank tattoo with a department-registered herd number or herd acronym and use of a standard ear notch system.

Feeder and breeder swine must be identified prior to leaving the herd of origin. A herd number may be obtained from the Bureau of Animal Industry. Eartags may be obtained from animal and veterinary supply companies such as Ketchum Manufacturing Company, Lake Luzerne, NY 12846; Hasco International, Box 130, Dayton, KY 41074; and Monroe Specialty Company, Inc., Monroe, WI 53566.

Swine producers need to take special precautions to keep pseudorabies out of their herds. The disease threatens to infect most counties in the eastern half of the state. Only test-negative swine should be added to herds and producers should avoid contact of any kind with infected herds or contaminated premises, equipment or conveyances.

If you have questions about PRV control, please call your veterinarian, a regional office of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture [in Region VII, Creamery, (215) 489-1003], or the bureau of animal industry division of animal health at Harrisburg, (717) 738-5301.

Mt. Joy Farmers Review Year

VERNON ACHENBACH, JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Members of the Mt. Joy Farmers Cooperative Association met recently to review the year-end business and elect officers.

The association markets its members's milk, which amounted to 121,889,047 pounds from October 1990 to October 1991.

Awards presentations were also made during the meeting.

Elected to 3-year terms as board directors for the association were Donald Risser and Robert Brandt, both active in the group.

Awards presented were to members for producing premium-quality milk (low somatic cell count, clean test) for 12 straight months.

Although 19 members failed to qualify for the award by one month, 11 did make the association's honor roll list. In addition to getting the recognition, those who produce quality milk get premiums which are added onto their milk check.

Those who received honor roll awards were Donald Drager, Glenn B. Gockley and son, Harold Witmer (tank #2), Benjamin Shertzer, J. Mark and Paul Miller, Arlin Benner, David Landis, H.E. Garber and son, David Dum, Gerald Seibel, and Harvey Espenshade.

New members to the association were also announced. They were Vernon Heisey, Manheim; David Wenger, Manheim; David Reiff, Annville; Curtis Hoover, Manheim; Glenn Hershey, Gordonville; Joe Martin and Dennis Lehman; Kennard Henley, Cochranville; Dennis Weaver of New Holland; James Zimmerman, Mt. Joy; Glenn Barnhart, Palmyra; Amos Martin, Narvon; John Petersheim, Gap; Benjaman Baltozer, Elizabethtown; Eric Jordan, Little Britain; Barry Myers, Hershey; and Nelson Weiler, Manheim.

The top 10 producers recognized were Ken Zurin with 5,567,598 pounds of milk; John Landis with 5,392,755 pounds; Luke and James Brubaker, 3,424,480 pounds; Risser Brothers, 3,066,833 pounds; Arlin Benner, 2,961,176 pounds; Harold Brubaker, 2,876,761 pounds; J.R. Groff, 2,403,539 pounds; Merle King, 2,134,962 pounds; George Rohrer, 2,059,684; and Lester Hursh, 2,048,344.

In other business, officials said that the business future of the cooperative seemed solid with contracts with two major different processors — to 1996 with Johanna and 1999 with Beatrice.

Also, the new component pricing should not greatly change the overall price received by the cooperative for its milk, but will create some changes in the individual milk checks, which should be coming into producer hands soon.

SUNY, John Deere Form Educational Partnership

COBLESKILL, N.Y.— An educational partnership unique in the eastern United States between the John Deere Company and SUNY Cobleskill was announced recently on the Cobleskill campus.

John Deere Company of Columbus, Ohio, has selected the College of Agriculture and Technology at Cobleskill as the site of its two-year Ag Technician Training Program.

The program is only offered at a few select colleges, and Cobleskill is the first college east of the Mississippi River to form a partnership with John Deere.

This cooperative venture is designed to more effectively train students in servicing and repairing agricultural equipment. It will prepare students whose career goal is employment at an equipment dealership to keep pace with rapid advancements in equipment technology.

Beginning in fall 1992, Cobleskill students will receive state-of-the-art training on John Deere-supplied equipment through a combination of classroom instruction, hands-on laboratory training and supervised work experience at a John Deere dealership.

The new Associate in Applied Science degree program is offered as a sequence under Cobleskill College's existing Power and Machinery major in the Agricultural Engineering curriculum.

Students must be sponsored by a John Deere dealership to participate, and will spend a minimum of 20 weeks at a John Deere dealership during semester and summer breaks.

Usually, graduates of the program return to the dealership as full-time employees. The college will assist students in locating a sponsoring dealership if they are unable to find one.

As part of the alliance, John Deere will provide SUNY Cobleskill with training aids and equipment valued above $250,000, as well as technical manuals and instruction for college faculty.

Students will receive expert instruction in use of the most modern diagnostic tools and the latest John Deere tractors, combines, implements and individual equipment components. Areas of concentration include engines, power trains; and electrical, hydraulic and diesel systems.

In the classroom, students will round out their technological training with a variety of required and elective courses in management, salesmanship, English, mathematics, the sciences and social sciences.

John Deere Company established its partnership with education to help meet the needs for well-qualified college graduates to fill challenging, professional job openings.

Every year, well-paid, career-oriented positions at John Deere dealerships are left unfilled due to a shortage of trained technicians, according to company officials. There is a significant demand for well-qualified dealer technicians in the large area served by the Columbus Sales Branch today.

Besides SUNY Cobleskill, the only other institutions in the U.S. currently offering the John Deere Ag Tech program are located in Iowa, Kansas, North Dakota and Nebraska.

Seeking to start a training program in the East, John Deere Company, Columbus, Ohio contacted SUNY Cobleskill's Department of Agricultural Engineering, which also offers the upper-division Bachelor of Technology degree in Agricultural Equipment Technology and six other associate degree course sequences.

As the largest agricultural equipment manufacturer in the world, Deere and company's worldwide sales totaled $7.055 billion in 1991. In addition to New York State, John Deere dealerships throughout the Northeast and portions of the Midwest are eligible to sponsor students at SUNY Cobleskill. John Deere's Columbus, Ohio branch serves dealerships in a 16-state region.

To obtain more information or an application, please contact the Admission Office, (518) 234-5525 or Agriculture and Natural Resources Division, (518) 234-5323; SUNY Cobleskill, Cobleskill, New York 12043.

Firm Honored For Safety

WARREN (Warren Co.) — Hyma Devore Lumber Mill was recently recognized for their commitment to safety by the Warren Area Loggers and Sawmillers Safety Committee and the Warren County Cooperative Extension.

Hyma Devore has been a strong supporter of the annual Warren County Loggers and Sawmillers safety competitions since their inception. In addition, Hyma Devore's team of competitors placed first in the safety competitions this year.

Equipment Operator Workshop Set

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The 37th annual Equipment Operators Workshop has been scheduled for Tuesday, February 25 in the auditorium of the Berks County Agricultural Center.

Presenters this year include Berks County Conservation District erosion and sediment pollution control technicians, Pennsylvania Land Improvement Contractors Association (PLICA), Bernie Morrissey Insurance, Bureau of Forestry, Pennsylvania Fish Commission, USDA Soil Conservation Service, and other agencies. This year, lunch will be sponsored by Wheel and Crawler Equipment Company.

Some of the topics included in the program will be current conservation concerns, wetland regulations, PNDI study of Berks County, and insurance-computers-safety.

A letter of invitation has been mailed to contractors. Any contractor is welcome to attend and can make a reservation by calling the conservation district at (215) 372-4657.

White Oak Mills Promotes Lloyd

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Don Lloyd has accepted the position of Director of the dairy department for White Oak Mills, a dairy and swine feed manufacturer located here with a branch located in Pinola, Pa.

White Oak Mills services Pennsylvania and areas in Delaware and Maryland.

Lloyd has been with White Oak Mills for more than six years. His extensive dairy background includes growing up on a dairy farm, managing a dairy operation, and more than 15 years of direct contact and experience in working with dairy producers in a dairy nutrition capacity.

Lloyd's responsibilities as the director of the dairy department include overseeing White Oak Mill's dairy supervisors and sales and service representatives. Lloyd will also be responsible for the feed programs and custom rations for White Oak customers, as well as new product research and development in his new capacity.

Don Lloyd

J I Case Streamlines Business

RACINE, Wis. — J I Case, a leading maker of agricultural and constructon equipment headquartered here, revealed the major step in its previously announced restructuring plan that will streamline the organization, improve communications, reduce administrative costs, and improve customer service and response to market dynamics.

The simplified structure will organize the company according to functional areas of responsibility rather than along divisional, or product, lines. As a result, the company is dissolving its two primary business groups — agricultural equipment and components and construction equipment and parts - and consolidating support staffs under the heads of North American sales and marketing, North American manufacturing, and worldwide engineering.

In announcing the restructuring, Robert J. Carlson, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "This is a necessary progression in our plan to turn this company around and put it on a firm footing for the future. By simplifying the overall structure of the company, we will dramatically improve accountability, communication and operational control, which should yield significant competitive advantages and help us achieve our goal of financial viability."

The following executives were named to lead the new functional organization: .

• Edward J. Campbell, who joined Case from Tenneco Inc.'s Newport News Shipbuilding on January 6, continues as president, reporting to Carlson.

• Peter Menikoff, who came to Case in November 1991 from Tenneco headquarters in Houston, will continue as executive vice president responsible for all financial activities, audit, law, information services, real estate, corporate planning and development, and Case Credit Corporation. He also reports to Carlson.

• Richard M. Christman, 41, is named senior vice president, sales and marketing-North America, reporting to Campbell. Christman has been with Case since 1975 and has been senior vice president, parts division, since 1989. He earlier served for three years as senior vice president, European sales and marketing, two years as vice president, North American agricultural retail enterprises, and in various retail sales and marketing planning positions in both of Case's agricultural and construction equipment divisions. Christman earned a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering from Rose Hulman Institute of Technology and an M.B.A. from the University of Michigan in marketing/finance.

• Thomas E. Evans, 40, is promoted to senior vice president, manufacturing-North America, reporting to Campbell. Evans joined Case in 1989 from Federal Mogul Corporation where he had been general manager of their Seal and Ball Bearing Operations. Earlier he spent 14 years in engineering and manufacturing management with Rockwell International. Evans most recently served Case as vice president, worldwide engineering and North American manufacturing for the Construction Equipment Group.

• Kenneth Q. Kessler, 60, is promoted to senior vice president, engineering-worldwide, reporting to Campbell. Kessler has been working with Case since 1989 and was named director of product development in September 1991. After receiving his B.S. degree in agricultural engineering from the University of Missouri, Kessler spent 34 years in engineering management with Deere & Co., working with both agricultural and construction equipment.

• Theodore R. French, 37, is promoted to senior vice president and chief financial officer, reporting to Menikoff. He replaces Edward McFadden, who has resigned. French has served as vice president, corporate planning and development, since joining Case in November 1989 after 12 years with Rockwell International. While at Rockwell, French held a number of increasingly responsible positions in financial management, including plant controller, manager of operations analysis, director of financial planning and analysis, and director of business development. French earned both a B.B.A. degree in economics and an M.B.A. in finance from the University of Georgia.

$4 Billion To Former USSR 'More Than Any Nation'

ORLANDO, Fla. — The U.S. has provided $4 billion in credit or food assistance to the republics of the former Soviet Union during the past 13 months and will continue its aid efforts to "help their evolution to democracies and market-based economies," Secretary of Agriculture Edward R. Madigan said.

The U.S. effort is greater than those of "any other country or combination of countries," he said, and it is important not only because it will help assure stability in the world but because it "could be an important market for American agriculture."

Madigan, speaking to delegates at the 63rd annual meeting of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, addressed critics who said the U.S. food and humanitarian aid effort has been too slow.

"We have to do it right," he said. "We have to protect the integrity of the programs we are using or we could risk losing those programs which are important to American agriculture."

He said USDA experts this week are in the St. Petersburg area of Russia to begin plans for a model farm, in Armenia to build an agricultural extension education effort, and in Moscow to plan for delivery of the next shipments of food assistance.

The secretary also said:

• The so-called "Dunkel text" being considered in multilateral trade negotiations is a "framework from which we can negotiate a successful agricultural conclusion" and one which "goes a long way toward" his goal, which is "a substantial reduction and ultimate elimination of export subsidies."

• President Bush will face up to the challenge of "getting the economy moving again" without risking the loss of improvement in employment, interest rates, and inflation during the last 10 years. "All the agencies and departments of government are trying to move money out to spur the economy," he said.

• If the president proposes reinstatement of the investment tax credit and reduction of the capital gains tax rate, Madigan urged more appreciation of "how it will be very beneficial to agriculture," stimulating investment in equipment and buildings. "We need to get the story out because we've been taking a terrible beating from the impression that these are only for millionaires."

• He wants USDA to become an agency "where we really care about people and where we really are responsive to their needs." He cited a four-point program including several pilot efforts to learn ways of offering farm programs at the county level in a more "farmer-friendly" manner. He also cited efforts to find new markets for farm products, "make agriculture more credible as an environmentally friendly agency," and improve nutrition education and food safety education efforts.

Automatic's Row Crop Guidance System Allows Stress-Free Planting

PENDER, Neb. — The design of a new row crop guidance system, the Navigator II, introduced by Automatic Equipment Mfg. Co., allows for stress-free planting and cultivating without implement wear and tear, according to Automatic's president.

"The Navigator II's three-point guidance system is accurate, versatile and reliable," Jay Hesse said. "The heavy-duty construction of the Navigator II, along with its cam follower design, will deliver years of maintenance-free guidance."

Automatic purchased the rights to manufacture and sell the Navigator II from HR Manufacturing of Pender, Neb.

The Navigator II's quick-attach coupler establishes a moving interface between the tractor and the implement, he said. That enables the Navigator II to keep the implement positioned correctly, traveling parallel with the row, while allowing lateral movement of the tractor.

Hesse said an advantage of traveling parallel with the row, in comparison with guidance systems that angle the toolbar, is that the damaging side pressure that is transferred to the stabilizing coulters is eliminated.

The Navigator II is available in two models — heavy duty 3-point narrow and heavy duty 3-point wide. The heavy duty 3-point wide model should be used on tractors with more than 180hp, especially on 12 row or larger ridge-till equipment and with large 4-wheel drive tractors. Two custom-made sizes are also available.

Other design advantages include:

• Eliminates excessive stress and pull on hydraulic components that are designed into other guidance systems.

• Few moving parts. One cylinder, one electro-hydraulic valve and eight needle-bearing cam followers ride on a track of high carbon steel to provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement, eliminating wear points.

• Versatile enough to work on pull-type equipment.

• Can be used with or without stabilizing or steering coulters, eliminating the unnecessary expense of additional equipment.

• Works efficiently and effectively on 4-row cultivators, up to 16-row ridge-till cultivators and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

• The Navigator II's Auto Slope utilizes a slope-sensing pendulum that automatically compensates for sidehill draft.

Grange Testifies For Nutrient Legislation

BLOOMSBURG (Columbia Co.) — The time has come for the passage of a statewide nutrient management law to benefit farmers and consumers alike, according to a representative of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

John Walter, a farmer from Lewisburg and a member of Buffalo Valley Grange, testified before Sen. Edward Helfrick (R) and other members of the Senate Agriculture Committee at a hearing on HB 496, which would establish a statewide nutrient management plan.

"For the last 20 years, the Grange has supported using a nutrient management plan on the farm," Walter said. "Since nutrient management is a growing problem involving commercial fertilizer use and the excess application of animal waste to the land, the Grange continues to support policy involving a statewide nutrient management program."

Walter highlighted several good points of HB 496 and also discussed slight variations which the Grange believes would strengthen the legislation.

A key point of HB 496 is that State Conservation Districts approve and enforce farm nutrient management plans, according to Walter. The Department of Agriculture should run the nutrient management technicians' certification program, he continued.

"In fact, a farmer himself can become certified and write his own plan," Walter said. "This will defray the costs of hiring an outside technician."

Because of the danger of local ordinance unknowingly thwarting the intent of HB 496, Grange policy states that any nutrient management legislation should include provisions preempting all local governments from establishing rules, regulations or ordinances.

"As a member of the East Buffalo Township Planning Commission, I would hate to see the township be the governing body for nutrient management because we do not have the technical expertise to be effective," Walter said.

Walter emphasized the importance of the section in HB 496, which recognizes that nonagricultural nutrient problems continue to the non-point source problem. The Grange believes that DER should be required to assess these nonagricultural nutrients and identify what regulating initiatives are necessary to correct the problem.

In closing, Walter warned the committee about several points:

• Time frames for implementing nutrient management should not be too stringent. In the onset, it will be difficult to predict the workload of conservation districts or the funding which will be made available.

• A provisions should be added to the legislation stating that the person who farms the land should be responsible for the nutrient management plan, regardless of whether he owns or rents the land.

• A current definition of animal equivalent unit should be used in HB 496.

• Farmers should not be forced into specific times and dates for spreading manure because of weather and other factors.

• The legislation discusses a periodic soil and manure analysis which the Grange believes is too broad and could be interpreted to mean that a test is required before each land application.

"The fact is that nutrient management will save farmers money in the long run," said William Ringler, state master (president) of the Grange. "Years ago a farmer may have applied 2,000 pounds of fertilizer per acre to a crop.

Poultry Outlook Released

Milton Madison
Assistant Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State

There is considerable disagreement between economists on the economic outlook for 1992.

Some have stated that we are now in our 18th month of recession, making this the longest downturn since the 1930s. Others have cited government statistics that show slow economic growth in the second and third quarters of 1991 as evidence of a short recession running from August 1990 to April of 1991. A continuation of slow economic growth in 1992 is expected by this group. A third group has been touting the double-dip recession, stating that the economy had a short recession, a short recovery, and returned to recession in November 1991.

The November data for industrial production supports the prospect of a new recession because it fell 0.4 percent from its level in October. Many retailers report sales for the holidays have been disappointing. The Federal Reserve Board was expected to reduce selected interest rates by one-quarter and one-half percent in December to encourage increased economic activity. Since many companies are increasing their equity-to-debt ratio and bank regulators are carefully screening credit commitments, it is questionable how much incentive lower interest rates will provide.

What are the implications of this economic outlook for the poultry industry? The current slow recovery from the 1990-1991 recession will not provide consumers with the confidence to increase their food spending budgets, especially spending at restaurants and for the higher priced items in supermarket display cases. While the economy is weak, I do not believe it will fall into recession in 1992 and the continuing recovery will be seen in most sectors of the economy.

Poultry Outlook

Total meat and poultry supplies for 1991 were 3 percent larger than in 1990. Another 3 percent increase is expected for 1992. This will be the eighth straight year of increases in meat availability.

Turkey markets felt the pressure of increased meat supplies in their peak marketing season, Thanksgiving. Even with fourth quarter production equal to 1990, wholesale prices in 1991 were held ten cents per pound lower than the previous year's Thanksgiving market.

Production for 1991 was a little more than 2 percent larger than in 1990, the smallest production increase since 1984, and prices were two cents per pound lower. With 1991 a break-even or small loss year for most producers, prospects for large meat supplies and higher feed costs should keep the brakes on production increases for 1992. Production growth of 3 percent for 1992 is expected, with some improvement in prices coming by next Thanksgiving.

Broiler production in 1991 was over 4 percent larger than in 1990. Prices for 1991 felt the pressure of increased meat supplies and were two cents lower than in 1990. Slightly higher production costs brought net returns for broilers to five cents per pound in 1991.

Stronger than expected exports in the last half of 1991 helped support broiler prices, another export record should be revealed when the final 1991 data are reported. Early last fall, the breeder flock had been expanded to 5 percent larger than the previous year and may reach nearly 8 percent larger this month. Large production increases will be possible if all these eggs are used to produce birds.

Early 1992 prices should give some indication of whether this large potential increase in production will be realized. Low returns early in the year will slow the annual production increase to 4 percent. Prices and returns will be slightly lower than the levels seen in 1991.

Egg production for 1991 was nearly 1 percent larger than in 1990. Shell egg demand on a per capita basis continued to decline. Total egg consumption dropped by nearly three eggs from 1990 to 1991, while processed egg consumption increased by four, leaving a net loss of seven eggs in the shell form.

A slowing in the total egg consumption drop is expected for 1992, (two eggs), but increased use of egg products should continue. If you are an egg producer, you must be producing increasing amounts of your eggs for breaking and processing uses or expecting more competition for your shell egg markets as more eggs are marketed as breakers. A 1 percent increase in egg production will be seen in 1992 with prices slightly lower than in 1991 and net returns at the wholesale level near four cents per dozen.

All poultry and egg producers will feel economic pressure to produce and market their products more efficiently in 1992, since food spending budgets will be tight.

Hay Auction

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — At times it is difficult for farmers to find hay for their animals. It is even more difficult to find hay that has been tested.

Now you can find hay at the Kutztown Produce Auction located just east of Kutztown.

The hay and straw auctions will be held on the second and last Saturday of each month at 9:30 a.m. with the exception of Saturday, February 29. That sale will be held on Friday, February 28 at 9:30 a.m. prior to their annual farm equipment auction.

At the February 28 session, the Penn State nutrition van will be at the auction testing hay samples using the Near Infra-Red (NIR) test. This will allow buyers to know the quality of the hay before purchases are made.

This test will analyze hay samples for dry matter, crude protein, acid detergent fiber, neutral detergent fiber, total digestible nutrients, net energy for lactation, net energy for maintenance, net energy for gain, calcium, phosphorus, potassium, magnesium, horse digestible energy, and horse total digestible nutrients.

If there is interest, the van will return to the hay auction on each of the first Saturdays in March and April to continue the testing program. If you are interested in buying hay that has been tested, please support the hay auction on February 28.

For more information, contact the Kutztown Produce Auction at (215) 683-7161 or the Penn State Extension Service at (215) 378-1327.

Adams County Recognizes Outstanding Individuals

Adams County 4-H Beef Club graduates Seth Small, center, New Oxford and Kevin Grim, right, Thomasville, were presented at 4-H pen set by Adams County 4-H Beef Club President Ben Stine. They were recognized at the 4-H beef buyers appreciation banquet.

Elected to the board, Adams County Cooperative Extension Association, at the annual meeting were the following, left to right, Vincent Lobaugh, Aspers; Cindy Zepp, New Oxford; Mary Ann Oyler, Biglerville; Alfred Kammerer, Gettysburg. Absent when the picture was taken was Janet Eastman, Biglerville; Pamela Ketterman, Gettysburg; and Mary Kay Roche, New Oxford.

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Several individuals were honored for their efforts by the Adams County extension at recent banquets.

The outstanding 4-H beef member is Robert Martin, Orrtanna, presented at the 4-H beef buyers appreciation banquet. Also at the banquet, Adams County 4-H Beef Club graduates were recognized. They are Seth Small, New Oxford and Kevin Grim, Thomasville. Seth and Kevin completed their last year in the 4-H Beef Club because of their ages.

At the extension banquet in York Springs, Carol and Helen Rex of Biglerville were presented with the Extension Leadership Award at the annual meeting of the extension.

Paul R. and Mary Waybright, Gettysburg, were honored as the county's master farmers at the Master Farmer luncheon recently at Camp Hill.

At the extension banquet, the Adams County Extension Association elected the following to the board of directors: Vincent Lobaugh, Aspers; Cindy Zepp, New Oxford; Mary Ann Oyler, Biglerville; Alfred Kammerer, Gettysburg; Janet Eastman, Biglerville; Pamela Ketterman, Gettysburg; and Mary Kay Roche, New Oxford.

Adams County's Newest Master Farmer, Paul R. Waybright and his wife Mary, Gettysburg, receives congratulations from Thomas E. Piper, county extension director. Piper introduced the Waybrights with a slide-illustrated presentation at the Master Farmer Luncheon held recently.

Robert Martin, Orrtanna, receives a plaque as the 1991 Outstanding Adams County 4-H Beef Club member from club organizational leader Charles Sherman. The recognition was presented at the 4-H beef buyers appreciation banquet.

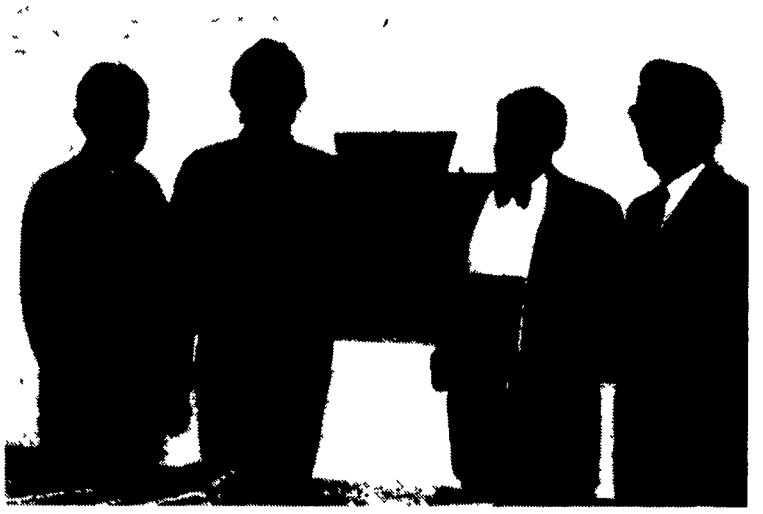
Montgomery District Honors Members



CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Ernest D Yocum Jr., far left, chairman of the Montgomery County Conservation District, congratulates recipients of 1991 conservation awards for their efforts in conserving soil and protecting Pennsylvania waters from the effects of soil pollution.

Lee Reinford, Schwenksville, received the Outstanding Conservation Farm Award for conservation practices utilized at Breezy Slope Farm. Conservation tillage, strip cropping, and a nutrient management system are some of the conservation measures and practices employed at the Schwenksville farm.

Barry Davis of Pottstown received the Conservation Tillage Award for the production of no-till legumes and cover cropping. The conservation tillage method conserves approximately six tons of soil per acre.

The Conservation District also recognized nonagricultural conservation practices employed by developers to restrict soil loss during the building process. Alastair R. Ross, vice president of administrative affairs for Sterling/Winthrop Inc., Upper Providence Township, was presented with the Cooperator/Developer of the Year Award for team effort in protecting the natural resources through the implementation and maintenance of soil and water conservation practices.

Also recognized was Rich Hansen of Hansen Properties, Douglass Township, who received the Long-Term Conservation Practices For the Production of Nursery Crop Award.

Artist, Subject Are Rare Breeds

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A visit to a contemporary art gallery might convince you that realism is dead. But to one group of artists, it still reigns supreme.

"Very few people have the patience necessary to draw the intricate design on a butterfly's wings," said Christine Jung, biological illustrator in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and one of more than 1,300 members in the Guild of Natural Science Illustrators.

Biological illustrators aren't your stereotypical starving artists. They work closely with scientists, recording in precise detail the appearance of common and exotic plant and animal species.

While their work rarely hangs in museums, it is widely published in textbooks, field guides, popular magazines, and academic journals. Their drawings teach us about the intricacies of the natural world and record its unique genetic traits.

"Many biological illustrators specialize in one scientific discipline," said Jung. "Some work with doctors to illustrate the human body and present patient-care information. Others draw fish or wildlife. My specialty is entomology, the study of insects."

Jung's pen-and-ink drawings grace the covers of pest sheets prepared by Penn State researchers. The sheets help homeowners and agricultural producers identify and control troublesome insects. Jung's work also appears on Penn State computer programs that help growers across the nation find better ways to deal with insect pests.

To prepare each drawing, Jung first studies the insect under a dissection microscope. "Some specimens are so tiny they can barely be seen by the naked eye," she said. "For instance, tracheal mites live inside the lungs of bees, so you can imagine how small they are.

"Because I repeatedly have to check my drawings against the specimen, a single drawing may take more than 10 hours. The researcher who needs the illustration for a publication has to approve it for accuracy.

"I used to just squash bugs," Jung said, "but after spending so much time examining them and learning about their behavior, I've really come to appreciate them.

"My favorite assignment so far has been drawing the masked bedbug hunter. This insect looks and acts like an armored tank. It throws dust on itself and waits for bedbugs to come along before it attacks."

Many biological illustrators are drawn to this career because they are skilled artistically and scientifically and are unwilling to specialize in one discipline at the expense of the other.

Jung studied art at Iowa State with a minor in biology, then pursued an MFA in visual arts at Penn State. She recently exhibited her work at the annual meeting of the Guild of Natural Science Illustrators at Duke University.

"To survive in this field, you have to have excellent scientific and drawing skills," said Jung. "You have to communicate well with scientists to find out how to interpret the subject matter and present it in a way both experts and lay people can understand."

John Deere Offers New Free Estate Planning Program

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—Heralding a new free, estate planning service, available through John Deere dealears, Vincent Siecinski, from John Deere Insurance Company, provided useful information to a group of farmers and dealer representatives from Landis Bros. Inc., Tuesday evening. An out-take from the insurance programs long available to Deere dealers, the new service that includes individualized suggestions on how to save taxes and probate costs is now availble to customers.

"Most estates are made up of various fixed assets accumulated over a lifetime," Siecinski said. "These accumulations include livestock, crops, machinery and real estate, but very little cash. Upon death, the need for cash can consume the assets and leave very little to pass on to your heirs. A good plan helps to reduce taxes and settlement expenses.

Siecinski said an estate plan seeks to reduce taxes and fees by bypassing probate, removing assets from the estate, and by controlling the valuation of assets. This is done very legally through joint accounts, contracts, buy/sell agreements and by revocable trusts. In addition, other strategies include gifts made during lifetime, irrevocable trusts, and forming the second estate.

Because of the unified tax credit, there is no tax due on estates up to $600,000. Estates over this amount are federally taxed from 37 percent on up to 60 percent depending on the size of the estate.

Siecinski said not only should farmers have a will, they should also be sure their will is updated to match the present situation in the family and on the farm. Wills made when the children were small or before the present level of assets were achieved may not be representative of what you want your will to do.

Vincent Siecinski gives strategies to reduce estate taxes and fees.

To get started, you need to get together with your consultant for a confidential fact-finding scession. Then confirm your goals and objectives, develop analysis, review alternatives, make decisions and come up with an estate plan that distributes assets as desired, maximizes family financial security and minimizes estate taxes and costs.

Research studies show that taxes and transferring your property at death can take from 10 percent to 70 percent of your assets. A good estate plan will help you reduce this drain from the amount you want your beneficiaries to receive.

For more information about this free service from the John Deere Company, call your local John Deere dealer. Or contact Vincent Siecinski at (412) 836-3768.

Hollywood: Get Animal Facts Straight

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Livestock and poultry farmers and ranchers along with feed, animal health, and equipment companies are mailing actress Candice Bergen coffee mugs with industry logos to hopefully replace a mug from the People for Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA) the actress carries in her hit TV show "Murphy Brown."

The coffee cup mail-in is dubbed "Mugs for Murphy" by the Animal Industry Foundation (AIF) Washington, D.C.

"We've gotten calls from sharp-eyed AIF supporters across the country noting Ms. Bergen carried a PETA mug in the last couple of episodes of 'Murphy Brown.' While the mug itself is no big deal, we'd like to think an actress of Ms. Bergen's standing lacks all the facts about radical animal rights groups — or maybe she just needs a new mug," said AIF Executive Director Steve Kopperud.

Farmers and ranchers are proud of the professional care they must give their livestock and poultry, and the quality food products — at affordable prices — they provide to meet consumer demand. However, farm families are increasingly frustrated by unfounded public attacks on their livelihoods by uninformed animal rights groups.

"Ms. Bergen has a right to her personal philosophy. However, the PETA mug is a very negative symbol to farmers, ranchers, and others in the food industry," Kopperud said. "That mug being seen by millions every Monday night strikes a sensitive nerve with farmers and ranchers."

The public must realize PETA and groups sharing its philosophy seek to end all animal use for all purposes. They use diet and environmental propaganda and misinformation, usually staged as publicity stunts, in order to promote this agenda. Kopperud pointed to last summer's full-page ad in the "Des Moines Register" — bought by PETA — comparing meat eating to serial murder in Milwaukee, as an example of such a stunt.

"Now, we want to get the attention of the entertainment industry, especially creative people who increasingly inject a one-sided animal rights philosophy into TV programs and movies," Kopperud said.

"We want folks to do their homework and learn facts, rather than believing PETA pamphlets," Kopperud said, offering to meet with the "Murphy Brown" star, introduce her to real farmers, and let them give her the truth of modern food production.

"Writers, producers, directors, actors and others need to understand there are people at risk from the animal rights philosophy. There are 2.5 million farm families in America, and millions of employees of companies in food production and distribution who rely on those families. In addition, those who rely on animal byproducts for day-to-day health, including heart patients, diabetics and others, are concerned. These people see animal rights as a threat to their quality of life.

"And, if that doesn't get their attention, studios should at least remember: Folks in agriculture watch lots of TV, buy movie tickets, and shell out hard-earned dollars for sponsor products."

Farmers and ranchers are being joined in the "Mugs for Murphy" effort by the U.S. biomedical research community. The National Association for Biomedical Research is calling on its membership to mail Bergen coffee mugs with institutional logos.

AIF is a charitable education foundation dedicated to educating consumers about modern livestock and poultry production and the quality of life most Americans enjoy because of the efforts of farmers and ranchers.

Mugs are being sent to Bergen at the following address: Candice Bergen, The Murphy Brown Show, c/o CBS Television, 524 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019.

Weinberger Establishes Horticulture Scholarship

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. John H. Weinberger, a 1928 Penn State graduate, has contributed $15,000 to Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences to establish the John H. Weinberger Scholarship in Horticulture.

The scholarship will provide recognition and financial assistance to outstanding undergraduates enrolled or planning to enroll in the Department of Horticulture.

Before h , retirement in 1973, Weinberger worked for 41 years as a research horticulturist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service. Based principally in Georgia and California, he developed and released 37 fruit varieties, including Fantasia, the leading nectarine variety in the United States; Friar, the leading fresh plum variety; and Flame Seedless, the second most important table grape produced in the country.

Weinberger is a member of the Agricultural Research Service Science Hall of Fame and a fellow of the American Society for Horticultural Science.

DEAD SOW REMOVAL BECOMES ONE MAN JOB

The Sow Hearse has an efficient, hand-operated winch connected to a steel cable and pulley that enables one person to pull a sow from the floor onto the cart to transport to a disposal.

Tri-County Confinement Systems of Lebanon has introduced the Sow Hearse to remove dead sows from confinement stalls in swine systems.

The death of a sow in a stall results in a very difficult and unpleasant job for at least two people. With a Sow Hearse, the task is much simpler and can be accomplished by one person.

The Sow Hearse, made of solid steel rod, is a rubber-wheeled cart designed to negotiate the narrow aisles of many confinement barns. On its top is an efficient, hand-operated winch connected to a steel cable that rides on a nylon pulley. When the cable is looped around the sow and secured, she can be pulled easily from the floor of her stall onto the sloped bed of the Sow Hearse. The machine then functions as a cart to transport the dead animal to a disposal location.

Dimensions of the Sow Hearse are 22" wide x 24" long x 4'4" high.

TRI-COUNTY Sow Hearse Makes The Removal Of A Dead Sow From A Confinement Stall An Easy Job For One Person. Made Of Solid Steel, It Is A Durable Easy-To-Operate Machine... A Must For Today's Confinement System Operator!

Dairy Meeting Held For Farmers

ONO (Lebanon Co.)—A local veterinarian opened the Umberger's of Fontana dairy meeting here Tuesday, by listing goals dairymen should consider for their herds.

"Goal setting on the dairy farm is very important," said Charlie Gardner. "You need to ask yourself is the goal of interest to you? Is it obtainable? Is it measureable? and what is the time frame?"

Gardner said the most important goal should be to know what it costs to make 100 lbs. of milk. If you know such things as feed cost, labor cost or machinery cost, you can figure where to cut back if you need to do so.

Other suggested goals were: make hired labor part of the team; receive all possible premiums for your milk; feed high quality forages; improve cow confort; keep calving intervals reasonable; be on track with replacements; control culling; and work on the level of milk production.

"When you reach the first eight goals," Gardner said, "the milk production will take care of itself. If you look only at production and not at profit, you may not be doing the best job."

Another topic covered by Purina Mills representatives included research work done on Ultimate EXT, the new dairy feed that improved production on 6,000 cows in commercial herds by five pounds of milk per day per cow.

In addition, speakers covered fly control, protein nutrition, and other Purina research for the 90s. Lunch was on the house and a panel discussion concluded the program.

MMI Elects Officers

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — Pennsylvania dairy leader Tom Croner, of Berlin, has been elected first vice president to the board of directors for Milk Marketing Inc., a regional marketing cooperative headquartered in Strongsville, Ohio.

Actively involved in dairying, Croner was first re-elected as a director to the MMI board, representing District 3 dairy producer members in Fayette, Somerset, and Bedford counties, and also the West Virginia counties of Monongalia, Preston, Garrett and the western part of Tucker County.

The board elected him first vice president.

As a director, Croner is to serve a 2-year term for the 6,000 member cooperative. Among his duties are representing his cooperative before such industry agencies as the Advertising and Promotion Agency — Order 36; the Great Lakes-Southern Milk Inc.; the National Milk Producers Federation; the Pennsylvania Co-op Education Council; the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations; and the Producers Equalization Agency Inc. (Croner is president of the PEA Inc. board of directors.)

A graduate of Penn State University with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural economics and rural sociology, Croner operates a 1,400-acre dairy farm where he milks more than 160 cows. He has been an active member of a dairy cooperative for 37 years.

Croner also is involved with the Dairy Herd Improvement Association, Agway Inc., Pennsylvania Potato Growers and previously was director for the Somerset County Farmers Association.

Others elected to MMI office include Herman Brubaker, of West Alexandria, Ohio, as president; George Bancroft Jr., of Centerville, second vice president; Dale Kauffman, of Shreve, Ohio, as secretary; and paul Ramsey, of Louisville, Ohio, as treasurer.

Funk Dedicates Lifetime To Conservation, Preservation, Ag Promotion

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Most 80-year-olds retire from everyday labor. But Amos Funk and his wife, Esta, are not the average 80-year-olds.

"Why, I work all the time," Esta exclaimed. Dubbed the "Midnight Manager" by her son, Esta tallies up the day's receipts from Funk's Farm Market and takes care of late business at the store.

Her husband Amos is well-known for his conservation and preservation efforts for which he has received 35 awards nationally, locally, and regionally.

The Funks live in their century farmhouse, which has been in the family since 1848. It borders the rambling Funk's Farm Market and its 22 greenhouses, located at South Duke Street, Millersville.

In 1975, Amos turned the market over to his son, Fred. Although the reponsibility no longer belongs to Amos, he still plays an active role in the management and keeps detailed records of planting through harvesting costs.

Fred said, "It's hard to replace Dad with all his knowledge. He's a hard worker and it's difficult to get someone else to fill his place."

When one considers that the Funks adapted a small chicken house into a roadside stand in 1963, which has expanded to include three farms, 22 greenhouses, a store with more than $2 million in sales last year, and with 150 employees during its peak season, it looks like success has come easy to Funk.

But Amos gives a more realistic evaluation of the business expansion: "It's been an uphill climb the whole way."

Over the years, the Funks have suffered big crop failures from hail and drought.

But in typical dry humor, Funk said, "After you live a certain amount of time, you get used to rolling with the punches."

The produce business, he said, especially in Lancaster County is extremely competitive. Despite the challenges, it is still possible to be successful, according to Amos.

"You should start out small," he said. "You'll go broke if you start out too big and with new equipment. In this business, you can start with 10 acres."

Even if you have the land and equipment, Amos cautioned, "Don't try the produce business unless you love vegetable growing because it's a lot of work."

"Today the challenges are greater in produce marketing. The costs are higher, but you can make it," Funk said. "I wouldn't go back to the good old days even with all the problems we face."

And while many lament the tough economical times of today, Amos said, "People don't know what a Depression is. There is nothing like it now."

He views the future with optimism by saying, "I don't think things (economy) will ever get that bad (as the Depression)."

Although Funk's father was a dairy farmer and had a milk route with a horse and wagon, Funk preferred working with poultry and vegetables. His first crop was asparagus and he planted raspberries, which he sold at an "itty bitty" Central Market stand managed by his mother who sold, chickens, eggs, and a few vegetables.

Funk's leadership skills surfaced early. While a junior in high school, he was elected as captain of the basketball team and when he went to Penn State, he was elected captain of the basketball team although he was only a freshman.

Funk only attended one year of college because at that time there were no student loans or scholarships available. He spent a summer in the Peace Corps in Africa, teaching farming practices.

In 1936, he married Esta. Even before they married, Esta got a glimpse of what life would be like as a farm wife when Amos was one hour late for their first date because he wanted to pick all the beans before a predicted frost.

"She's a very tolerant person and the reason we get along so well; otherwise I couldn't do as many things as I do," Funk said. After their marriage, Esta tended chickens, butchered and dressed them for marketing.

As early as 1938, Amos experimented with farm terraces and contour strips. Only a few other farms did so at that time.

Amos, who took the biblical admonition seriously to be a good steward of the land, became an ardent supporter of conservation although it took a while for neighboring farmers to become convinced of contour farming practices.

The couple purchased the family farm in 1950. Because Amos loved to watch things grow, he got rid of all but one cow and gradually planted more and more vegetables and fruit. At first, Funks sold their produce at farmers' markets. At one time, they went to 13 different markets. After the roadside stand became successful, they gradually eliminated farmers' markets except for Root's Country Market, Manheim, and Central Market, Lancaster.

In 1951, Funk became part of the Conservation District Board. In 1959, Funks purchased a Marticville farm and in 1969 he purchased a Pequea Township farm, which he had previously rented. Although the farms are not neighboring, one is 2½ miles and the other eight miles from the main farm, Funk said that it is more important to him that all three farms have access to a creek, which is important for irrigation. They use a traveler irrigation system, which they believe is the least labor intensive. They have three miles of underground irrigation pipe.

Although Amos and Esta Funk sold Funk's Farm Market to their son, right, the parents continue to put many hours into the business, which started out as a small roadside stand and last year had sales of more than $2 million.

On the 240 acres, crops are rotated. The 125-acres are farmed with sustainable agricultural practice. Amos said that they had a 50 percent increase in the sweet corn yield after the field had been planted with rye grass for two years.

"We couldn't afford to grow things we do now without the use of herbicides, but we can use less per acre. We try to find a balance between no fertilizer and too much of it," he said. "We find when we rotate corn, we don't have as many problems with root worm and other corn funguses."

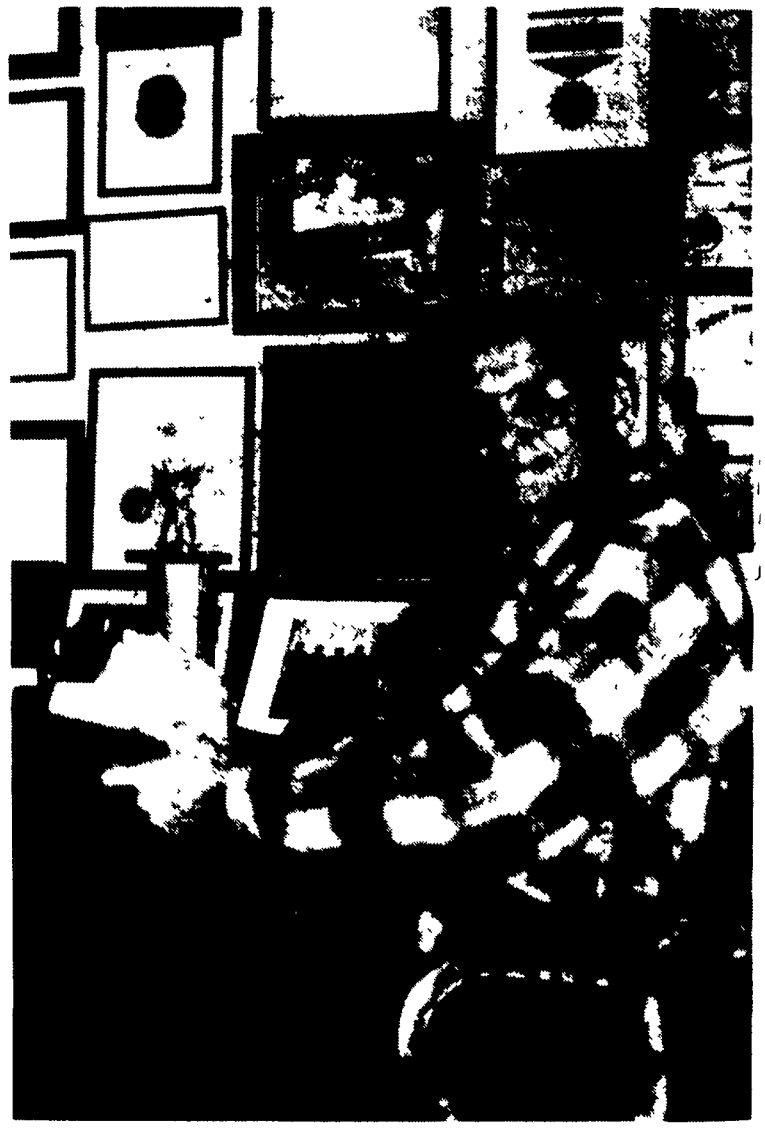
Currently Funks plant 20 acres of peaches and nectarines, seven acres of red and black raspberries, five acres of strawberries, and 1 to 10 acres of corn with 12 plantings.

Labor is very intensive. Amos likes to keep detailed records of costs, labor, and income. Sometimes figures show that certain crops are not profitable to raise, but that does not mean that the crop will be dropped from the program.

Amos said, "We had six crops that were not profitable. We changed our planting and managing practices and two of those are now our most profitable crops."

One of the crops to which adjustments was made is sugar peas. For 130 bushels of sugar peas, figures showed that it took 155 labor hours to plant, grow, and harvest. That was too labor intensive for the prices charged. Funks can purchase sugar peas from neighboring farms at lower prices than it costs to raise them. Now, Funks raise only ¼ -acre of sugar peas, which they plant early under plastic in order to get premium prices for the early crop.

When Funk first started farming, he hired high school youngsters to help in the fields, but today students are too busy with other things, Funk said. For the past 17 years, the market provides airline tickets for Puerto Rican laborers who come from March through October and are housed on the farm. The government has recognized Funks for their superior labor conditions.



A forerunner of agriculture conservation and preservation, Amos Fun has been awarded more than 35 plaques for his work locally and nationally.

During the Funk's years in business, they have noticed a difference in consumers.

"Customer loyalty is not as strong as it used to be. You must work week by week to get customers to return. You must give people a good product that is a bit different than supermarkets," Amos said.

Some of the different products that the Funks have offered to customers are cherry pudding with milk, stuffed sweet peppers, spiced bell peppers, watermelon rind, corn relish, chow chow, and homebaked items.

Funks are always on the lookout for innovative marketing ideas. They advertize corn roasts, craft fairs, pumpkinland, open houses, mushroom week, plant auctions, and spring garden weekends. Some of these promotions are not cost effective and others are extremely profitable. For example, Funks sell approximately 100 pounds of fresh mushrooms weekly, but during their mushroom promotion, they sold 1,000 pounds. Pumpkinland increased pumpkin sales 61 percent in one year.

Homemade soups and fresh fruit salads have proven to be popular. Funks make 16 varieties of soup.

Attractive displays are a prime requirement for the food area that has 8,000 square feet and for the 12,000 square feet of garden items.

Esta and Amos Funk continue to live on the farm that has been in the family since 1848.

Ag Forum Focuses On Issues

DOVER, Del. — Agriculturists are invited to spend a day in March learning about important issues facing the agricultural community, exchanging ideas with each other, and meeting with elected officials to discover what they will be doing in the next year to help the agricultural industry.

Ag Forum '92: Opportunities and Challenges will be offered Wednesday, March 4, in the West Building at Delaware Technical and Community College in Georgetown.

Commercial and educational exhibits will open at 10 a.m. and remain open throughout the day.

The educational portion of the program begins at 1 p.m. with the keynote address by Dr. John Nye, dean of the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences.

At 1:30 p.m., participants can choose between two concurrent sessions — "Trucking Laws Affecting Producers and Suppliers" and "Aquaculture in Delaware: Regulations and Opportunities."

The transportation program will address different aspects of trucking safety and regulation.

Jerome A. Emerson, coordinator of the division of motor vehicles' commercial driver licenses program, will discuss state laws affecting the agricultural industry. John Gaves of the federal highway administration of motor carriers will review how federal regulations impact agricultural transportation needs.

Master Corporal Francis Letkowski of the Delaware State Police motor carrier safety assistance program will discuss what that program has to offer, and William Dellinger of the Delaware Motor Transport Association will address fleet safety issues.

Lee Derrickson, an instructor with the Delaware Tech Truck Driver Training Program, will discuss what that program can offer agricultural producers and their employees.

Participants in the aquaculture session will learn about state regulatory concerns and financial opportunities, research and extension outreach efforts, and how traditional agricultural industries are expanding into aquaculture.

Dr. Bernard Petrosky, a research assistant professor with the department of agriculture and natural resources at Delaware State College, will provide an update on research projects. Joseph Farrell, marine resource management specialist with the Sea Grant College Marine Advisory Service, will highlight progress in the University of Delaware's Extension programs.

Ferdinand Wirth, marketing supervisor with the Delaware Department of Agriculture, and William "Skip" Bason, president of the Delaware Aquaculture Association, will talk about pending environmental regulation that will affect the fledgling industry and financial opportunities for those interested in launching aquaculture operations.

Larry Horseman, manager of research operations for the aquaculture group at Townsends Inc. in Millsboro, will discuss his poultry company's experiment with aquaculture and the pros and cons of expanding into this new commercial venture.

The next concurrent seminars, "Implications of Environmental Regulation for Agricultural Producers" and "Agricultural Alternatives," will begin at 3:30 p.m.

Wellhead protection, pesticide regulation, environmental assessments, and underground storage tanks will be the four topics featured in the environmental session. Representatives from the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control and Larry Towle, agricultural specialist with the Department of Agriculture's Pesticide Compliance Section, will be presenters.

The other session will feature an exploration of what the alternative and sustainable agriculture movements mean to producers. Ferdinand Wirth and Dr. Edward . Jones, a professor in the depar.-ment of agriculture and natur l resources at Delaware State College, will lead the discussions.

In addition, three recipients of the department of agriculture's alternative agriculture/marketing research grants will discuss problems and successes they had getting their projects off the ground.

Ted Trevorrow of Fiber Core Corporation will talk about kenaf production. Joy Evans, a farmer from Millville, will offer advice on growing Shiitake mushrooms. And Tom Ryan of Ryan's Berry Farm in Frankford will discuss the expansion of his pick-your-own operation with the addition of value-added products.

A buffet dinner will be served at 5:15 p.m. following the educational sessions. Program participants then will have a last chance to visit the exhibit area before an open forum with elected officials begins at 7 p.m. in the college theater.

The forum will feature a panel of elected officials giving brief remarks about legislation and policies related to the seminar topics and a question and answer period for the audience.

A $10 registration fee includes the buffet dinner, afternoon beverages, and program materials. The fee will be charged whether participants attend all or part of the day-long program.

To obtain a registration form, contact Debbie Davis, Office of Continuing Education, Delaware Tech, at (302) 856-5400, ext. 227. Or register by phone using a VISA or MasterCard.

For program information, contact the Department of Agriculture Information Office at (302) 739-4811 or (800) 282-8685 (Delaware only).

"Spring bedding sales are unbelievable," Funk said.

The greenhouse employees are planting now for spring sales. Funks sell 80 to 90 percent of the plants retail. During the holidays, they sold 20,000 poinsettias.

One of the most surprising things he learned in merchandizing is that people object when the prices of food rise, but not to the rising prices on ornamental plants and flowers.

Every March 20, the Funks plant 10 acres of sweet corn under plastic so that it is available by June 17.

"This past year the average price of sweet corn was $4 in the state, but we can't get that around here," Funk said. "Too many other growers make tough competition."

To stay on the cutting edge, the Funks find that it is necessary to constantly change their program to meet the competition. They found they could make more money raising broccoli than tobacco. They grow aspargus, lima beans, brussel sprouts, cantaloupes, celery, sweet corn, gourds, pumpkins, peaches, and nectarines. For 20 years had black raspberries, rhubarb, strawberries, sugar peas, tomatoes, watermelon.

Amos said that he became aware in the 1960s that farmland was being lost to development. In 1978, he went to the environmental board and requested that they do something about loss of farmland.

He said that the Conestoga Valley Association was formed when a former teacher remarked that he wished we could involve urban people in conservation.

Although Funk is highly praised for his conservation and preservation efforts, not everyone has been grateful for Funk's efforts to preserve farmland.

He said, I've spent heated sessions in the courthouse. Some do not want ag preservation. It takes careful, slow, aggressive pursuit of disseminating knowledge to help people understand."

Amos is a charter member of the Lancaster County Conservancy and member of the Lancaster County Preservation board.

Amos had opportunity to be on the National Board of Vegetable Growers and the National Board of Conservation, but did not do it because it required too much time away from home.

Of the 35 awards Amos received, he is most pleased with the Teddy Roosevelt Award given by President Bush in 1990. Other cherished awards include the 1984 National Association of Conservation Districts Special Service Award for his more than 30 years of Conservation efforts at the local, state, and national level. In addition, he was awarded the 1985 Pennsylvania Farmer's Award for outstanding achievement and in 1966, the Pennsylvania Master Farmer Award.

Recently, Amos received the George Delp Award for being the most influential in promoting agribusiness within the county.

Although never a member of the Rotary Club or other service club, Amos was honored by the Rotary with a Harris Fellow Award in appreciation of tangible and significant assistance given for the furtherance of better understanding and friendly relationships between people of the world.

He is active in church work. Although he is no longer able to play all the sports he formerly did, he remains an avid Nittany Lions fan and has season tickets for the Philadelphia Eagles. The Funks have six children and 11 grandchildren.

Amos continues to set goals. He would like to get more farmland preserved and to get a handle on nutrient management without polluting underground water that would allow farmers to make money.

"Of course," Amos added, "I never get over trying to grow better watermelon and cantaloupe."

Meat Board Will Gather

CHICAGO, IL — Meat Board directors representing state beef, pork and lamb councils along with packers, purveyors and directors from more than 30 meat industry organizations will gather in Chicago, March 22-23, for the National Live Stock and Meat Board annual meeting.

The Meat Board is a coalition of all segments of the meat and livestock industry — from livestock producers to food retailers — that has been working through industry checkoffs to build demand for meat since 1922.

On the agenda for the meeting: chairman-elect Kendall S. Rice of Wilsonville, Neb., will deliver the annual meeting charge; directors will begin the process of program development for fiscal 1993 and elect new officers for the Meat Board and its operating divisions, the Beef Industry Council, Pork Industry Group and Lamb Committee; and retiring directors will be honored during a special luncheon.

For information, contact the Meat Board, 444 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, IL 60611, or call 312-467-5520.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

NEW From Zook

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

RINGING ROCKS FARM – THE FARMER'S FRIEND

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built
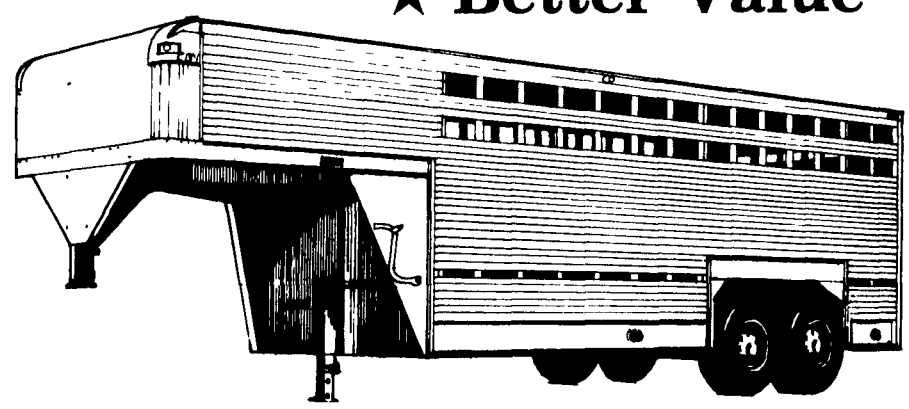
★ Better Value



The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limitung the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications
- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

Seed Companies Provide Price Breaks

PRESCOTT, Wis. — There's a quick and easy way for farmers to save from $3 to $4 per acre in seed corn costs this spring, but many may choose to pass up the opportunity.

"A lot of farmers believe that small and/or round-shaped seed combinations don't have the yield potential of large and/or flat seed," said University of Wisconsin agronomist Paul Carter. "Several studies have found, however, few significant differences in either emergence or grain yield."

Farmers willing to disregard those biases can achieve significant per-acre savings in seed cost, said Jim Vannet, product information services director for Jacques Seed Company. "With less demand for the smaller seeds, many seed companies offer price reductions as an incentive for farmers to purchase the seed. In addition to the lower cost, smaller seeds are frequently sold in 90,000 kernel-count bags instead of the traditional 80,000 kernel-count bags, so one bag of seed can plant more acres."

Producer Buster Manning of Pantego, North Carolina, grows 1,000 acres of corn each year and plants only small plateless seed. Manning figures he saves over $3 per acre on his seed corn costs with no reduction in field performance.

The keys to planting smaller seed sizes, he said, are making a few adjustments in the planter and driving at slower speeds.

"It's not complicated at all," said Manning. "You just go by the owner's manual for your initial setup and then make small adjustments, if necessary. The price break on the seed was what got us to try it, but now we'd plant it even if it cost the same as medium rounds because small seed fits our operation."

Steve Schultz, Whittemore, Iowa, plants with an air planter and said he only had problems once planting smaller seed.

"It was the year after one of the drouth years when the small seed was really small," he said, "and I blew out some seed. But I don't know how much of that was the seed's fault and how much of it was the planter's. That's the year I learned how important planter preparation and maintenance was."

"Our research indicates only a very slight germination advantage for flat over round seed sizes," said Vannet. "In our research plots, no significant differences in emergence, early growth or yield performance were found between small and large kernels, flats or rounds. However, the research did show significant differences in yield performance between planting dates, with highest yield levels being obtained by earliest planting dates in most years.

"Our hybrid corn seed lots, regardless of size, all have to meet the same quality assurance standards and specifications."

Agronomist Carter has also conducted studies to determine any connection between tillage systems, seed size, and hybrid performance.

He planted samples of two widely grown corn hybrids in randomized, replicated plots at two locations. Half the plots were fall moldboard-plowed and disked in the spring. The other half were no-till. The seeds were divided into four groups based on size and shape: small rounds, small flats, large rounds and large flats. The test was conducted over two years and hybrids were evaluated on the basis of emergence, early growth, harvest moisture and yield.

The no-till system tended to result in lower-percent emergence, delayed early growth, higher harvest moisture and somewhat lower yields. But there were no significant differences in any of those measurements related to seed size.

"We recommend that corn producers focus on genetic performance potential and seed price and not a specific seed size or shape combination when selecting hybrids," Carter said.

Today's hybrid corn technology has proven that both small and large kernels are equal in germination rates and plantability, said Vannet. "What is critical, however, for good plantability is proper plate selection for plate-type planters and proper disk selection, air pressure or vacuum, and brush-settings for plateless planters.

"Before dropping the planter in the ground this spring, take time to manage," said Vannet. Be sure to:

- Select hybrids best-suited to your farm and management practices.
- Get the best value by choosing the most economical kernel size.
- When planting smaller seed, be sure that plates, bottom and mechanisms are in good repair.
- Plant a bit shallower than normal. This is key to even emergence and high stand establishment, especially under cooler and wetter planting conditions. If small seed is planted too deep, the endosperm reserves will be depleted prior to the seedling breaking the soil surface.
- Take time to inspect your planter for worn or broken parts, select proper sprocket settings and have good plates of the recommended number.
- Test-plant to determine the proper seed drop.
- At planting time, use graphite in the seed box, drive at recommended speeds, and change plates as required.

To receive a free booklet describing smaller seed size management techniques, write or call Jacques Seed Company, 720 St. Croix Street, Prescott, WI 54021, (800) 321-2867. Ask for the pamphlet entitled "The Case For Planting Smaller Seed."

Ketchen Receives President's Award

CORNELL, N.Y. — Outstanding contributions to the beef cattle industry in New York were prime reasons for Debbie Ketchen's selection for the award by New York Beef Cattlemen's Association (NYBCA) President Fred Zeiner of Morris.

Ketchen has managed the Cornell Beef Cattle Teaching and Research Center in Dryden since 1980, being responsible for the care and feeding of all beef cattle at the T&R Center. Included in a typical year are more than 100 bulls in the New York Bull Test, 100 beef cows, 20 to 30 replacement heifers, and 4 to 5 herd bulls, as well as more than 300 growing and finishing steers and heifers.

She has been largely responsible for the development of a high performance beef herd at Cornell with weaning weight averages nearing 600 pounds. Research results from the T&R Center are widely respected and used across the United States.

The bull test becomes her first priority from the time they arrive until they leave after the sale. In addition to feeding and care during the test and collection of the data, she oversees the preparation of the bulls for the sale.

She spends hours communicating with consignors and potential buyers, as well as hosting visitors during the test.

She was appointed coordinator of the bull test by Cornell in 1991.

Bradford Dairy Day Held

RONALD CLARK
Bradford Co. Correspondent

TROY — More than 225 farmers, exhibitors and friends took in the exhibits and listened to the pertinent subjects presented at the 1992 Bradford County Day held at the Troy Middle School on Monday. Special enjoyment resulted from the distribution of ice cream milk punch by Pennsylvania's Dairy Princess, Robin Wilbur, and her attendants.

The event was organized and presented by the Bradford County Cooperative Extension, with Extension Director Jake Guffy and his staff being responsible for much of the planning. Further assistance was given by area Farm Supply Dealers, Marketing Firms, Farm Organizations and Businesses. Bob Thompson, Eastern Milk Producers representative, acted as EmCee and kept the program moving.

Beginning at 9:30 a.m., the attendants had the opportunity to visit with the exhibitors and to learn new developments being made available through product development and improvements. The formal program began with the ever-popular awarding of door prizes. This activity was repeated two more times during the course of the day.

The first speaker, Lawrence Hutchinson, DVM, and Penn State Extension Veterinarian, presented a talk describing foot care and dry cow care. Pointing out that the problem is exacerbated by the intensive housing in vogue today, along with the absence of outdoor exercise, he told how losses result from lameness, leading to decreased milk yield, loss of body weight, lower feed efficiency, lower heat detection and lower settling, as well as the costs of treatment. Cows and heifers most susceptible are those in which hoof growth and hoof wear are not equal for a variety of reasons. Daily exercise, pasture or exercise in dirt lots while dry, foot baths, and gradual adaptation of stock to hard surfaces do much to help overcome excessive hoof growth and resulting ailments, while excessive wear can be lessened by reduced abrasiveness in new concrete, grooving old concrete, and avoiding sudden changes in rations. Moisture control is also highly important to inhibit infections. Selection of sires with good foot structure is also desirable.

In dry cow management, vaccinate at least three weeks before calving. Dry stock should be brought to ideal physical condition, dedicated maternity stalls used, adequate selenium provided in feed, in bolus or by injection, prevention of excessive calcium loss at calving time, and continual cleanliness are important factors.

County Agent Guffy cited the wide recycling of milk pricing, and enjoined dairymen to plan for this as a continuing phenomenon, and to adjust budgeting so that lean years can be survived. He stressed that dairy people must take over their own pricing and marketing strategies, and make them work. Bob Thompson, marketing specialist, echoed Mr. Guffy's concerns, and warned of the pitfalls of the GATT conversations, including the danger of accusations from other countries of U.S. excessive supports. He expects that the Minnesota/Wisconsin pricing systems will eventually have less effect as dairy farmers develop their own strategies, but that this will not be immediate.

PFA Accountant Steve Lyons expects that taxes will increase, record keeping will be of ever-increasing importance, and that the effects of the 1991 drought have not been fully felt as yet. Finally, Lynn Chubbock, Northeastern Farm Credit, emphasized the need for continuing improvement of business practices and management, more educational seminars, the importance of setting goals for the dairy industry for five to ten year periods. He noted that competition for capital will be greatly increased both in the near and more distant times, because of the emergence of capitalistic growth in Eastern Europe and other overseas countries Lastly, he cited the need for maintaining strength of family farms.

Following a lunch break and further opportunity to circulate among exhibitors, Dr. Hutchinson resumed the program with his disclosure of the Dairy Quality Assurance Program. The need for this program is greatly increased by consumers who are concerned about residual antibiotics in milk. With the increased accuracy of tests for such residuals, and the high costs associated with shipping contaminated milk, publicity of such additives is becoming prevalent. Dr. Hutchinson listed a ten-point program, now available in Pennsylvania, which will emphasize good practice and close cooperation with veterinarians to assure of proper use of antibiotics, both over-the-counter and by prescription. The program is in printed form, and may be obtained from milk handlers; simply ask for the 10-point plan booklet.

PA Dairy Princess Robin Wilbur gave a brief description of her recent activities, pointing out that she will attend the ADA meeting. She reminded the audience to use REAL dairy products.

These Bradford County FFA students had a display of their activities at Dairy Day.

The final speaker of the day was Bob Ormsby, of DHIA. He described the Heifer Management Program introduced by DHIA on January 1, 1991. Great emphasis is being placed on having heifers calve at 24 months of age, with weights of upwards of 1,300 pounds. Currently, 67 percent of first-calf heifers exceed these criteria. Loss of income for each month over 24 results in net losses of about $20.00 per month, so the importance of timely calving cannot be overlooked. Ormsby also gave the audience insight of the wealth of information now available through DHIA, as well as showing how farmers can obtain other information tailored to their precise needs. Since much data are already entered into DHIA computers for present members, programs can be tailored to fit the needs of almost any dairy operator.

The Dairy Day Program concluded at 3:30, with many exhibitors remaining to answer questions relating to individual farmers.

Little Named RCMA General Manager

BATAVIA, N.Y. — Arthur Little, who has worked with the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA) since its inception in the 1970s, has taken over the day-to-day operation of the organization that works to increase dairy farmers' income.

Little, an agricultural economist who has 40 years of experience in the dairy industry and has worked for several dairy cooperatives in the Northeast, was executive director of RCMA when it was organized in the mid-1970s.

He has continued to work with the organization since that time, most recently as administrative assistant.

In his new position, Little will direct the day-to-day operation of RCMA in its efforts to raise the price of milk for dairy farmers.

During its many years of operation, RCMA has generated approximately $100 million in additional income for dairy farmers in the form of premiums paid for milk production. The organization has more than 20,000 members throughout the 11 states of the Northeast.

The appointment of Little as general manager is part of a restructuring of the organization, which included a move of the cooperative's office from Batavia to Liverpool, N.Y. RCMA's new address is 600 Oswego St., Liverpool, N.Y. 13088.

It's toll-free telephone number remains 800-634-3723. It's regular telephone number is 315-453-7715. The fax number is 315-453-0825.

Carmen L. Ross of Secaucus, N.J., remains executive director of RCMA, but serves on a consulting basis. Ross served as RCMA executive director for 2½ years, during which time RCMA was responsible for establishing a minimum New York State Class I milk price under the Rogers-Allen Act.

"This achievement is particularly significant because this was the first time since its enactment in the 1930s that the Rogers-Allen Act has been used to establish a statewide price," said RCMA President Lewis Gardner.

"New York dairy farmers received about $16 million during the four months the price was in effect. In addition, New England used this price as the basis to set minimum milk prices in their respective states."

Both Gardner and Little emphasized the importance for dairy farmers to continue to work together if they are to improve their economic situation.

"Despite the extremely hard times that dairy farmers have experienced in recent years, I'm as convinced now as I was 20 years ago that RCMA is the only way that dairy farmers can improve their economic position," Little said.

"If dairy farmers work together by supporting a unified program, they will get results," he said. "This has been proven in the past 20 years when dairy farmers throughout the Northeast have benefited by at least $100 million as a result of RCMA actions. We must move ahead and capitalize on the fact that there is strength through unity."

Berks County 4-H Horse Club Members Honored

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Members of the three Berks County 4-H horse clubs were honored recently at the 14th annual banquet in the 4-H Community Center here.

Brett Shorley, a senior at Boyertown Area High School and member of the Top Notch 4-H Club, won the Highpoint Blueform senior member award and the outstanding senior member award.

"It was a banner year for Brett," said Debbie Dietrich, 4-H extension agent, noting that the young man also was selected to be a delegate to the national 4-H Congress, held in December in Chicago.

Katie Ramsay, also of Boyertown, was awarded the Highpoint Blueform junior member award. She also received the outstanding junior member award.

Club members in the Blue Mountain Equestrians, the Oley Saddle-ites and Top Notch competed throughout the years in hippology (horse science), horse judging, the horse bowl, and public speaking.

Five Berks Countians participated in the state 4-H Horse Show. They are Amanda Moletress, Christopher Gerow, Angie Zeller, Brett Shorley, and Mark Runge.

The following other outstanding members were given awards: April Wood, Boyertown R.D.4, reserve junior member; J.T. Ramsay, intermediate member; and Ronja Henderson, reserve.

Mark Runge, Douglassville, reserve outstanding senior member.

Spirit of 4-H — Paula Galley, Douglassville; Nicole Smith, Boyertown R.D. 4, and Walter Wood, Boyertown R.D. 4.

Communications — Angie Zeller, Bernville R.D. 1; Susan Braun, Hamburg R.D. 3; and Beth Britton, Boyertown R.D. 4.

Showmanship — Caitlin Houck, Boyertown R.D. 6 and Tracy Kramer, Hamburg R.D. 3.

Horse knowledge — Amanda Mariano, Boyertown R.D. 4 and Melissa Arthur, Oley R.D. 1.

All 4-H participants completed applications and wrote a story about their 4-H activities, Dietrich said, but the above winners did the best job on them.

Defeat Of Communism Not Victory For Democracy, Says Expert

ORLANDO, Fla. — The collapse of communism in the former Soviet Union and central Europe is not the same as a victory for democracy, former presidential national security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski said here recently. Winning the victory for democracy, he said, will require "a long-haul effort not unlike the cold war itself."

Addressing the conclusion of the 63rd annual meeting of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, Brzezinski said it is not certain that the outcome of efforts to build market-based democracies will be fully known before the end of this decade.

"The challenge — to make certain that the defeat of Communism becomes a victory for democracy — will be with us as long as we live," he said.

While it is important to offer short term food assistance to the people of the former Soviet republics, he said, "more critical than immediate relief will be the longer-range reconstruction of these countries from bottom to top."

Brzezinski referred to the meeting of more than 40 western and industrial countries in Washington this week to coordinate relief efforts as "a conference of well-meaning governments" but added that "a competition of sending food packages will help some, but will not address the long-range problem."

He said the United States and other western countries must learn to work with "new power centers" and not just "the bureaucrats in Moscow who already are losing control" over the changes in their former republics.

Brzezinski believes the best opportunities for successful reform are in Poland and Hungary but observes that many of the conditions in those countries — existing private trade, Poland's rural cooperative tradition and Solidarity union, Hungary's favorable climate for foreign investment — do not exist in the former Soviet Union. He said that attempts to reform a communist economic system on a piecemeal basis do not work, as former President Gorbachev's efforts in the USSR demonstrated, because the economy is a "seamless web."

He said there has been no experience in history to show examples of successful conversion of a communist state to a democratic one, but that Poland's experience with radical reform might some day provide at least a partial example. However, "we do not yet know whether this will work or not," he said.

"We need to develop new concepts, new solutions," he said. "We need to focus more on creating a new safety net for the millions who will be unemployed and on building a new infrastructure — transportation, communications, banking and a new entrepreneurial spirit."

Beef Expo Highlights Cattle Herd Improvement

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — On March 26-29, the Penn State Ag Arena will be the site of the third annual Pennsylvania Beef Exposition.

The events will begin on Thursday, with the educational symposium entitled "Improving Health in the Cattle Herd."

On Friday, the annual MAEC Bull Sale will feature 75 performance tested bulls from five purebred beef cattle breeds. On Friday evening, the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association will host their annual awards banquet. The sale will provide buyers with more than 200 purebred females from the Angus, Polled Hereford, Simmental, and Charolais breeds to choose from.

The junior program begins after the last female sale on Saturday with a heifer show. The Sunday show will be the junior steer competition. A large commercial exhibit area will present the latest equipment and services for beef cattle producers.

The Pennsylvania Beef Exposition is co-sponsored by Penn State University. For further information, Call 814-865-5857.

Swine Light Requirements Vary

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Just how the topic of light fits into hog production isn't well understood. Most agree it can affect performance. But to date we lack standards on how many hours of light are needed or what intensity is best.

Kenneth B. Kephart, extension swine specialist, Department of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State took a look at the research conducted over the past 30 years. Here's what he found.

Growing-Finishing Hogs

Given the choice, pigs will spend about 18 hours a day in the dark, Canadian studies show. Other studies seem to parallel this finding. When pigs are raised in complete darkness, weight gains are depressed. And conversely, providing more than 6 to 8 hours of light for growing-finishing hogs is of no value.

For many producers the 8-hour requirement is easy, since most hogs are grown in modified open front facilities. But for those in totally enclosed buildings, leaving the lights on during working hours makes good sense.

Developing Gilts

One thing is pretty certain regarding gilts — those in confinement won't cycle as early as those outside. Lots of studies show that but we don't know why. Light and day-length may be part of it, but other factors seem to be involved as well.

If you're committed to confinement, then what? Light isn't the whole answer but keeping gilts out of the dark will help. For example, experiments at Iowa State and in Canada show that gilts in total darkness will be slower coming into heat than those getting artificial light or natural light through windows.

How many hours of light are needed? Experiments point to 6 to 8 hours as an absolute minimum. And studies at Purdue make a 15-hour schedule look pretty good — especially during late summer and fall when day-length is waning. From August to January, gilts getting 15 hours of light (8 hrs natural, 7 hrs artificial) cycled an average of 20 days earlier than those on natural light alone.

Developing Boars

Light does influence the time it takes for boars to reach sexual maturity. But the details are a little different from what we described for the gilts. With the male, it doesn't seem to matter whether days are getting longer or shorter. If the day-length is short, supplemental light will accelerate mating behavior. Studies at Purdue show that 15 hours of light (8 hrs natural, 7 hrs artificial) will increase libido scores in young boars.

Unfortunately these boar experiments are a little misleading. For one thing, only crossbred boars were used. Many commercial producers use purebred boars. Secondly, libido scores were taken from about 5 to 8 months of age — too early to be using boars in the first place.

Lactating Sows

Only a few studies have measured the effect of light on lactation. But the results are striking. For example at Kansas State, sows getting supplemental light weaned litters that were 6 pounds heavier at 25 days than those exposed to lights only at feeding time. And by 5 days post weaning, 83 percent of the sows in the lighted group were in heat compared to only 68 percent in the dark group.

In a University of Georgia experiment, sows receiving 16 hours of light weaned .9 more pigs and litters that were 10 pounds heavier at three weeks compared to sows on eight hours of light. Survival of all pigs weighing 3 pounds and under at birth was improved.

How Does It Work?

We haven't answered that one yet. Study after study shows that light has no influence on the hormones crucial to reproduction. About all we know is that the more time a pig spends in the dark, the heavier his pineal gland becomes. This is a tiny structure in the brain that starts out as a third eye in the fetus, but ends up as a pineal with nerve connections to the functional eyes.

Recommendations

We don't have all the answers, but here are some suggestions.

How Long?

1. Growing-finishing hogs. If you have hogs in dark confinement buildings, lights should be on a minimum of 8 hours a day.

2. Developing gilts. From about August until January, gilts cycle earlier with 16 hours of light. If you have ample light coming through windows or curtains the rest of the year, that will be adequate. If gilts are housed with the other market hogs, then the finishing floor should have 16 hours of light during late summer and fall.

3. Developing boars. Sixteen hours seem to provide the best response for very young boars. But as long as boars are getting 8 hours throughout the growth period, that will probably be adequate for practical situations.

4. Lactating sows. Provide 16 hours.

How Bright?

Light coming from fixtures covered with dust and fly specs will not be enough. Light coming through fan blades will not be enough. Light coming from heat lamps in the farrowing house will not be enough. Most experiments indicate 300 to 400 lux (27-37 foot candles) is optimum. To be sure what you have, measure the intensity about one foot off the floor. Otherwise, a rough rule of thumb is that three clean 100-watt incandescent bulbs will provide about 300 lux over a 75 square foot area. Two 40-watt fluorescent bulbs will do about the same.

And keep in mind that lights in the farrowing house should be installed over or behind the sows head so the front of the crate doesn't create an obstruction.

What kind?

It doesn't matter. Incandescent or fluorescent will work equally as well. But remember, fluorescent lights provide more light, watt for watt, than incandescent.

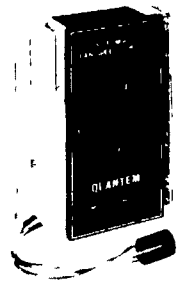
QUANTEM SERIES 50



Temperature Modulating Fan Speed Control
Designed to be splash and dust resistant in accordance with NEC Article 547
The "Vari-Speed" VENTILATING Control is a SOLID STATE, single phase variable motor speed controller, designed to automatically ventilate industrial, commercial and agricultural facilities. The Series 50 provides ventilation control in proportion to the error sensed between the controller set point and actual space temperature as monitored by the controller's sensor. As temperature changes, voltage to the fan motor is changed proportionately.

HOOBER PEOPLE MAKE AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES PRODUCE FOR YOU!

By servicing over 200 Axial-Flow Combines, The people at C.B. Hoober & Sons, Inc. know how to make these Combines reach their maximum productivity.

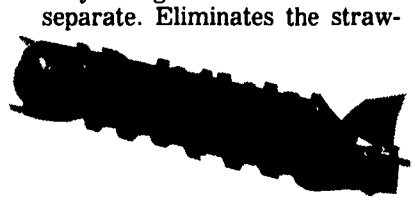
Talk to an owner of a combine serviced by HOOBER'S COMBINE PROFESSIONALS. They'll tell you how they produce.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO OWN AN AXIAL-FLOW FROM HOOBER?

The Reason Axial-Flow Combines Are More Productive - THE ROTOR!

The Single Rotor design is SIMPLE!

Only a single rotor to thresh and separate. Eliminates the straw-



walker assemblies common to conventional combines. Less moving parts means less maintenance, less downtime.

The Single Rotor Design is HIGHER QUALITY GRAIN

damage and holds elevator dockage to a minimum.

The Single Rotor Design is MORE PRODUCTIVITY!

When your crops are ripe and ready to harvest, Axial-Flow allows you to move faster than with a conventional combine. The rotor's large throat means no bottle-necks up front. You'll be able to harvest at top speed for maximum productivity, even on side-hills.

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

- TWO YEARS WARRANTY
- C.S.A. CERTIFIED LR-61960

MOST EFFICIENT FAN MOTOR CONTROL

THE VARIFAN+ TCS 1 ALLOWS THE MOST ACCURATE POSSIBLE CONTROL OF LIVESTOCK ENVIRONMENT

THE VARIFAN+ TCS-1 ALLOWS THE USER TO BOTH CONTROL AND MEASURE THE TEMPERATURE INSIDE THE ANIMAL HOUSE. FULL ATTENTION HAS BEEN PAID IN MAKING THE DEVICE USER-FRIENDLY

THE VARIFAN+ TCS 1 IS EQUIPPED WITH A VISUAL DISPLAY SIMPLE SELECTOR KNOB AND SETTING KNOB. IN DAILY USE THERE SHOULD BE NO NEED TO REFER TO A COMPLICATED MANUAL.

FAN CONTROL
THE VARIFAN+ TCS 1 ALLOWS CONTROL OF FANS WITH A 3-WIRE CONNECTION AS WELL AS A 2 WIRE STANDARD CONNECTION, BUT MORE EFFECTIVE CONTROL IS ACHIEVED IF THE FAN IS CONNECTED WITH 3-WIRE. HERE ONLY THE MAIN WINDING IS CONTINUOUSLY CONNECTED TO THE ENTIRE AC LINE VOLTAGE. THIS MAINTAINS THE PHASE SHIFT BETWEEN THE WINDING WHICH REDUCES MOTOR HEAT AND PROVIDES SIGNIFICANT ELECTRICAL ENERGY COST SAVING

BUILT-IN FUNCTIONS
BESIDES THE FREELY ADJUSTABLE VALUES
THE VARIFAN+ TCS 1 HAS THE FOLLOWING BUILT IN FUNCTIONS SET BY DIPSWITCH
1 DISPLAYS TEMPERATURE IN °C OR °F
2 LOCKS OR UNLOCKS THE ADJUSTABLE VALUES

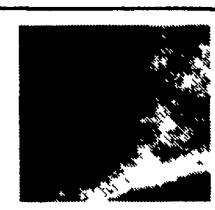
WARNING! DETERIORATING CONCRETE FROM CORN JUICE!

WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS
Check your silo now for rotten staves. If you have been using your silo for 10 to 15 years for either corn silage or haylabe, it is time to SHOTCRETE.

RESURFACES INTERIORS:
- Coats the silo's interior
- Protects feed in storage
- Durable, tough, acid-resistant
- Increases useful life
- Economical

Before The silo's interior with plaster damaged and stave exposed



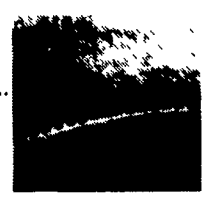
After The surface is reconditioned, and a new, thick tough surface will protect stored feed

REPAIRS HOLES:
- Repairs even large holes
- Up to twice the strength of the original stave
- Rapid application
- Durable surface

Before A hole is worn completely through the silo wall

After With the hole repaired by ShotCrete and a new surface applied, the silo is ready for years of use

EXTENDS USEFUL LIFE:
- Support for old foundations
- Special repairs can be made... quickly and economically
- Little or no forming needed
- Stronger than the original



Before The bottom part of the staves are completely worn away

After The ShotCrete System repairs and replaces the missing structure

Shotcrete is also good for repairing stone walls

When you think your silo is beyond repair THINK OF SHOTCRETE!

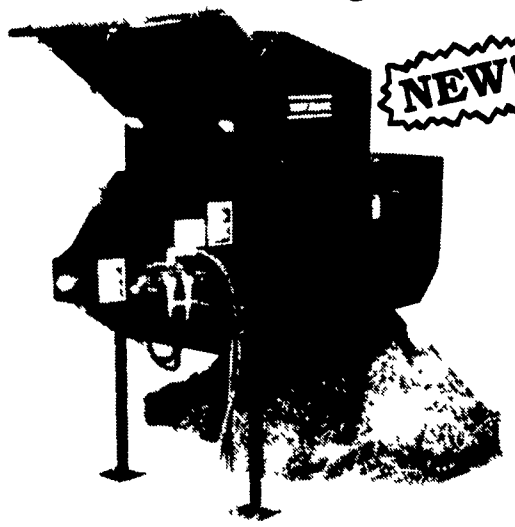
VAN DALE® Dependability through Quality

S600 BALE PROCESSOR

Engineered & Designed By Van Dale...



NEW!

ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND ON THE MARKET TODAY!

BALED HAY CAN NOW BE MIXED
Baled hay can now be processed into a condition suitable for mixing with other TMR materials in all types of mixers: auger, tumble or reel type. With the Van Dale Bale Processor, you can incorporate baled hay into your ration with less stress on your mixer and be assured of getting the maximum benefit from both your hay and your mixer.

ELIMINATES THE DUST AND MESS
The Van Dale Bale Processor uses a hydraulic ram to push the hay bale through a set of hardened steel knives slicing it into a more mixable 4" to 6" average length material without pulverizing the fragile materials in the bale.

FEED THE LEAVES-NOT JUST STEMS
Don't let your valuable feed nutrients disappear in a cloud of dust. Unlike a conventional bale chopper or tub grinder with high speed cutting knives which turn leaves into powder, the Van Dale Bale Processor retains up to 97% of the valuable leaf portion of your hay to be incorporated into the TMR ration.

- ★ ALL NEW... Process Hay For Use In T.M.R.
- ★ No Dust ★ Only One Moving Part
- ★ Use With All Mixers Including Tumblers & Web Chain Units
- ★ Quiet ★ No Loss Of Hay Leaves
- ★ Can Be Used On 3-Pt. Hookup Off Tractor Hydraulics Or...
- ★ Can Be Stationary Mounted With Hydraulic Power Pack

Super All Traction 23°

R-1

- New top-of-line bias-ply tractor rear, featuring our long bar/long bar design for tread stability, and heavy bar bracing to extend tread life.
- Long wearing and smooth riding, due to the more uniform, flatter contour of the long bar/long bar design.
- Proven 23° bar angle for traction and open center for self-cleaning.
- Bead and rim protector shields the rim to help keep stubble and soil from getting between the bead and rim flange.

Atlantic Breeders District Meetings Held

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—At various district meetings held this week, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative reported a favorable business year for 1991 despite difficult economic conditions for dairymen. Atlantic's insemination services performed by Technicians and semen sales to direct breeders increased over 1990.

Directors for each meeting reported that a strong sire lineup provides a high level of genetics for efficient production in the future. Atlantic is working with Eastern and Louisiana Boards to conduct a long-range planning study to determine members' needs and the partnership structure of Federated Genetics.

A slide-tape presentation featured the positive views of dairy farm life as expressed by Atlantic members throughout the cooperative's service area. Harry Roth, executive director, reported that the strength of the sire line-up and the need for members to support the cooperative are important factors in the '90s. Other important factors were, well-trained employees and the on-going training for technicians to meet members' needs.

At each meeting, members were presented certificates of merit for their high DHIA averages. They are as follows:

District 2: Harold Engel; Peter Miller, Ridge Star Farm; Ben Kolb, Patty-Run; Ken Frankenberger, Walmoore; and Dospatch Farm.

District 1: Gehringer Bros.; and David Wurster.

District 6: Smysers Richlawn Farm; Leonard Greek; Walk-Le Holsteins; Melvin Lehr; Wayne Myers; Robert Charles; Walnut Hill Farm; and Zirkle Holsteins.

At the District 6 meeting, Don Hushon presents award to Bonnie and Leonard Greek

PFA's Dairy Chairman Opposes Federal Regs

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — A Pennsylvania dairy leader today opposed a new regulation potentially pitting reconstituted fluid milk products against fresh milk.

Harold Shaulis, chairman of the dairy committee of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, voiced his concern in a letter to USDA, which is holding hearings on federal dairy regulations.

Shaulis, a Somerset County dairyman, stated that PFA takes "exception to the recommendation that intermarket shipments of concentrated milk and nonfat dry milk, used in reconstituted fluid milk products, be treated essentially the same as intermarket shipments of fresh milk.

"From a marketing standpoint, Pennsylvania farmers are blessed with being within close proximity to major U.S. population centers. Consumers also benefit by being able to purchase fresh Pennsylvania produced food products, including dairy products, at reasonable prices.

"Because of this fact, we find it difficult to understand how making it easier to import fluid milk in the form of a concentrated product will enhance our dairy industry," he wrote.

"At a time when much concern is being expressed about milk quality standards, what guarantees are there that the reconstituted product will mimic the fresh product?

"Since most producer milk tests at about 8.6 to 8.7 percent solids-not-fat, yet the FDA Standard of Identity for fluid milk products only requires a minimum of 8.25 percent, what would preclude a processor from providing a watered down version, thus destroying the confidence in a product which currently commands a high consumer following?"

Shaulis said that more than a million dollars was spent in Pennsylvania to promote milk and milk products, which includes the promotion logo "REAL" seal, which is used to signify that the dairy product is real, not manufactured.

It would take a lot of promotion money, he said, to explain the difference between reconstituted and fresh milk.

The USDA recommendation admits not having any marketing experience with the use of concentrated milk for fluid products.

"Since the reconstituted product will need to be labeled as such in order to price it as a Class I product under the recommended regulation, it should stand out on the shelf. However, under Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Law, minimum retail prices are set on Class I products which may or may not include reconstituted milk at the discretion of the Milk Marketing Board."

Shaulis said that pricing of reconstituted fluid products could create a nightmare for the farmer, processor and consumer.

There is no need, according to Shaulis, to have a readily available reconstituted milk product in Pennsylvania, because there is a good supply of fresh milk in the Keystone State.

He explained that he doesn't oppose dairy farmers in other parts of the country to have higher incomes, but he didn't think it should be done at the expense of Pennsylvania dairymen.

In essence, he said, it would force Class I money to be sent to other states.

Good Transplanting Crucial To Tomato Yield Results

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The most critical part of tomato production is the transplanting. Farmers who don't follow good transplanting techniques could doom their harvest from the start.

To obtain an early and productive crop, one of the first things to look for is a larger plug size. "It'll cost you a little more, but I think it's a little bit more desirable," said Dr. Dale W. Kretchman, department of horticulture at Ohio State, at the recent Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference.

Kretchman spoke to an audience of 100 tomato growers and roadside marketers about the importance of utilizing good cultural practices for maximum tomato production.

Before transplanting, some important considerations to a good, healthy crop include a leafy, solid plant; using good starter fertilizer that contains essential nutrients, especially phosphorous; and managing the soil and feed conditions throughout the plant's growing cycle.

Use starter fertilizer

"I don't think there's a person here, at least early in the season, that should not use a good starter fertilizer," said Kretchman. If using a liquid fertilizer on the transplanter, it's important that the tank materials be agitated to allow for consistent fertilizer application.

In addition, the leaves on the early plant are extremely important, Kretchman said. "Anything that happens to those leaves, anything that will remove those leaves on that early plant can reduce the yield of that crop," he said. "And so anything that we can do to keep those leaves on the plant, keep them green, keep that plant growing, is extremely critical."

Plant studies indicated that, if entirely defoliated, the young transplant can take two months to catch up to a nondefoliated plant in terms of production. Also, work with the Colorado potato beetle on defoliation shows that control of the pest is absolutely necessary to maintain good root and fruit production.

"If you don't have good roots on that plant, you're not going to get yield," said Kretchman. "I don't care what else you do, those roots are critical."

Plants hardened

Plants should be properly hardened, or "conditioned," before transplanting, said Kretchman. Conditioning of the plant can take place outdoors for 3 to 5 days before transplanting. The amount of plant sugars developed during conditions are important to plant survival.

The higher the sugar levels, the more vitality the plant will have. Also, root development takes place before flowering. "I'm quite certain there is very little root growth once those fruits start their maximum push to ripening."

Kretchman said the soils in Ohio are very high in phosphorus, but much of it is unavailable early in the season because of cool soils. It is vital that, when transplanting, an adequate amount of soluable phosphorous is added to the fertilizer mix to ensure the development of strong roots.

The phosphorous is important because it helps in the transfer of energy in the plant, to create new roots and new growth. But other factors, such as warmth, contribute to a healthy stand, because the tomato is considered a tropical plant.

Soil test essential

Soil testing is essential to determining the nutrient needs of the plant. But soil tests "do not take into account soil physical conditions, the interaction of elements, yield, or nitrogen available to the tomato plant."

But the most troublesome problem Kretchman has encountered is soil compaction. He said it doesn't matter about the spacing or sizing of tires, in his experience — that 70 tons over the soil will cause problems, and may lead to the necessity of using a subsoiler to make the soil loose. Soil conditions must be dry in order to make the subsoiler effective.

Also, soil pH is important — ideal tomato growing conditions place the pH between 6.3-6.5.

The most perplexing nutrient is nitrogen. The more anhydrous ammonia placed down, the more the pH levels are lowered. "But high rates of nitrogen use are a tremendous waste of fertilizer and a waste of money," he said. Nitrogen is necessary after root formation and the development of the first fruit. After that, the amount of nitrogen necessary depends on its availability in the soil.

No response

"We have not found, on tomato plants, any favorable response from foliar nutrients," said Kretchman. He said that tomato plants pick up material best from the soil. "And let's get it into the soil and let's keep our soil conditions good."

Growers should also make the calcium available in the soil, because it moves the wrong way in the plant "to have any benefit putting it on the foliage," said Kretchman. "Don't put it on the leaves. It goes through the roots to the fruit."

Also, soil conditions can be improved if a cover is used, such as red or white clover, before the season begins.

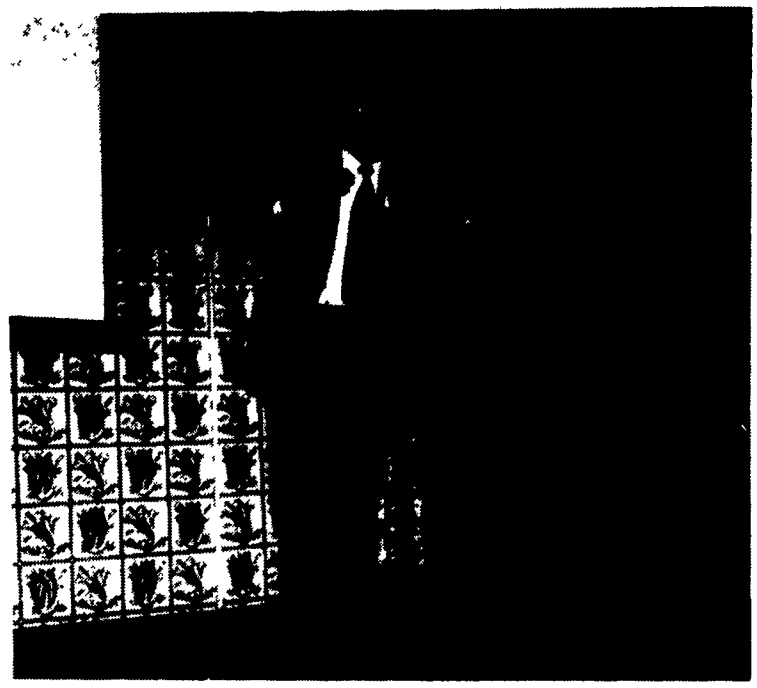
Where the plants are placed in spacing is important. The top spacing of the plant controls root growth.

New structures

Kretchman said he is concerned that many plug plant growers are using relatively new greenhouse structures. "And the new greenouse structures do not have a history of plant diseases," he said.

"And I get distured, as everybody goes into this, we're talking about 75 percent or so of our plants being produced in these greenhouse facilities, that what happens when suddenly they find that there's a few diseases that are overwintering in the greenhouses, they're staying there all year?" said Kretchman. "And we don't have any fungicides for the control of these diseases?"

In transplanting the plugs, "every little part is extremely critical," he said. "You just can't run it through. You need to watch the transplanter and see how the things are going on it, because it's a very critical time."



Dr. Dale W. Kretchman, department of horticulture at Ohio State, spoke to an audience of 100 tomato growers and roadside marketers about the importance of utilizing good cultural practices for maximum tomato production at the recent Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference.

Disease control

Work on tomato disease control undertaken at Penn State has shown some varieties that are strong under pest and other types of stresses. Dr. Alan MacNab, plant pathologist at Penn State, detailed the findings of processing tomato varieties at the conference.

Several varieties were examined for disease susceptibility and information on controls.

One of the most important factors in choosing a good variety is considering the amount of time you have to harvest. The studies considered the effects of the environment on developing fruit.

Late in the season, a host of factors combine to create a disease environment for many tomato plants. You have a pathogen, a susceptible plant, and an environment that favors it.

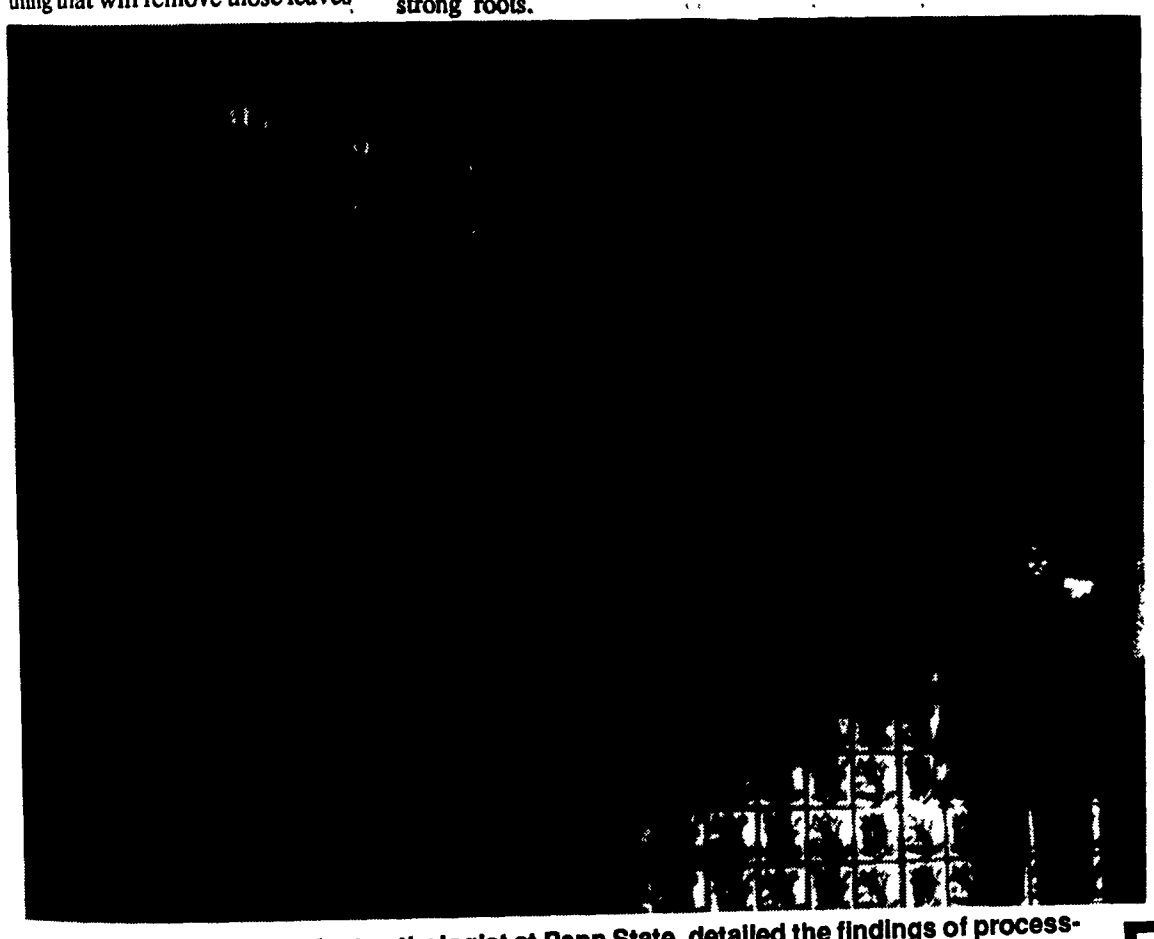
Enough time

"If you don't have enough time for the disease to develop, it won't be a factor," said MacNab. "So, late in the season, <tomatoes are> growing slowly, they're ripening slowly, and that means the time is long for a disease to develop."

MacNab said that ripening agents are also under study to decrease the amount of time the fruit is in the field and exposed to disease or insect pressure. More control is necessary for anthracnose is southeastern Pennsylvania, and work is concentrating on selecting a variety to withstand the disease.

For now, more control by the grower must be utilized.

"I think we're doing a better and better job every year of controlling our diseases, and I encourage you to keep focusing on the control," said MacNab.



Dr. Alan MacNab, plant pathologist at Penn State, detailed the findings of processing tomato varieties at the vegetable conference.

Grower Meetings Set

HICKORY (Washington Co.)—Three seminars related to soil fertilization to work in harmony with Mother Nature are scheduled for Western Pennsylvania. The are sponsored by Growers Fertilizer Solutions, Milan Ohio, under the direction of Terry Hoffman, the new district manager.

The meeting dates and places are as follows: Washington County: Tuesday, February 25; Village Green Golf Course, Rt. 18, Hickory.

Cambria County: Wednesday, February 26; Buckhorn No. 1119 Grange, Rt. 869 to Sidmon, turn left on North 160, Grange on right.

Indiana County: Thursday, February 27; Blairsville Grange, Rt 217 North. All the meetings start at 10 a.m. For more information call Hoffman at (908) 832-2214.

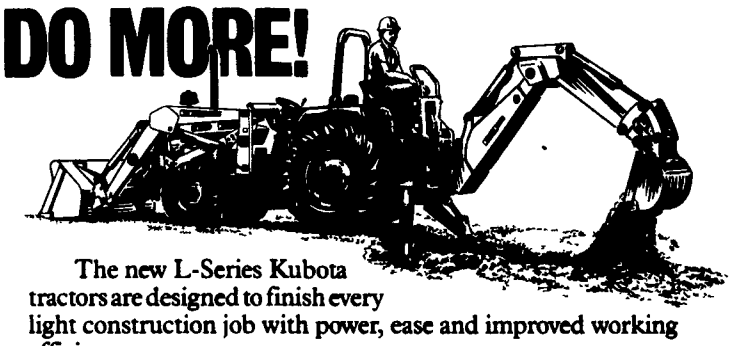
MOVE MORE LIFT MORE DO MORE!



The new L-Series Kubota tractors are designed to finish every light construction job with power, ease and improved working efficiency.

Increased front loader lifting capacities help you move more material and lift heavier loads. A powerful hydraulic system results in shorter cycle times.

You'll also be able to do more with the compact Kubota L-Series – 23-49 PTO HP, tight turning radius and 4WD. And the innovative "Ever-Clutch"– a first-of-a-kind wet clutch that doubles clutch life and even comes with its own warranty.

Demanding construction jobs demand more options. The L-Series has them, including a hefty 3-point hitch, a variety of performance matched implements and industrial tires.

Come see how much more you can do with a Kubota.

Visitors to the Cornell Beef T&R Center at Dryden are welcome. Further information on the bulls is available from Center Manager Debbie Ketchen at (607) 844-8385.

An enthusiastic, overflow crowd of beef producers greeted the speakers and topics in the educational program at the annual meeting of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association at the Corning Hilton Inn this month. The program, arranged by Dr. Danny Fox of Cornell's Animal Science Department, included Dr. Fox; Deborah Ketchen, manager of the Beef Cattle Teaching and Research Center at Harford; Dr. Don Lein, director of the Cornell's Diagnostic Laboratory, College of Veterinary Medicine; Ted Perry, IRM Coordinator, Cornell; Dr. Connee Quinn of Chadron, Nebraska; Dr. John Pollak, professor at Cornell; and Caroline Rasmussen, coordinator of the Northeast Beef Farm Business Summary Program, based at Cornell.

A small two-day trade show and breed association display was available to those attending the meeting. Breed groups represented the Shorthorn, Longhorn, Simmental, Santa Gertrudis, and Angus.

The New York Cattlewomen hosted a wine and cheese reception prior to the banquet at which Bruce B. Berven spoke. Berven is the executive director of the Beef Promotion and Research Board.

NYBCA President Fred E. Zeiner of Morris presented the President's Award to Deborah Ketchen, coordinator of the bull test program and manager of the Beef Cattle T&R Center in Harford for her contributions to the beef industry.

Shirley Brown, NYBCA secretary, Addison, received a special award from Jerry Reed, executive director of the New York Beef Industry Council for assistance in coordinating promotional material throughout the state.

Eldora Benson of Potsdam, president of the New York Cattlewomen, described their program of helping the helpless. Currently, they are providing beef products to homes for abused and battered women in 12 counties in New York State. They plan now to increase this help to homes in 20 counties. Moneys collected from a fun auction presided over by Auctioneer Willie Bolce will be directed toward this goal. Items auctioned were donated by the trade show vendors and Corning merchants.

At the business meeting of the New York Cattlewomen held on January 17, officers were re-elected. Serving during 1992 will

Alan McConnell
Poultry Products
Extension Aide
Dept. of Food Science

I grew up reading cereal boxes. So its only natural that I should read the label on a bottle of salad dressing, too. The other day I happened to notice that eggs were one of the main ingredients in our bottle of ranch-style dressing.

"Whatever for?" I thought. I hadn't seen eggs in my salad dressing in a long time — if ever. However, being a food scientist with a poultry products slant, I felt that I should be able to figure this one out.

Actually, eggs may serve several different functions in a food product, from the relatively straightforward roles of contributing flavor and nutrition, to the less obvious and less familiar roles of emulsifying, leavening (or foaming), and coagulation (gelation, binding, or thickening).

EMULSIFYING. Oil and water don't mix. Shake up a bottle of oil and water, and within a minute or two, the "mix" will have separated again. Emulsifiers, however, are natural or synthetic molecules which help to prevent this. Rather than mixing only with the water or only with the oil, emulsifiers have two ends — one end is able to mix with the water, and the other end is able to mix with the oil. In this way, emulsifiers effectively form a "link" between the watery part and the oily (or fatty) part of a food and help to keep them together.

Egg yolk and products containing egg yolk are excellent emulsifying agents. Egg yolk contains a variety of proteins and lipid molecules, such as lecithin and cholesterol, which act as emulsifying agents. Salad dressings and mayonnaise are, basically, mixtures of oil — soybean oil, corn oil, vegetable oil, etc. — and water or other ingredients that are mainly water, such as vinegar. Without emulsifiers, your jar of mayonnaise would contain an unappetizing white blob with a puddle of water on top; whole eggs, egg yolks, or other emulsifying agents help to make the mayonnaise a smooth, creamy spread instead. eggs help the milk, shortening, and other ingredients in a cake mix to blend together, and prevent the lemon juice and butter from separating in Hollandaise sauce — all because of their ability to emulsify.

FOAMING. When you whip up a puffy omelet or souffle, you are taking advantage of the foaming properties of eggs. Actually, its the egg white, or albumen, that's responsible for most of the foaming. Beating the eggs rapidly with a fork or a mixer incorporates a lot of air, and the protein molecules of the egg white link together and trap the air inside.

While many food ingredients form foams, eggs and egg products are especially good foaming agents because: they produce large volumes of foam; their foams hold together well for cooking; and they coagulate, or bond solidly together during heating to form a stable foam structure. When you think of the foaming or leavening properties of eggs, think of an angel food cake, the meringue of a lemon meringue pie, a cream puff, or a puffy souffle.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

be Eldora Benson, Potsdam, president; Elaine Swiler, Cameron, vice president; Winnie Clark, Clinton, secretary; and Jaren Miner, Honeoye Falls, treasurer.

The cattlemen's annual meeting was held on January 18 with President Fred Zeiner of Morris presiding. Reports were received from the officers and an outline of 1991 activities and programs given by Zeiner. 1992 officers elected are Fred E. Zeiner of Morris, president; Charles Boone, Westerlo, treasurer; Donald Gray, Springwater, vice president; and Shirley Brown, Addison, secretary.

Annual business meetings of the New York Beef Industry Council, New York Simmental Association and New York Charolais Association were also held. Dr. Connee Quinn of Chadron, Nebraska, spoke at the annual awards luncheon. Donald Gray, vice president, presented special awards to LaPort's Pine Restaurant of Lockport, Tom Morabito of Fulton, and Russ Mitchell of P&C Markets in Syracuse for their generous and continuing support to the youth sale of champions held during State Fair week each year.

Gray also presented awards to Ralph Porter of Waverly and Kenneth Marquis of Ithaca for their high-indexing bulls in the 1991 program. Pen banner awards went to Richard Mills of LeRoy for his Angus steers, Victor Czerwinski, Sardinia, Charolais; Michael and Judy Patton of Olean, Hereford; Larry Kramer, Cortland, Gelbvieh; and Allen and Kristine Hitchcock, Pittsford, Vt., Simmental.

The traditional honor awards, based on recommendations from members throughout the state, went to Elaine Cooper of Campbell, Youth Award, Steve Dennis of Bath, Cooperative Extension Agent of the Year; and William "Bob" Bailey of Mexico, County Director of the Year.

The Cattleman of the Year award, the Cattlemen's highest honor, was presented by President Fred Zeiner to Dr. Justin (Jake) Martin of Canandaigua for his tireless work on behalf of the beef industry.

Dairy Price Legislation Meeting Draws Crowd

MEDINA, Ohio — A crowd of more than 700 dairy farmers crowded the Fisher Auditorium of the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, Ohio, recently to discuss the recently introduced Ohio House Bill 616, which is designed to establish minimum milk prices for dairy farmers.

State Representative Sean Logan, who introduced HB 616 (known as the Ohio Fair Dairy Pricing Bill), was excited by the turnout that demonstrated the seriousness of declining milk prices, which have put severe financial burdens on dairy farmers.

"A bill of this magnitude deserves these hearings which give dairy farmers a time when their concerns can be heard," said Logan, referring to the hearings currently taking place in Columbus, "Without a strong turnout by dairy farmers at the meetings, the bill has little chance for passage."

He commented that dairy farmers have been held back for too many years, and have not been able to express their frustration with the low prices paid by milk processors. Logan urged the dairy farmers at the meeting to work together to support the bill, which can help them control the price they receive from milk processors and to write to their state legislators expressing the importance of passage to them.

Dairy farmers responded warmly to his comments. They were especially pleased when Logan said the bill would respect the independence of the individual dairy farmer. They raised their hands enthusiastically when asked if they supported the bill.

The bill will permit the Ohio Director of Agriculture and milk producers to establish a fair survival price for milk. No tax dollars will be used, The price will be a "survival floor" for the dairy farmers.

One reason why dairy farmers are supporting the bill is because although they have seen a dramatic reduction in the prices paid to them, there has not been a corresponding decline in milk prices in retailers' dairy cases.

The meeting had been called by Ohio Director of Agriculture, Fred Dailey, who said he was there to listen to hear what the dairy farmers had to say. Dairy farmer comments included, "Dairy farmers have to get a fair price. They don't have a choice in what they receive. Right now the only thing that they can do is to work hard for over-order premiums, but this still doesn't affect the price."

A Stark County dairy farmer said, "I don't want to be a millionaire. I just want to pay my bills."

Ohio State University Agricultural Economist Bob Jacobson and State Representative Ron Amstutz were also at the meeting.

In the question and answer session, one farmer asked Logan, "Why should dairy farmers in Ohio sell their milk for $1.45 less (per hundredweight) than farmers in Pennsylvania?" Logan replied that they shouldn't and this is one reason why he is proposing House Bill 616.

Jacobson addressed the subject of what the pending legislation could mean to the dairy farmers and reviewed the history of milk pricing that had been a federal policy since the 1940s. Pricing in Ohio, which includes Federal Orders 33 and 36, would raise the safety net needed to prevent more dairy farms from selling out, but would not replace federal order pricing. Jacobson also predicted that without farmers taking some constructive action, the federal blend price could dip as low as $11.50 per hundredweight over the next five years.

COAGULATION. When was the last time you "coagulated" an egg? Well, if you made fried, scrambled, poached, or boiled eggs this morning, you did just that! Coagulation is simply the conversion of the liquid egg to a solid or semisolid state. Upon heating, the structure of the protein molecules in an egg changes and the proteins bind tightly together; water is forced out of the structure, or is trapped inside.

However, this property of eggs isn't put to use only at breakfast time. Coagulated egg protein binds together food ingredients in meat loaves, casseroles, cookies and cakes, and the coagulation process is responsible for the thickening of custards and sauces. This property of eggs is difficult to duplicate with any other food ingredient.

Here's a neat little trick. The next time you drop an egg, don't despair! Sprinkle it heavily with salt, then scoop it up with a pancake turner or a broad spatula. Coagulation is usually accomplished with heat, but adding enough salt or an acid ingredient, such as vinegar or lemon juice, will start the process too.

NUTRITION. Eggs are a very good source of nutrition. They contain thirteen vitamins (all but vitamin C), and are one of the few foods that contain vitamin D. They are a well balanced source of protein; in fact, except possibly for mother's milk, eggs provide the best protein naturally available. Egg protein is a good source of the amino acids methionine, lysine, cystine, and tryptophan, all of which are in limited supply in many other major foods. Further, eggs taste good, and they are quick and easy to prepare.

Eggs have been called "the cement that holds the castle of cuisine together," and rightly so! Eggs emulsify and foam, coagulate and nourish, add flavor and color; and often, they are doing two or three of these at the same time! Start reading your labels and pay attention to your recipes; you'll be amazed at all of the places where these "behind the scenes" actors are working for you.

PUBLIC AUCTION

VERY DESIRABLE 62 ACRE FARM!

For The Leslie P. Hershner Estate of Cross Roads, York County, PA

SATURDAY, MARCH 14, 1992

10:00 A.M.

Located on Main St. within the Boro of Cross Roads, at R.D. #1, Felton, PA. From Rt. I-83 take PA Exit #1, follow Rt. 851 east to Stewartstown. Turn north onto Rt. 24 and go approx. 3 mi. to Sammis Chevrolet Sales. Turn right onto Main St. Ext'd and go approx. 1 mi. to farm on left.

Attractive and desirable farm of 62.86 acres, m/l, of level to gently rolling farmland fronting along West Main Street in the Boro of Cross Roads. Improved with a large 2½ story frame farmhouse, large bank barn, spacious garage/toolshed with overhead storage & several other outbuildings. The house features a large eat-in kitchen, living room w/bay window, and an open stairway, 4 bedrooms, and 1½ baths.

Here is a perfect Gentleman's Farm in a very convenient and attractive location. Most impressive is the extensive road frontage along both sides of West Main St. and also along Coal Hill Rd.

ZONING: Zoned "R-A" Residential-Agricultural and "A" Agricultural.

INSPECTION: Open House will be held Sunday, February 23 and March 1 from 1:00 to 4:00 P.M. For private showing. Ph. (717) 382-4379 or 845-3674.

TERMS: A down-payment of 10% of the gavel price will be required on day of auction. Balance due in-full on or before May 14, 1992. Real estate to be sold as-is, where-is. Growing crops are reserved for tenant farmer.

Measure The Performance

A & E Vogl Dairy Farm

Harrington, Delaware

Ernest and Anthony Vogl, along with Ernest's wife Cathy, operate a 128 milking cow operation in Kent County, Delaware.

Their feeding program (bunk TMR 1855 lbs. milk) consists of 56 lbs. corn silage, 4.5 lbs. alfalfa, 5 lbs. whole cotton seed, 2 lbs. shelled corn, 5.8 lbs. Purina Ultimate EXT and .3 bicarb. Purina test cow B24" is fed in barn to production.

Ernest stated, "that they started using Purina Ultimate EXT in October 1990, and he is pleased with the results. Our cows are averaging 5 lbs. more milk, increased BF, lbs. fat and their body conditioning score has improved." When asked about Purina service he replied, "Whenever I have a question or problem the Purina Dairy Specialists are here to assist."

Here are the results the Vogls have seen since they started using Purina Ultimate EXT, with a DHIA test 2 days earlier.

DHIA Test Date	Cows	RHA	BF	Lbs. Fat
10/24/90	113	18,600	3.2	603
9/23/91	126	19,298	3.4	652

Purina Mills Would Like To Thank The Vogls For Sharing Their Records With Us And We Wish Them Continued Success In The Future.
